| DSL operates over a wide spectrum. A phone line antenna will generally pick up more power line noise than a dedicated antenna, so don't expect to | use it for DX work. Nevertheless, I found that it outperformed the
| telescopic whip antennas built into many portables.

A reader sent in this suggestion: If you're concerned about connecting the phone line directly to the receiver, try wrapping the phone cord several times around the receiver's telescopic whip antenna instead. Performance may not be as good as a direct connection, but it will probably be better than the whip antenna by itself.

Someone else wrote asking about lightning protection. I haven't thought much about it because thunderstorms are rare in my area. Most phone lines have lightning arrestors on them where they enter the house, but the lightning arrestors may pass enough energy during a lightning strike damage a receiver. My suggestion is to disconnect the antenna when not in use if you experience frequent thunderstorms.

HOW TO DO IT

The simplest connection is a single capacitor between the phone line and receiver. The capacitor eliminates all phone line voltages, including | ringing, so that they will not harm the receiver. The capacitor should

N.C. = no connect. I originally connected the phone line ground (yellow wire) to this terminal, but reception was better without it (if you do this, play it safe and put a .01 uF capacitor in series). If another ground is available, you can connect it to this terminal.

If you are picking up local AM or FM radio stations on the shortwave bands, it is likely that your receiver is overloaded. Inexpensive and portable receivers usually lack the filtering needed to eliminate this interference, but you can make your own filters. Filters can also be

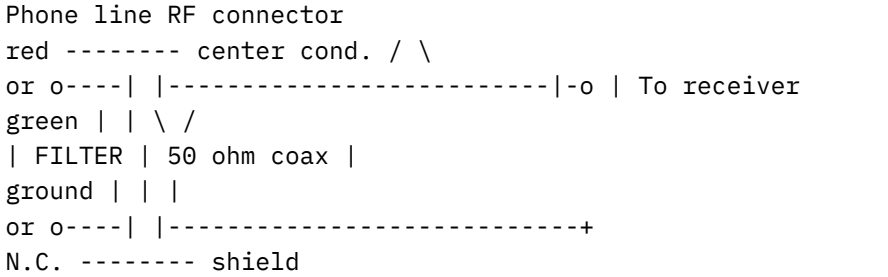
A high-pass filter can be used to remove signals below the shortwave bands. It rejects interference from local AM stations and presents a high impedance to the phone line at audio frequencies so that the phone line remains balanced.

A low-pass filter can be used to remove signals above the shortwave bands. It rejects interference from FM and TV stations, as well as VHF 2-way radio transmitters. If you use both filters, connect the output of the first filter to the input of the second (don't forget to connect their ground terminals together). It doesn't matter which filter is connected first.

These filters also work well with random wire antennas. Just connect the antenna in place of the phone line.

The filter(s) should be connected to the phone line in this manner:



| RECOMMENDED FILTERS
| If you don't want to make your own filters, the following have good | performance, are well-built and affordable:
| Model 400 BCB interference filter (3.5 MHz highpass)
| http://www.iceradioproducts.com/filtersrf.html#bcb

| Model 420 HF lowpass filter (30 MHz lowpass)
| http://www.iceradioproducts.com/filtersrf.html#3
| (scroll down a bit to see the model 420)
| If you have a random-wire antenna, the following unit will provide | impedance matching and lightning protection (connect antenna to 450-ohm | terminal):
| Model 182A beverage matching unit

FILTER PLANS

The original credit for the high-pass and low-pass filters goes to Paul Blumstein and John Shalamskas, respectively. Edited versions of their articles are included here:

From: paulb@harley.TTI.COM (Paul Blumstein)
Subject: BC Band Hi-Pass Filter

The following ascii-schematic diagram is a high pass filter that will filter out Broadcast Band (MW) stations. I found it a great boon to my shortwave listening since local MW stations overload my ATS-803A front end & appear in SW, especially with a long antenna.

If you remember my antenna saga, I went from 50 feet to 150 feet & had overload problems causing me to cut back to 50 feet. (Even at 50 feet, I still have some MW interference). I took the advice of Gary Coffman and looked up filters in the ARRL Handbook. With the filter in place, I intend to try to increase my antenna length again.

Anywho, here is the filter, for interested parties.

--------||---+----||-----+----||-----------
} }
{ {
} }
-------------+-----------+-----------------

The outer capacitors are 1500 pf ceramic disks.
The inner capacitor is 820 pf ceramic disk.
The squiggly things are coils (two total). Each one is 2.7 uh.
(a close value will do).

Subject: Re: BC Band Hi-Pass Filter

I built the filter that Paul Blumstein posted recently and measured it on a gain-phase analyzer. Here are its characteristics:

100 kHz -120dB
500 kHz -68dB

1000 kHz -38dB
1600 kHz -15dB
2100 kHz -3dB

The source and load impedances were 50 ohms. Because the filter has five elements, the attenuation is 30dB per octave. The measurements confirmed this.

Just for fun, I put 470 ohms in series with the input to see how the filter performed with an antenna mismatch. The response was:

100 kHz -105dB
500 kHz -60dB
1000 kHz -35dB
1600 kHz -15dB
2300 kHz -3dB

These figures are normalized to the passband response of -15dB, which is due to the impedance mismatch between the source and load and would have been there without the filter. Hence, the filter works almost as well in spite of the mismatch, which is good news to those who use long-wire antennas.

Subject: Construction of filters for SW reception

Several people have asked for construction details of the filters I built for my DX-440.

The high-pass filter helped some, but in my location the VHF/UHF broadcasters are also causing problems. So, I dug out the ARRL handbook and chose a 7-element Chebyshev low-pass design that is -3 dB at 35 MHz, -20 dB at 43 MHz, and -50 dB at 64 MHz (all calculated; it works well in practice!)

LOW-PASS FILTER (Rejects FM, TV, etc.)

chassis ground

I had to do a little more improvising at this point. I used .33 uH instead of .36, and .66 uH instead of .42, but it works fine.

The 5-lug terminal strips were perfect for these circuits, since there are 4 lugs plus a grounded lug. All "ground" connections go to the lug that is mounted to the chassis, and the other 4 lugs are used for each of the connections on the signal line. One terminal strip is used per filter. Since both filters were necessary to clean up the hash, I am going to put them both into one box when I get the time.

There is no difference between ends. They are "bilateral" which means you can't possibly hook them up backwards. (In the above schematics, left and right ends are interchangeable.)

COIL WINDING

You can make the coils yourself using this formula:

L = 0.2 * B^2 * N^2 / (3B + 9A + 10C)

L is the inductance, in uH
A is the length of the coil, in inches
B is the mean diameter of the coil, in inches
C is the diameter of the wire, in inches
N is the number of turns

For small wire, you can assume C = 0.

You'll get no argument from me. I'm one that believes that higher order marine mammals are intelligent, and deserve far more respect than humans give them. But, therein lies the problem: Humans. We, as a race, think that

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

THE TWO PARTIES RUN by one claque of oligarchs have nothing at all to say thatï¿½s worth hearing, but they do make a great deal of noise this time of year. In contrast, the free thinkers on the Liberty Net are not beholden to the corrupt System, are unafraid to ï¿½tell it like it is,ï¿½ and are often very much worth listening to.

Hereï¿½s just a fraction of the ideas discussed and debated on the Liberty Net this week:

ï¿½ Why is the Republican party leadership throwing Todd Akin under the bus and attacking him with such vehemence? It simply canï¿½t be his ill-informed misstatement about rape and pregnancy (for which he has apologized), since others who have said ï¿½ and done ï¿½ far worse have simply been ignored. What hidden agenda is driving the chief prostitutesï¿½ extremely hostile behavior? (21 minutes)

ï¿½ More than 358 people have been shot dead on the streets of Third World Chicago so far this year (19 on one recent day alone), but to the billionaire-controlled media this isnï¿½t a major story. Why? Because they want America to become even more Third World ï¿½ and less White ï¿½ than it already is. (38 minutes)

ï¿½ The Chinese have been spending a larger and larger proportion of their seemingly endless supply of Federal Reserve Notes on gold. What does that say about their opinion of Americaï¿½s economic future? (43 minutes)

ï¿½ The criminals in Congress have been keeping their rotten regime financially afloat by stealing from federal employeesï¿½ pension funds for years now. When that scam reaches its limit, expect private IRAs and 401k plans to be looted next, with some spurious ï¿½lawï¿½ or executive order used as a pretext. (51 minutes)

ï¿½ A judge in Texas has stated that sentiment against Fetchit (note he did not say sentiment _for_ Republicans) is so strong that there may be civil unrest if he is ostensibly re-elected. (1 hour 1 minute)

ï¿½ When you have a population of very low genetic quality, such as now obtains in New York City and other urban areas, you also need ever-increasing numbers of violent, thug-like, and lawless policemen to protect yourself from the fast-breeding criminal underclass. When

New York policemen recently shot five innocent people in an attempt to kill one suspect, Mayor Bloomberg was so brazen as to claim the victims had not actually been shot but had been ï¿½struck by falling crockery.ï¿½ (1 hour 25 minutes)

ï¿½ Are the recent unexplained seismic events detected in several US cities the result of construction of underground facilities of some kind? The Washington regime has long had such facilities to protect themselves (but not us ï¿½ and perhaps _from_ us) and it is not inconceivable that the oligarchs may be doing the same thing in preparation for a patriotic revolution. (1 hour 35 minutes)

ï¿½ Wouldnï¿½t it make for a more peaceful world if the people could somehow forbid their overlords from building these kinds of luxurious underground escape facilities? Wouldnï¿½t forcing them to share in whatever wartime fate might await the general population make the politicians and oligarchs at least somewhat less likely to be warmongers? (1 hour 48 minutes)

Remember that you can receive the Liberty Net on an open frequency around ï¿½ usually well above ï¿½ 3950 kHz every Saturday night at 10PM Eastern Time. You can also listen live on the Internet or listen at your leisure via the mp3 files posted right here at http://3950.net every week.

The complete net recording is posted at the very top of the right column (under ï¿½Liberty Net Audioï¿½) here on http://3950.net ï¿½ usually on the Sunday immediately following the net, so look for it there if youï¿½d like to listen or download after the net has signed off. The articles and summaries (like this one, found in the center column) show up around a week later.

Once again, thanks to W1WCR and all participants for making this extraordinary net possible ï¿½ and please check in!

Child porn, pedophialia, makes no difference. Simply bad genetics. He should get a DNA test and find who he's really related to.

The Ryan Medicare
Plan

Ending Medicare, Increasing Seniors' Health Care Costs

Rep. Paul Ryan's Medicare plan would end traditional Medicare and put seniors at the mercy of private insurance companies, dramatically increasing their health care costs and limiting their choice of doctors and medical care.

ENDS MEDICARE

? Seniors will be forced into private insurance plans: The plan would significantly increase seniors' out-of-pocket health care costs, put their benefits at risk and limit their access to doctors of their choice.

? False GOP claims that Medicare will still exist:
Any plan to privatize Medicare ☐ even if it offers the option to stay with traditional Medicare ☐ will effectively end the program. Health insurance companies will cherry-pick healthier enrollees and traditional Medicare will attract a less healthy pool of beneficiaries, causing the oldest, frailest seniors to pay much more in order to stay with the traditional plan that they know and like.

RAISES SENIORS' HEALTH CARE COSTS

? Increases seniors' health care costs by $6,400 starting in 2022:
According to the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office, Ryan's 2011 budget would double seniors' health costs by 2022.

? Raises Medicare eligibility from 65 to 67: The plan would raise costs for millions of Americans who would be at the mercy of private insurance companies until they reach the new eligibility age.

? Eliminates key improvements to Medicare:
Seniors would see their costs rise with the repeal of new benefits, including reopening the prescription drug doughnut hole, reinstating cost-sharing for life-saving preventive benefits and eliminating a new annual wellness visit. The plan would end new tools already successfully fighting fraud, waste and abuse, and thwart promising efforts to modernize the medical delivery system to improve quality and reduce costs for Medicare patients.

GIVES POWER BACK TO INSURANCE COMPANIES; DENIES SENIORS ACCESS TO DOCTORS OF CHOICE

? Seniors will see their options limited: Seniors will only be able to see the doctors, other health care providers and hospitals that are under contract with their insurance company. Today, Medicare allows seniors the freedom to choose their own health care providers from a broad provider network, as most physicians and hospitals participate in Medicare.

? Insurance companies can pick and choose what benefits to cover: Private insurance companies are not required to provide all of today's Medicare benefits, only those that are "actuarially equivalent" to the benefits under traditional Medicare. Bottom line: A plan could easily decide not to cover chemotherapy or other costly services, leaving some beneficiaries underinsured or burdened with expensive premiums and out-of-pocket costs.

Highlights of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
27 August - 02 September 2012

Solar activity was very low 27 and 28 August. Moderate activity was observed on 30 August as Region 1563 (S25, L=078, class/area Dso/70 on 01 September) produced the largest flare of the period, an M1 at 30/1211 UTC. Solar activity was at low levels for the remainder of the period. A C8/2f flare associated with a filament eruption in the southeast quadrant of the solar disk occurred at 31/2043 UTC. An associated CME was observed on SOHO/LASCO and STEREO A/B coronagraphs with a possible Earth-directed trajectory. Two other CMEs were observed on 02 September in STEREO A COR2 imagery beginning at 02/0409 UTC and 02/1109 UTC with potential Earth-directed components.

A greater than 10 MeV proton event (category S1-Minor) associated with the filament eruption on 31 August, began at 01/1335 UTC, reached a maximum of 60 pfu at 02/0850 UTC, and is currently above threshold.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit was at moderate levels on 27 August. Levels increased to high from 28 through 31 August. Moderate levels were observed for the remainder of the period.

Geomagnetic field activity was mostly quiet from 27 August through 01 September. Activity increased on 02 September with unsettled to active conditions observed due to an extended period of negative Bz.

Forecast of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
03 September - 29 September 2012

Solar activity is expected to be at very low to low levels with a slight chance for M-class activity through the forecast period.

The greater than 10 MeV proton event currently in progress is expected to remain above the 10 pfu threshold 03-04 September with a additional enhancements possible with CME arrivals.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit is expected to be at moderate or lower levels from 03-16 September, 21-23 September, and 27-29 September. High levels are forecast 17-20 September and 24-26 September due to coronal hole (CH) effects.

Geomagnetic field activity is expected to be as high as minor storm (G1) conditions on 03 September with anticipated effects from the 31 August CME. Residual elevated conditions ranging from unsettled to minor storm levels are expected to persist from 03-06 September due to continued transient activity in conjunction with possible CH effects. Mostly quiet conditions are expected from 08 September through 29 September with the exception of two CH periods; 14-16 September and 20-23 September, which should see unsettled to active periods.

Subject: [mwdx] Radio Saint Helena

September 3, 2012
From Paul Walker

I have been in touch with the staff down there. They have an Interim Station Manager as Gary Walters went back home to the United Kingdom.

Radio Saint Helena will be shutting down, according to Ralph. He says "Our Final Broadcast will be on the 25 December to coincide with our opening on the 25 December ’67. This will make us 45 years of broadcasting."

The AM signal on 1548Khz with 1KW will be shut off for good. As I understand it, at some point, a government funded radio station, operating on FM will launch.

Ralph tells me that the Shortwave broadcasting mast has been dismantled by Cable & Wireless, but he's talking to local ham operators to see if they can lash up something for their final broadcast so they can get on Shortwave. NO promises though.

That being said, if the Shortwave makes it on December 25th at all, it is likely to last time it will ever make it on air.

My voice was featured on the last Radio Saint Helena shortwave broadcast and even if they don't make it on SW this time, I will likely have my voice used on the local MW broadcasts.

I just thought I'd pass the word. Feel free to pass this to other DX lists and other folks who might be interested.

Here's a 10 MB mp3 audio file I recorded with the SDR-1000 last night of some ESSB operators on 3630 kHz.

It's amazing what excellent sound some of these experimenters are getting out of single sideband. For years -- decades really -- only (highly modified to broadcast standards) AM gear was getting this kind of audio quality on amateur radio. But improved techniques have really made SSB sound better than ever!

For best results, listen on a high fidelity set of speakers or headphones:

That's impressive. Frequency response is one thing. But this audio has quite good harmonic integrity. Quite rare in SSB.

Good balance and clarity.

Nicely done.

That sounds absolutely great, the intelligibility increases much more than the

Thanks. To get harmonic integrity on high fidelity SSB, everybody in the group -- and your receiver -- has be within maybe four Hz of each other. Anything more than that, if you have a good ear, and you start to notice that it doesn't sound quite right.

The SDR-1000 is just barely passable for such use, but I am planning to modify it to use a rubidium frequency standard -- then it should be within a milliHertz or two of perfect accuracy. At that point, I'll only have to worry about the other stations!

Here's a screen shot of the virtual front panel:

Great, Jan; glad it inspired you to get back on the air. I always liked good audio on amateur radio -- it allows subtlety of meaning and expression and personality to come through -- and disliked the pinched, distorted sound that was the SSB norm for a long time.

Once I get the transmit side of my station set up (I am building the audio and control interface now and I need to put up a good transmit antenna) I will be back on the air for the first time since 2000.

Hope to work you someday. Guess I'll have to put up a good low-angle radiator!

There are two noise blankers in the software, but I have never had much liking for them (or any noise blanker). They do okay with impulse noise, such as from nearby engine ignition systems, at the cost of some distortion. But thunderstorm static doesn't have a fast enough rise time to be much affected by them, in my experience.

The ANC-1 is something I'd like to try, once I save up enough pennies.

Based on what you said, I'll try some more experimentation with the two blankers in PowerSDR.

One thing I've definitely noticed: The last few decades have seen a very noticeable rise in the noise floor, particularly below 10 MHz.
I blame the proliferation of badly-filtered consumer electronic devices (which the FCC could have done something about but didn't), especially switching power supplies which, even when you can't detect the buzzies from any specific one, just generally raise the broadband hash level unless you live thousands of feet from the nearest building. Even at an isolated location, they in their tens of millions raise the hash level whenever there is any skywave propagation at all.

Oh well, at least we don't have those power line networking monstrosities they suffer from in Britain.

I didn't like the sound of SSB pressed through a 2.3 KHz bandpass filter either Kevin. With 3 KHz it was somewhat acceptable if your design cut the lower 200 Hz so the audio was from 200...3200 Hz.

With SDR an entirely new field has been opened up and AM modes could sound better than ever before. When the synchronous demodulation module is written as a subroutine, it can be active simultaneously on adjacent channels, calculate the interference caused on the channel listened to, and eliminate it. Long ago the issue was how to realize that in hardware (complicated and mostly theoretical) but in software it's perfectly doable now. Similar treatment for other types of interference. So a great opportunity to revive the AM modes.

*Kevin, WB4AIO.

The 80 meter longwire in my garden gives S9 + 40 dB for many US ham operators but the QRN is too high for comfort so I'll have to experiment with separate RX antennas (loops, small horizontal dipoles etc.) to minimize that. But once it's solved, I'll build a 6 KHz SSB TX and adapt a receiver for it. No doubt we'll have QSO.

73s,
Jan

Being part of the british "empire" the brits have been licking their rotted

So what's your point?

Ryan's plan will give seniors vouchers to use with private insurance companies.

And you seem to be showing a lack of understanding as to the reason why Medicare came into being in the first place...

...and that reason was that the private insurance companies did NOT want to insure seniors (hey, old people get sick way more often than younger people!).

So, because private insurance companies either would not touch seniors at all or charge exorbitant rates if they did, that led to the birth of Medicare.

If you're gullible enough to trust the private insurance companies, well, God bless you.

Well, you ask an obvious question. And the obvious answer is: Medicare
(the "government") actually WORKS. The private insurance companies didn't work, they dropped the ball (thus bringing Medicare into existence). So what are ya gonna trust? Something that worked or something that failed.

Finally, clown 'tard, huh?

All those funny things he's done -- saved the auto companies (thus preventing an even worse Depression), health care for the people thrown out of work due to no fault of their own, brought home about 100,000 troops from Iraq. Yup, all that funny clowning around he's done, I'm still laughin'. :-D

http://3950.net/2012/09/liberty-net-september-1-2012/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

THE NEXT BEST thing to talking face to face with another man or woman with ideas is to join in on the direct, uncensored, and free-spirited discussions on the Liberty Net, amateur radioï¿½s longest-running current events discussion net, on the air since 1974. The agendas of the money-men are exposed there, and those who initially come without understanding usually grow and learn as they share.

Hereï¿½s a very small fraction of the ideas discussed and debated during the Liberty Net this week:

ï¿½ How can the Republicans and Democrats pretend to be ï¿½investor-friendlyï¿½ when neither one of them has called for prosecuting obvious Wall Street crooks and financier con men like John Corzine? ï¿½ when, instead, they literally give them billions of taxpayer dollars? (20 minutes)

ï¿½ As bad as the criminal politicians and their oligarch bosses are, they probably couldnï¿½t get away with their scams and crimes if the American people werenï¿½t so corrupt themselves, so willing to drink at the well of stolen wealth, and so terminally dull. (39 minutes)

ï¿½ Three cheers for Ron Paul, who gave up the chance to address the nation at the Republican convention because he absolutely refuses to endorse Mitt Romney. (42 minutes)

ï¿½ Beware ï¿½freeï¿½ political ï¿½appsï¿½ for your smartphone from both the Obama and Romney camps ï¿½ some of them grab your contact lists and start harassing all your friends with political garbage from the liars. (44 minutes)

ï¿½ Thereï¿½s more evidence coming in that shows that eating chocolate can help you lower your blood pressure and reduce the risk of strokes. (48 minutes)

ï¿½ The insanity of the academic establishment when it comes to the subject of race knows no bounds: _The Annals of Behavioral Medicine_ has just published an article claiming that low birth weight among Blacks and ï¿½Latinasï¿½ can be caused by ï¿½racism.ï¿½ (58 minutes)

ï¿½ Speaking of race, a truly excellent recent film on the subject is Craig Bodekerï¿½s _A Conversation About Race_. Everyone should see it.

(1 hour 1 minute)

ï¿½ Why are White children taught that it is morally wrong to have any appreciation for ï¿½ or pride in ï¿½ or desire to preserve ï¿½ their race? (1 hour 4 minutes)

ï¿½ Corporations should not be allowed to change our immigration laws to bring in low-wage engineers and scientists from the Third World. Instead, they should fund scholarships to educate our own young people for those positions. (1 hour 15 minutes)

ï¿½ The traditional concept that it is unseemly to praise oneself seems to have gone out the window in the new non-Western, non-civilized America ï¿½ if the endless self-congratulatory speeches at the Republican convention are any indication. (1 hour 30 minutes)

Remember that you can find ï¿½ and check in to ï¿½ the Liberty Net on a clear frequency around 3950-4000 kHz LSB every Saturday night at 10PM Eastern Time, or you can listen live on the Internet at the ï¿½Liberty Net liveï¿½ links in the left column of this site ï¿½ or listen at your leisure via the mp3 files posted here at http://3950.net every week.

Thanks to W1WCR for running the Liberty Net, and thanks to all of you for checking in and making the net what it is today!

This past weekend I went to see 2016: Obamaï¿½s America, the new documentary by right-wing author Dinesh Dï¿½Souza that opened nationwide after a limited release last month. I saw it twice, in fact, in two different theaters and chatted with a few fellow movie-goers to get their impressions of the film. And even though 2016 is rife with basic factual errors and logical inconsistencies, and steps on its own anti-Obama message with moments of unintentional comedy, the faithful that the movie preaches to love it, warts and all.

The most charitable thing I can say about 2016 is that itï¿½s poorly timed. The movie argues that President Obamaï¿½s true ideology (inherited from his absentee father) is a ï¿½failed Third-World collectivismï¿½ that seeks to reduce Americaï¿½s stature in the world, as evidenced (in part) by Obamaï¿½s determination to ï¿½lower NASAï¿½s horizonsï¿½ so that it no longer exists as a symbol of American greatness. And this might be a compelling argument had NASA not just successfully deposited a Volkswagen-sized robot with a rock-vaporizing laser on the surface of Mars a few weeks ago.

Similarly, Dï¿½Souzaï¿½s film argues that this ï¿½Third-World anti-Americanï¿½ viewpoint of the presidentï¿½s leads him to be ï¿½weirdly sympathetic to Muslim jihadisï¿½ captured in Afghanistan and Pakistan. Meanwhile, outside the movie theaters, news broke this weekend of an air strike that killed a senior Taliban official in Pakistan. (The obvious counterexample, Osama bin Ladenï¿½s demise, doesnï¿½t merit mention in the film)

But again, to merely point out these untimely real-world inconsistencies is to do this movie a favor. 2016 is an outgrowth of Dï¿½Souzaï¿½s 2010 book, The Roots Of Obamaï¿½s Rage, a controversial and much-derided tome in which Dï¿½Souza laid out his hypothesis that Obamaï¿½s actions are best explained by the aforementioned ï¿½collectivistï¿½ worldview he inherited from Barack Obama Sr. As Slateï¿½s Dave Weigel pointed out after viewing the movieï¿½s July premier, some of the blatantly false and risible elements of Roots didnï¿½t make it into 2016, but thereï¿½s still plenty of nonsense to fill out an 89-minute documentary.

The first 20 minutes or so of the movie arenï¿½t actually about President Obama. Theyï¿½re about Dï¿½Souza himself. He leads us down a hurried biography of his life, starting with his birth in Mumbai, focusing heavily on his education at Dartmouth and Stanford, and moving on to his time spent working for the Reagan White House.

(Dï¿½Souza prides himself on being a die-hard Reaganite, which Iï¿½ll come back to in a moment.) The intended message is unmistakable: Dinesh Dï¿½Souza is smart. He knows his stuff. Trust what heï¿½s about to tell you, no matter how insane it might sound.

Then we ease into the crazy. Parts of the first half of the film could be described as ï¿½playful.ï¿½ Dï¿½Souza bounds from Indonesia to Hawaii to Kenya, retracing the arc of Obamaï¿½s existence and hamming it up for the camera as he learns to hula dance and climbs onto the back of a moped in Jakarta. Interspersed are segments of Dinesh Dï¿½Souza: Journalist, in which he interviews a psychologist who specializes in child abandonment and an academic who knew Obamaï¿½s mother and stepfather.

This thin veneer of competence gets completely washed away, however, when Dï¿½Souza visits the Obama family in Kenya, showing up at the home of Obamaï¿½s stepmother seeking an interview and offering three goats as payment. It doesnï¿½t go well. Dï¿½Souza and his entourage are turned down and told to leave by security personnel.

But he did manage to score an interview with one member of the extended Obama family: the presidentï¿½s half-brother George Obama. A community organizer who lives in the slums of Nairobi, George figures prominently in Dï¿½Souzaï¿½s theory, with the documentarian using him primarily as a vehicle to attack the president for not ï¿½lift[ing] a finger to help a destitute close relative.ï¿½ (George has told reporters that he chooses to live in poverty to identify with the people he tries to help.) In the interview, Dï¿½Souza asks George why he thinks his powerful brother hasnï¿½t helped him, to which George responds: ï¿½He has a family of his own. I am of older age. I can help myself.ï¿½ Dï¿½Souza tries again, desperate to get George to validate his theory of the presidentï¿½s callousness, but George wonï¿½t cooperate. ï¿½Heï¿½s got other issues to take care of,ï¿½ George says.

From there weï¿½re treated to a reenactment of Obama grieving over his fatherï¿½s grave (Obama himself provides the narration, courtesy of the Dreams from My Father audiobook), which serves as the dramatic, intellectually vacant set-up for Dï¿½Souzaï¿½s primary argument: that Obama has adopted his fatherï¿½s political and economic philosophy and is inflicting it upon America, enforcing a sort of global penance for the sins of colonialism as a way of securing his deceased fatherï¿½s love and respect. This is where things really go off the rails.

Dï¿½Souza provides us a dossier for each of ï¿½Obamaï¿½s Founding Fathers,ï¿½ drawn from the well-worn rogues gallery of intellectuals and fringe characters (Frank Marshall Davis, Bill Ayers, Jeremiah Wright, etc.), combined with the standard-issue warning that ï¿½we havenï¿½t seen the real Obama.ï¿½ He whips up some apocalyptic rhetoric about the debt, saying Obama will use it as a ï¿½weapon of mass destructionï¿½ to tank the country, and his discussion of the debt with former U.S Comptroller General David Walker is accompanied by ï¿½ and Iï¿½m being completely serious here ï¿½ high-pitched slasher-film music. (The fact that Walker also lays blame for reckless spending at the feet of George W. Bush does nothing to dampen Dï¿½Souzaï¿½s enthusiasm.)

He whacks Obama for ï¿½blockingï¿½ the Keystone pipeline (not true) while loaning ï¿½billions of dollarsï¿½ to Brazil to pursue offshore drilling (also not true). Thereï¿½s a bit of Glenn Beck-inspired paranoia as snaking thorns of red, black, and green encircle the Middle East and North Africa, forming the new ï¿½United States of Islam.ï¿½ This in turn leads to fearmongering about Iranï¿½s nuclear ambitions, and attacks on Obama for a) doing ï¿½nothingï¿½ to impede Iranï¿½s nuclear progress (not exactly true), and b) seeking to reduce nuclear stockpiles globally.

Hereï¿½s where Dï¿½Souzaï¿½s Reagan boosting comes back to bite him. The documentary attacks Obama for signing the New START Treaty with Russia, which calls for steep reductions in both countriesï¿½ nuclear stockpiles, and mocks the president for his vision of a world free of nuclear weapons. ï¿½Dreamy idea,ï¿½ Dï¿½Souza quips, sparing no sarcasm. Unmentioned is the fact that the abolition of nuclear weapons was also the stated dream ofï¿½ Ronald Reagan, who first proposed the original START Treaty with the Soviet Union. As Reagan told the nation in a January 1984 speech: ï¿½My dream is to see the day when nuclear weapons will be banished from the face of the Earth.ï¿½

So 2016 suffers a great deal from logical inconsistency and factual error, but what did the audience think? After a well-attended showing in northern Virginia I chatted with two women from Arlington, both white and above middle-age, who came to the movie having never heard of Dinesh Dï¿½Souza but wanting to know more about President Obama. ï¿½I thought it was dramatic and scary,ï¿½ said one, who thought Dï¿½Souza offered ï¿½a very reasonable explanation for whatï¿½s happening.ï¿½ They did not agree with Dï¿½Souzaï¿½s claim that Obama is ï¿½weirdly sympatheticï¿½ to jihadists, given recent news about terrorist deaths, but the message on the debt resonated with them: ï¿½When they get up in the future projections of whatï¿½s going to happen and if we continue on the road weï¿½re on, itï¿½s very scary.ï¿½

On Friday, after a sparsely attended showing Washington, I talked with Ray, a white, middle-aged DC resident who first came in contact with Dï¿½Souza through Glenn Beckï¿½s Fox News program and was plugged in to conservative commentary (he went to see the movie after reading conservative columnist Thomas Sowellï¿½s rave review). Ray thought 2016 was ï¿½very well doneï¿½ and reinforced his belief that the president is motivated by anti-colonialism, though he was slightly dubious regarding some of Dï¿½Souzaï¿½s facts. When I asked if he saw any tension between Dï¿½Souzaï¿½s attack on Obamaï¿½s rhetoric on nuclear weapons and his Reagan boosterism, Ray said: ï¿½Well, every sane person wants a world without nukes.ï¿½ And when I mentioned NASA, it was Ray who brought up the Curiosity landing. ï¿½Obama said the right things,ï¿½ after the probe touched down, Ray said, ï¿½but does he believe it? I donï¿½t know.ï¿½

And that really gets to the point of 2016. The facts, the scholarship, the logic are all secondary to reinforcing the idea that ï¿½ despite four years in office and a policy record to judge him on ï¿½ Obama is still an unknown and threatening quantity. Dï¿½Souzaï¿½s exploitation of that belief is over-the-top and galling, but thatï¿½s clearly what 2016ï¿½s target audience wants to hear.

Basically OBAMA2016 tries to convict for SINS OF THE FATHER which fails in logic. SINS OF ASSOCIATION is the second basis of the movie which fails.

Hey DD, while I appreciate your posts, could you please include a link (url) to the actual article in question, not just a vague reference to some website or the website's home page? Most of the time these websites you mention have tons of articles and I usually give up trying to find the one you're talking about. Thanks.

I don't want to be taken over by Semites or live under Islam. And Maher's provenance is more than questionable, and his personal behavior is often far beyond disgusting.

But what he said in that case is essentially correct.

By supinely agreeing to be cannon fodder for God's special pets in the Middle East, we have gotten one goddamned Hell of a lot of blood on our hands.

With all good wishes,

Kevin Alfred Strom.

Excellent.

I had a similar experience, except, instead of Dick Gregory, it was two beautiful young women who simultaneously convinced me. They were very persuasive.

An acquaintance of mine says that a man or woman can succeed in society (and even in making changes in society) and yet still be a dissident... _if_ he or she is a dissident on _one_ subject only -- not two, and certainly not ten.

In other words, in, say, Amurrica, you can question the existence of Jesus -- or doubt the veracity of the Holocaust tale -- or oppose Zionism -- or question whether human races are equal -- or oppose the eating of living beings with faces and feelings and mothers -- or question the right of a certain Holy class of people to create money out of nothing. But you will be made an outcast if you try to do more than one of these things.

And even when you limit your heresy to one topic only, you will be expected to pay repeated obeisance to the mob when it comes to all their other moronic "cherished beliefs."

Such is the nature of the herd mentality.

With all good wishes,

Kevin.

03 - 09 September 2012

Three M1 flares this week brought solar activity to moderate levels.
Region 1560 (N03, L=128, class/area=Eki/350 on 03 September) was the largest and most magnetically complex (beta-gamma-delta) of the week. It produced the first M-flare on September 6th at 0413Z before rotating around the west limb the next day. Region 1564 (S14, L=68, class/area=Esi/270 on 05 September) followed with a long-duration M1 event on September 8th at 1759Z and another on September 9th at 2236Z. None of the M1 flares were accompanied by significant radio emissions, or coronal mass ejections (CMEs).

The week began with the end of an energetic particle event. The 10 MeV proton flux was above the 10 pfu threshold on September 3rd and fell below on the 4th at 0625Z after reaching a maximum of 59 pfu three days earlier. Later, a coronal mass ejection from beyond the west limb was observed on September 8th, first visible in SOHO/LASCO C2 coronagraph imagery at 1000Z. The event that produced the CME was also believed to be responsible for a 10 MeV proton enhancement which began around 1200Z. The peak 10 MeV flux during the enhancement was 1 pfu.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit was at moderate levels on September 7th and 8th and at high levels on September 9th. The remainder of the week was at background levels.

Geomagnetic activity was propelled to major storm levels this week by the arrival of three CMEs. The first arrived at 03/1214Z when a sudden impulse of 28 nT was observed at the Boulder magnetometer.
The disturbed geomagnetic field reached minor storm levels (Kp=5, G1) by 03/1312Z, and major storm levels (Kp=6, G2) by 03/1500Z.
Conditions decreased to active levels for two periods before rising again to minor storm levels at 04/0000Z. The geomagnetic field returned to quiet to active levels until September 5th when two CMEs observed on September 2nd arrived simultaneously. An interplanetary shock was observed at the ACE spacecraft at 04/2203Z. The subsequent arrival at earth caused the magnetic field to jump to major storm levels by 05/0144Z. Kp indices then decreased one level each synoptic period until reaching Kp=2 by 05/15Z. On both September 3rd and 5th, the College, AK magnetometer recorded a period of severe storm (K=7,G3) levels. A solar sector boundary change brought active conditions for one period on the 6th, but the remainder of the week was mostly quiet.

10 September - 06 October 2012

Solar activity is expected to be low with a chance for moderate activity through the forecast period.

No proton events are expected at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit is expected to be at high levels on 10-11, 18-20 and 24-27 September.

Geomagnetic field activity is expected to be mostly quiet to unsettled. Active conditions are possible on 14-16 and 19-22 September, and again on 03-05 October associated with coronal hole high speed streams.

Well, one lovely was pursuing me and I was pursuing the other. It made for a lot of deep conversations. Both were vegetarians, and together they convinced me. That was 1976, and I have seen no reason to go back since.

Two of the most beautiful women I have ever seen before were sitting at a table in a place called the Cat's Meow on Burbon Street in the French Quarter of New Orleans. I talked to them for a few minutes. They said they are from Belgium. A few minutes ago I stepped out front to get my snail mail. My October 2012 snail mail Popular Mechanics magazine. On the front cover it says, Motown Revival. Our Six Part Plan To Renew Detroit page 54. Good Luck Detroit, you are going to need it.

It's the "old" Degen DE321, rebranded for Kaito over a year past its initial introduction. Basically a low-end DSP radio without a display or keypad; it uses "analog" tuning which basically translates to fixed digital steps advanced by a wheel instead of up/down buttons. Decent FM and SW performance, mediocre MW sensitivity due to tiny antenna. It's worth $20, for sure ... but if you're expecting performance like higher-priced DSP radios you'll ve disappointed.

Seriously, such potential future disasters are all the more reason to foster an increase of intelligence with each generation, and to maintain racial integrity.

A race with ten times the number of geniuses than we have now is far more likely to be able to come up with effective countermeasures -- or to have established colonies on other worlds -- to enable us to survive the disaster. A race absorbed in "Dancing With the Stars," burgers, ball games, and rap will be -- perhaps deservedly -- wiped out.

You are whining about Obama using a Teleprompter (tm).

Unfortunately, you seem to be forgetting that...

- EVERYONE at the Republican National Convention (except Eastwood) used a Teleprompter.

- Bush Senior used a Teleprompter.

- Bush Junior used a Teleprompter.

- Ronnie Reagan used a Teleprompter.

- EVERY president (of either party) since Eisenhower used a Teleprompter.

So, please tell us what is so shockingly different when Obama uses a Teleprompter.

That's not eugenics. Self-perpetuating family dynasties are actually a variety of anti-eugenics, though perhaps not as virulent a kind as obtains in the United States now -- in which the worst are encouraged to produce as many offspring as possible, while the best are virtually sterilized, guaranteeing a continuous decrease in intelligence and character with each succeeding generation. Such a policy also guarantees the eventual fall of civilization and the maximum of misery for our children and grandchildren during the long, slow, painful fall through a world resembling that portrayed in the movie _Idiocracy_.

As I note in this brief article

http://nationalvanguard.org/2010/11/anti-nobility/

the current "nobility" are anything but noble.

> I don't disagree that many human characteristics are inherited, but Race is not a peripheral characteristic like skin color. Some Japanese have lighter skin color than some Europeans, for example. But the darker Europeans are of the same race as the lighter, while the Japanese are a quite different race from either a genetic or evolutionary perspective. Race is subspecies. It is evolutionary branching; it is species in the making.

But you are right to say that merely avoiding mass racial mixing does not, by itself, guarantee improvement. But it _is_ a necessary condition for survival. Anything else is genocide.

> While levels of immigration here have been too high for too long,

I can't disagree with that. One thing that makes elites unaccountable, though, is their feeling, justified or unjustified, that they are a separate, "chosen," _biologically distinct_ class from those they rule.

Kinship-based societies may not be utopias (there is no utopia), but they are healthier in this regard -- and many others.

> People with influence over a culture will use that culture for their

That is the perpetual problem faced by every tribe and nation created by this most curious of imperfectly social beings, Man.

With all good wishes,

Kevin Alfred Strom.

A New America www.NewAmericaMovie.com is a documentary film that outlines the history of the Progressive movement in America over the last century. It analyzes how Progressive ideology has transformed public policy, the structures of government, and its potential impact on the country's future. An example of historical analysis contained in the film would be the argument that the Progressive ideals employed by FDR's New Deal were the cause of the Great Depression, not the solution to it.

Through interviews with Constitutional scholars, authors, historians, public policymakers, and others, it reviews the original intent of the Founders, why it is important and lays out how Progressivism is in conflict with that original intent.

As socialistworker.org admits, http://socialistworker.org/2003-2/471/471_09_Fascism.shtml
the left routinely applies the term "fascist" to any Republican political leader. In Britain The Guardian, BBC, and other liberal media pounced on purported links between the Bush family and corporations that had dealings with Nazi Germany. The fact that Prescott Bush, George W. Bush's grandfather, was a "director and shareholder" with companies that had indirect financial dealings with Germany in the 1930s would hardly seem damning, however. Much the same could be said for many other affluent individuals in America or Britain at the time. Every American today with mutual fund holdings is invested, at least indirectly, in Hugo Chavez's Venezuela. Does that make them Marxist revolutionaries?

Talk of Hitler became a lot more common during the Bush years, when it was accepted wisdom on the left that George Bush was worse than Hitler. Then there was Nancy Pelosi, who spent weeks back in 2010 complaining of the Tea Party's so-called "swastika signs" -- signs that did not signal an alliance with fascism but opposition to it. Pelosi was hardly alone in accusing the Tea Party of fascism. Marc Rubin, writing for examiner.com, referred to Tea Party members as "text book fascists." He went on to pin the neo-fascist label on Tom Tancredo, presumably because of Tancredo's concerns over illegal immigration. If those concerns make Tancredo a fascist, they would make the majority of Americans who share those concerns fascists as well. But that's pretty much how the left sees America.

The immediate response of liberals such as Chris Matthews http://www.mrc.org/biasalert/2011/20110412110017.aspx to the Ryan "Path to Prosperity" was to characterize it as a killer not just of babies and old people but of "half the people who watch this show." This attempt to portray the GOP plan as genocidal is just another example of the fascist rhetoric. It appears that Matthews is attempting to portray the Ryan plan as some sort of Final Solution.

It's not just loose cannons on MSNBC who resort to fascist innuendo. Obama's speechwriters are good at crafting sinister suggestions even without using the "F" word. Obama's budget speech of April 13 actually set the tone for the current debate. With Rep. Ryan sitting on the front row, Obama lectured his audience that the GOP plan would kick "someone's grandparents" out of nursing homes and cause children with autism and Down's syndrome to "fend for themselves." It is well known that Hitler sent legions of the disabled to concentration camps to be gassed, but the suggestion that a plan to actually save Medicare and Medicaid resembles the Holocaust, if that is what Obama intended, is repellent. It was one more proof, as if we needed any more, of a fatal weakness in the character of this President. He is a man whose entire existence is devoted to gutter politics. For such a man, statesmanship and dignified leadership are inconceivable.

The plain truth is that America can no longer afford this sort of reckless partisanship on the part of the chief executive. The fact that Obama disagrees with Rep. Ryan's budget plan does not justify accusations of killing sick children or tossing old folks out on the street. That kind of rhetoric may pass for wit in the sixth grade, but it is juvenile coming from the President.

"It is obvious what the fraudulent issue of fascism versus communism accomplishes: it sets up, as opposites, two variants of the same political system; it eliminates the possibility of considering capitalism; it switches the choice of “Freedom or dictatorship?” into “Which kind of dictatorship?”—thus establishing dictatorship as an inevitable fact and offering only a choice of rulers. The choice—according to the proponents of that fraud—is: a dictatorship of the rich (fascism) or a dictatorship of the poor (communism)."

"That fraud collapsed in the 1940’s, in the aftermath of World War II. It is too obvious, too easily demonstrable that fascism and communism are not two opposites, but two rival gangs fighting over the same territory—that both are variants of statism, based on the collectivist principle that man is the rightless slave of the state—that both are socialistic, in theory, in practice, and in the explicit statements of their leaders—that under both systems, the poor are enslaved and the rich are expropriated in favor of a ruling clique—that fascism is not the product of the political “right,” but of the “left”—that the basic issue is not “rich versus poor,” but man versus the state, or: individual rights versus totalitarian government—which means: capitalism versus socialism."

"Just as the Left was drawn to the communist killing machines of Lenin, Stalin, Mao, Pol Pot, and Castro, so too it is now attracted to radical Islam."

"The contempt that German Hitlerytes had for "Bolshevism" or "marxist Jews" generally should also not mislead us in assessing the similarity between National Socialism and Communism. Leftist sects are very prone to rivalry, dissension, schism and hatred of one-another. One has only to think of the Bolsheviks versus the Mensheviks, Stalin versus Trotsky, China versus the Soviet Union etc. Similarity does not preclude rivalry. Hitler and Stalin were literally brothers in arms BEFORE they became rivals. That socialist brothers sometimes fall out should not prevent us from noting the brotherhood concerned."

"This doctrine was not the work of Karl Marx. It had been developed long before Marx entered the scene. Its most successful propagators were not the Marxian authors, but such men as Carlyle and Ruskin, the British Fabians, the German professors and the American Institutionalists. And it is a very significant fact that the correctness of this dogma was contested only by a few economists who were very soon silenced and barred from access to the universities, the press, the leadership of political parties and, first of all, public office. Public opinion by and large accepted the condemnation of capitalism without any reservation."

"The term 'planning' is mostly used as a synonym for socialism, communism, and authoritarian and totalitarian economic management. Sometimes only the German pattern of socialism-Zwangswirtschaft-is called planning, while the term socialism proper is reserved for the Russian pattern of outright socialization and bureaucratic operation of all plants, shops, and farms. At any rate, planning in this sense means all-around planning by the government and enforcement of these plans by the police power. Planning in this sense means full government control of business. It is the antithesis of free enterprise, private initiative, private ownership of the means of production, market economy, and the price system. Planning and capitalism are utterly incompatible. Within a system of planning production is conducted according to the government's orders, not according to the plans of capitalists and entrepreneurs eager to profit by best filling the wants of the consumers.

"But the term planning is also used in a second sense. Lord Keynes, Sir William Beveridge, Professor Hansen, and many other eminent men assert that they do not want to substitute totalitarian slavery for freedom. They declare that they are planing for a free society. They recommend a third system, which, as they say, is as far from socialism as it is from capitalism, which, as a third solution of the problem of society's economic organization, stands midway between the two other systems, and while retaining the advantages of both, avoids the disadvantages inherent in each.

"These self-styled progressives are certainly mistaken when they pretend that their proposals are new and unheard of. The idea of this third solution is very old indeed, and the French have long since baptized it with a pertinent name; they call it interventionism. Hardly anybody can doubt that history will link the idea of social security, more closely than with the American New Deal and with Sir William Beveridge, with the memory of Bismarck whom our fathers did not precisely describe as a liberal. All the essential ideas of present-day interventionist progressivism were neatly expounded by the supreme brain-trusters of imperial Germany, Professors Schmoller and Wagner, who at the same time urged their Kaiser to invade and to conquer the Americas. Far be it from me to condemn any idea only on account of its not being new. But as the progressives slander all their opponents as old-fashioned, orthodox, and reactionary, it is expedient to observe that it would be more appropriate to speak of the clash of two orthodoxies; the Bismarck orthodoxy versus the Jefferson orthodoxy.

The origins of the modern left can be traced back to the famous passage in Rousseau's Discourse on the Origin and Foundations of Inequality, in which he condemned the institution of private property:

"The first man, who after enclosing a piece of ground, took it into his head to say, 'this is mine,' and found people simple enough to believe him, was the real founder of civil society."

Added Rousseau: "How many crimes, how many wars, how many murders, how many misfortunes and horrors, would that man have saved the human species, who pulling up the stakes or filling up the ditches should have cried to his fellows: Beware of listening to this impostor; you are lost, if you forget that the fruits of the earth belong equally to us all, and the earth itself to nobody!"

Around the 1830s, a faction of French liberals gravitated toward Romanticism and the philosophy of the late Rousseau, proclaiming that capitalism, private property, and the increasing complexity of modern society were agents of moral decay -- both for the individual and for society at large. This is essentially the worldview that has made its way, through history, into the collective mind of the modern left; it is a worldview calling for a revolution that not only will topple the existing capitalist order and punish its corrupt leaders, but that also will replace that order with a socialist regime where the utopian ideals of perfect justice and equality will reign. Such an ambition can be put into effect only by a totalitarian state with the authority to micromanage every facet of human life, precisely the end-point toward which the policies and crusades of the modern left are directed.

When the term "liberalism" (from the Latin word liberalis, meaning "pertaining to a free man") first emerged in the early 1800s, its hallmarks were a belief in individual rights, the rule of law, limited government, private property, and laissez faire economics. These would remain the defining characteristics of liberalism throughout the liberal epoch (generally identified as the period of 1815-1914). Yet the modern left, which portrays itself as the agent of enlightened commitment to "liberal" causes, in fact stands for the antithesis of each of the foregoing liberal ideals. Contrary to its self-definition, the left is neither "liberal" nor "progressive," but rather a reactionary force that seeks to resurrect the traditions that characterized the epoch which preceded the rise of classical liberalism.

The following is from The World Book Encyclopedia, 1947 edition:
The chief characteristics of Fascism are as follows:

THE CULTIVATION OF IGNORANCE

Fascism, like all forms of government, rests firmly on the sincere consent of a large part of the population... To maintain this consent, the Fascist leadership must cut off the people from any information which might cause them to doubt the complete correctness of the fixed Fascist principles... All forms of communication are carefully censored, so that the public will receive only those facts that the dictators want known... Travel to other countries must be controlled, and freedom of speech and assembly must be rigorously suppressed...

THE POLICE STATE

Fascism depends upon the police to crush all opposition or dissent. Secret police spy on the whole population, and any casual remark against the regime leads to swift and severe punishment... Opposition parties are dissolved. Intellectual, athletic and recreational organizations are usually brought under the control of the Fascist authority... The ruthlessness of the police gradually becomes less noticeable... This is because within a year or so after a Fascist government takes power, vigorous opponents of the regime have either left the country, been killed or jailed...

EXTREME NATIONALISM

Fascism is highly nationalistic... It tries to identify its principles with the country, so that disagreement will look like treason... Some other country, or some group within the country, is chosen to serve as the "enemy" and made to appear as the cause of all evils or misfortunes... For example, the Nazis in Germany represented their movement first as a crusade against the Jews, then as a fight against Communism and later as a struggle against the "attacks" from whatever neighboring country they wished to subdue or occupy... Extreme nationalism often becomes a kind of racial fanaticism... Sometimes it combines racial and religious bigotry...

When you hear the Liberal Fascist JackAss propaganda that THEY are the true patriots then you know the time is near. Look for it from the socialist Labor Unions such as the SEIU!
http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/groupProfile.asp?grpid=6535

MILITARISM

Fascism maintains among the people a permanently warlike frame of mind... Every citizen feels that he is mobilized against enemies of the regime from within, and against possible foreign foes... The dictator usually comes to power during a period of economic crisis or depression... He relieves the depression partly by employing many people in the making of armaments... To justify this procedure, he must convince the people that the country is threatened, and must point toward some of the enemies against whom the armaments may be needed...

but upon careful examination "THE CONSERVATIVES" feeble attempts at confusion and dishonesty does not stand up to the light. they live in a counter-factual universe, the product of the hermetically sealed "CONSERVATIVE" subculture. Trying to see the world through the lens of
"THE CONSERVATIVE", is like looking at a fun-house mirror; everything’s backwards and distorted.

"THE CONSERVATIVES" world view is flawed because its based upon a small and particularly rosy sliver of reality. To preserve that world view, "THE CONSERVATIVES" believe that people had morally earned their “just” desserts, and had to ignore those whining liberals who tried to point out that the world didn’t actually work that way. I think this shows why "THE CONSERVATIVES" put so much effort into “creat[ing] their own reality,” into fostering distrust of liberals, experts, scientists, and academics, and why they won’t let a campaign “be dictated by fact-checkers” (as a Romney pollster put it). It explains why study after study shows that avid consumers of "THE CONSERVATIVE"- oriented media are more poorly informed than people who use other news sources or don’t bother to follow the news at all.

Personally, I'd go with the R-4B receiver myself, much better audio.

Do -I- get it? You seem to be suffering from selective memory fading, so let me refresh your memory for you.

When you say "Without someone elses words, he's lost", you could be referring to George W. Bush.

W was notorious for his fumbling, bumbling extemporaneous speaking -- so much so that three, count 'em

T-H-R-E-E, entire books were written about his public speaking blunders (and the book authors have the newsreels to back up everything they say).

Even though you don't want to hear it, the current president is an infinitely better speaker, with or without a Teleprompter, than W ever was.

And I find it quite hypocritical of you that I don't recall you whining about W's lack of public speaking "skills".

> Get it now?

The question is, do YOU get it now.

Experimenters justified the torture of 30 cats per year not by saying that the torture would lead to improvements in human health but rather by stating that they need to "keep up a productive publication record that ensures our constant funding." Your tax dollars at work - hundreds of millions $$$ per year to the useless eggheads in Universities throughout the nation. Corporate welfare at its worse.

I hope their Green Bay Packers, Wisconsin Badgers, Milwaukee Brewers and every other bread & circus teams in the state of Wisconsin lose every game they play. That, after all, is really the only thing that the idiots there care about.

Karma is a bitch and she is off to a good start. Packers lost their first game, U of Wisconsin got the shit kicked out of them by Oregon
St. and the Milwaukee Brewers sucked all season as will the Bucks.

Give a thumbs up to Double Trouble every time you see one of their

Oh, I agree that he speaks well, it is merely that what he does speak is pure crap.

There are lots of folks like that, mostly liberals. They got a good rap going, but it is all pure crap.

Yup, saving the auto companies from failing and causing a greater Depression than we already are in, providing health care for millions who lost their jobs thanks to Wall Street corruption and bringing home around 100,000 of our troops from Iraq and you call it "all pure crap".

Right. You betcha. Can't argue with reasoning like that.

Those measures appear to be mostly smoke and mirrors. GM is still in the hole, and digging deeper, with now an estimated $49k/car losses on the Volt, and billions in debt to both the government and the banks. Chrysler is now the silent half of Fiat, the way it was the silent half of Daimler, with dwindling sales, and its own debts. And Fiat, looking for a return to the American market, has found that it's hot, new 500 series, which are actually pretty fun little cars, are not selling in anywhere near the numbers expected, because of public disdain for the force-feeding of Chrysler to the Italians.

Only Ford is doing well. And it was healthy without Obama's intrusion.

The hard truth is, that had GM declared and let the market handle things, because there are systems in place for handling a major bankruptcy, GM would shut down for about 2 weeks, while the assets were acquired by another entity, likely Toyota, which had been maneuvering to take over GM for nearly a decade. Once aquired, GM would have been rebooted under the Japanese model, and production would have resumed, with a healthier business model, and no government debt.

2 weeks. And it would have been back to business.

As it is, GM's demise has only been postponed. Again.

Chrysler, had it been allowed to declare, would have similarly been acquired by another entity, likely private equity, or acquisition by Ford, which had been maneuvering that way for a while, and 2 weeks, things would have been up and running under another, healthier model.

As it is, Chrysler has sustained decades to come of damaged image, in the American marketplace, and it's still saddled with billions in debt.

Also, only a matter of time before Chrysler collapses again.

> and causing a greater > Depression than we already are in,

Which, like FDR before him, Obama has managed to do quite handily.

> providing health care for millions

And GAO is reporting that those 'millions' are not only not as many as we'd been told, but that their new 'coverage' isn't exactly what they thought it would be, either.

> and bringing home
> around 100,000 of our troops from Iraq and you call it "all pure crap".

The question is: How many thousands of troops will be there indefinitely? Keep in mind, we were only supposed to be in Korea for a few months. And how long have we been in Germany?

Yes, he called it correctly: pure crap.

I think we're all getting that you don't exactly have G. W. Bush on your Christmas list.

The question is...why do you keep looking into the past for your arguments? Bush has been out of office, and the public eye for nearly 4 years, now.

You might blame him for his hand in things when he was in office, but someone else has been in the big chair for a term, now. He deserves the blame for what's failed under his watch.

This is the most oppressive state I've ever lived in.

Aside from that, here in Wisconsin they kill anything that moves.

Madison and its surroundings is Little Kremlin, especially with the creeps

No. Except that having Fetchit, as an nearly-open opponent of everything the Old America stood for, as front man for the oligarchs is a tiny smidgen more honest and upfront.

Bush never got blamed for anything that happened on his watch. It was always Clinton's fault. Obama gets all the blame for the inherited costs of Bush's giveaways, Bush's tax cuts, Bush's corporate welfare and Bush's wars and not only is no one is ever allowed to blame Bush for anything, but no one is allowed to so much as suggest that Mittens intends to go back to the exact same failed policies.

 The one exception to the rule is the 2008 global economic meltdown, which cost untold trillions, turned the banking and financial sectors into wards of the state, crashed the housing market, led to massive corporate bailouts, wrecked the bond market, froze the loan market, nearly destroyed the economies of Spain, Iceland and Greece and still reverberates to this day. That wasn't blamed on Clinton. That was all Barney Frank's fault.

Remember, Eisenhower declared Berlin to be merely a "prestige objective" and cancelled plans to airdrop the 82nd Airborne onto Tempelhof Airfield, leaving the taking of Berlin to our Soviet allies. As far as Knight's "bronze stars", they actually were "battle stars" awarded for campaign participation and added to the European-African-Middle Eastern Theater Medal (EAM). My father, who served with Third Army as a Machine Gunner T/5, had five battle stars for his EAM medal. This is not taking anything away from the late Mr. Knight. But battle stars did not signify any particular individual act of bravery or conspicuous gallantry under fire, those acts were rewarded by medals such as the Soldier's Medal, the Bronze Star (first awarded in 1944) or the Silver Star and, of course, higher awards, such as the Distinguished Service Medal, Distinguished Service Cross and Medal of Honor. Of the various obits, including those in the entertainment business (of which I work) I checked, I find no mention of any particular awards for gallantry, although it is is possible he did earn some. As an aside, another guest star, the late Neville Brand, was in fact the fifth most decorated soldier in the Army during the war. I will file the lame excuses right next to Rush Limbaugh's "I
and Cock Cheney's "I wanted to serve but I just had better things to do". Total public relations tripe served up to placate simpletons in need of idols.

From Cecil Adams:
" Wayne obtained 3-A status, "deferred for [family] dependency reasons." He told friends he'd enlist after he made just one or two more movies.
The real question is why he never did so. Wayne cranked out thirteen movies during the war, many with war-related themes. Most of the films were enormously successful and within a short time the Duke was one of America's most popular stars. His bankability now firmly established, he could have joined the military, secure in the knowledge that Hollywood would welcome him back later. He even made a half-hearted effort to sign up, sending in the paperwork to enlist in the naval photography unit commanded by a good friend, director John Ford.

But he didn't follow through. Nobody really knows why; Wayne didn't like to talk about it. A guy who prided himself on doing his own stunts, he doesn't seem to have lacked physical courage. One suspects he just found it was a lot more fun being a Hollywood hero than the real kind. Many movie star-soldiers had enlisted in the first flush of patriotism after Pearl Harbor. As the war ground on, slogging it out in the trenches seemed a lot less exciting. The movies, on the other hand, had put Wayne well on the way to becoming a legend. "Wayne increasingly came to embody the American fighting man," Wills writes.
In late 1943 and early 1944 he entertained the troops in the Pacific theater as part of a USO tour. An intelligence bigshot asked him to give his impression of Douglas MacArthur. He was fawned over by the press when he got back. Meanwhile, he was having a torrid affair with a beautiful Mexican woman. How could military service compare with that?

In 1944, Wayne received a 2-A classification, "deferred in support of [the] national . . . interest." A month later the Selective Service decided to revoke many previous deferments and reclassified him 1-A.
But Wayne's studio appealed and got his 2-A status reinstated until after the war ended.

People who knew Wayne say he felt bad about not having served. (During the war he'd gotten into a few fights with servicemen who wondered why he wasn't in uniform.) Some think his guilty conscience was one reason he became such a superpatriot later. The fact remains that the man who came to symbolize American patriotism and pride had a chance to do more than just act the part, and he let it pass."

— Cecil Adams

When the ethnically-distinct oligarchs get your son to fight, they don't just hold his coat.

They steal his coat and then try and sell it back to you.

"After all," they say in wheedling tones, "it looks much better than that body bag, doesn't it?"

"Coat," as I use it here, is a metaphor for all that the world's wealthiest and most ethnocentric group have stolen from us: our history (by distorting our media and educational system); our jobs (by their "free trade" and immigration policies, which force many young Americans to join the military just to eat); our pride (by the anti-White, anti-Western Political Correctness they have imposed); our wealth (by their banking and foreign aid scams); our land (by their promotion of the Third World invasion); and our very lives themselves (by the endless wars for Israel they command us to fight).

Of course, they'd never _really_ sell us back those things at any price -- since they want to kill us.

But they do sell us a fake pasteboard version of them, so that we will _think_ that we have a choice -- and a chance -- as we march contentedly onward to the slaughterhouse. Ladies and gentlemen, may I present Fox News and the Republican party.

Honor bright,

Kevin Alfred Strom.

Boy George Bush started it when the oligarchs decided to start it. And Fetchit ended it when the oligarchs decided to end it -- meanwhile starting or escalating a couple more wars, exactly as his masters ordered him to do.

And Rob-me would be no different. He's already trying to impress the real powers in this now-evil country by expressing his enthusiasm for slaughtering innocent Iranians and others.

Your point about chickenhawks is valid.

But I think it's also important to point out that World war 2 was just another war for the money-men, the ostensible objectives of which at total variance from its real objectives, and into which the United States was inveigled by treason and trickery:

Sheldon Adelson and the Koch brothers seem to think there's a few hundred

Wall Street and the Cost of Forgetting
Posted: 09/14/2012 5:43 pm

Wall Street wants America to forget September 15, 2008.
That's because outside events of violence, few dates have signified more calamity than this fateful day. On that black Monday, Lehman Brothers Holdings Inc. declared bankruptcy. This legal action revealed the rotten core of the world's financial industry. Reckless mortgage lending motivated by the bonus-driven securitization business left Americans with $700 billion in collective mortgage debt beyond the lost market value of their homes. Consumers swamped by this debt cut other spending, factories were closed and layoffs were forced, leading to still less consumer spending -- a vicious cycle that became the Great Recession.

Congressional and White House investigations, books, movies and even songs have explored the financial crash of 2008 and the resulting economic mayhem. The latest damage tally comes from Better Markets: $12.8 trillion lost in estimated actual and avoided GDP, 26 million lost Americans jobs, $19 trillion lost in household wealth. For context, if you received $100,000 every second of every hour of every day, it would take three years to amass $1 trillion.

Less quantifiable are the darkened futures of college graduates, eviscerated philanthropies less able to fund worthy efforts such as finding climate change solutions, or the spike in incidences of mental illness.

Wall Street wants America to forget September 15, 2008, because its captains and lieutenants earn billions in personal lucre from the risky, speculative and intentionally complex financial activities that led to the crash. Brilliant minds have replaced the 3-5-3 bankers (pay depositors 3 percent, loan at 5 percent and hit the golf course at 3 p.m.) And these Wall Street wizards have made credit more expensive and dangerous under the misrepresentation of "innovation." Four years after its Chapter 11 filing, the absurd complexity of Lehman's dealings, with 150,000 open derivatives transactions at the time of bankruptcy, laid bare the casino nature of the nation's fourth largest investment bank.

Wall Street apologists tell another story about the cause of the crash: Un-creditworthy home buyers lied on their loan applications, securing funds that both inflated housing prices generally and which they couldn't pay back except by flipping into an ever escalating market. Really? Low-wage workers snuck $700 billion by the brightest minds of Wall Street?

On top of this self-serving fantasy, Wall Street proffers an even bolder fairy tale about the burden of the critical Wall Street reforms passed into law in 2010. Industry's congressional friends claim that the Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act discourages lenders from loaning to worthy businesses. That means they can't hire workers, prolonging our economic malaise. Really? What about those consumers buried in mortgage debt and unable to buy what business is selling?

Another new report from the International Monetary Fund and co-authored by Brookings Institute scholar Douglas Elliot drives a stake through this zombie argument. The new Dodd-Frank law will increase lending rates by an amount as small as the smallest adjustment made in Federal Reserve lending rates. Dwell on this: The cost of preventing another $20 trillion-$40 trillion financial crash can be financed with the smallest of decreases in Federal Reserve lending rates.

Remember September 15, 2008, and the regulations we need put in place to protect us from a recurrence. Your job, your retirement savings, even your psyche may depend on it.

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

SINCE WEï¿½VE STARTED communicating via the Internet, weï¿½ve noticed that interest in the Liberty Net isnï¿½t limited to North America. Weï¿½ve had listeners and correspondents from all over the world, from South America to Arctic Canada, from Norway and Italy to Japan, Malaysia, Australia, and Oceania. Uncensored ideas and free speech are interesting and infectious ï¿½ and you wonï¿½t find them on the controlled (and mostly boring and moronic) ï¿½mainstreamï¿½ media.

Hereï¿½s a tiny sampling of the ideas brought to light during the latest session of the Liberty Net:

ï¿½ When the oligarchsï¿½ junior front man Joe Biden went to Third World Detroit recently soliciting votes, his vehicle was stolen. The same thing had happened earlier to Jesse Jackson ï¿½ and to Detroitï¿½s own mayor, too. (18 minutes)

ï¿½ An Egyptian immigrant in Michigan who is apparently of overwhelmingly sub-Saharan African descent has demanded, quite rationally, that the government classify him as Black. But the Washington regime insists that he be considered White. The regime also falsely ï¿½ and purposely ï¿½ categorizes all Arabs and Latinos as White in crime statistics. (20 minutes)

ï¿½ Why do the phony leaders of the phony ï¿½womenï¿½s movementï¿½ say almost nothing about the mass immigration of non-Westerners who mutilate female children and treat women like slaves? Could it be because these leadersï¿½ actual agenda is genocide against Whites, and has nothing to do with caring about women? (40 minutes)

ï¿½ Officials in Detroit have been trying to slow down the mass burning of houses on so-called ï¿½Deviliï¿½s Nightï¿½ there. Their technique? ï¿½ close all the gas stations on that day. (54 minutes)

ï¿½ Why are quasi-public agencies like Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac allowed to make political contributions to politicians in return for ï¿½sweetheartï¿½ regulations that allow them to defraud millions of people? Could it be that they, like the misnamed Fed, are just fronts for the same money-men whoï¿½ve been raping us for a century? (1 hour 10 minutes)

ï¿½ Clint Eastwood has done some measure of truth-telling now that heï¿½s reached old age: At the recent Republican convention, he dared ï¿½ unlike the party leadership ï¿½ to call Obama the biggest fraud ever to infest the White House, thereby calling into question the legitimacy of the entire Washington regime. And his amazing film from a few years ago, _Changeling_ ï¿½ which should be required viewing for brain-dead conservatives who think the police are always right ï¿½ is now approaching million-seller status. (1 hour 15 minutes)

ï¿½ After one of the most massive financial collapses in our nationï¿½s history, precipitated by extremely well-documented banking and lending frauds beyond anything ever seen before on planet Earth, why has not a single involved fraudster been charged with a crime? (1 hour 28 minutes)

ï¿½ Would having an elected Attorney General solve the problem of a criminal President being protected by a criminal Justice Department? (1 hour 33 minutes)

ï¿½ Why has Apple developed and patented a new technology that allows companies and governments to disable your cell telephone ï¿½based on your locationï¿½? Imagine a protest group suddenly deprived of their ability to communicate with each other and unable to show government, police, or corporate wrongdoing via photos or video. (1 hour 39 minutes)

You can find the Liberty Net on 75 meters, almost always somewhere between 3950 and 3999 kHz SSB, every Saturday night at 10PM Eastern Time. Please check in, and also listen and interact live on the Internet every week ï¿½ see the two ï¿½Liberty Net liveï¿½ links in the left column of this site. The full audio files are usually posted to our archive on the Sunday morning following the net ï¿½ youï¿½ll always see the latest file near the top of the right column ï¿½ just click to listen or download.

Thanks to W1WCR for running the Liberty Net for over three decades!

Highlights of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
10 - 16 September 2012

Solar activity was at low levels during the first half of the of the summary period, and ended the week at very low levels. Region 1569 (S12, L=296, class/area=Eac/210 on 14 September) was the largest and most magnetically complex region of the period, yet only yielded four C-class flares. The largest of these was a C3/Sf flare that occurred at 11/0111Z. A filament eruption occurred near N22W20 at approximately 13/0640Z. The associated CME had an estimated speed of 536 km/s, but had little to no impact on Earth. A Type II Radio Sweep occurred at approximately 15/2259Z, had an estimated speed of 681 km/s, and was associated with a non-Earth directed CME near the north west limb.

No proton events were observed at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit was at high levels on 10 and 12 September. Moderate levels were observed on 11 September and again from 13 - 16 September.

The geomagnetic field was at quiet levels throughout the period with two isolated unsettled periods on 12 September and 15 September due to extended periods of negative Bz. A solar sector boundary crossing was also observed at approximately 16/1800Z.

Forecast of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
17 September - 13 October 2012

Solar activity is expected to be at very low to low levels with a chance for moderate activity throughout the forecast period.

No proton events are expected at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit is expected to be at high levels on 18-20 and 24-27 September, then again from 07-09 October.

Geomagnetic field activity is expected to be quiet to unsettled with active conditions possible on 19-22 September, 03-05, 09-10, and 12-13 October. The active conditions are mainly associated with coronal hole high speed streams.

Indeed. I've been a life long fan of H.L. Mencken. Does anyone even know the name anymore? He seems to have been banished from the circles of academia. His ability to completely eviscerate someone or something in one sentence is non pareil; "two-thirds of the native-born Communists that I have encountered are so plainly mashuggah that it would be flattery to call them stupid."

Thanks for posting the link to the article - outstanding!

For comedy, I Was a Communist For the FBI would be very difficult to top in my book. Also, if I had the list to do over I would replace The Whistler with Fort Laramie featuring Raymond Burr. He was outstanding as was the writing.

My name is Christine and I am going to join CRI's Indonesian language department next month. In the mean time, I have applied to occupy a room in the media center apartment which has not been confirmed so far. I was really hoping to get information about rooms that might be available for me to rent. Your information will be highly appreciated. Thanking you in advance.

Looking forward to meeting you all soon

Well, his hilarious destruction of the rather stupid "cherished beliefs" of the majority has made him very unpopular among those who would manipulate the population through those beliefs.

He is remembered by what remains of the Sunpapers only in a rather attenuated, selective form. Not much worth reading there anymore.

But there are those who truly honor his memory. The revived American Mercury dares to go into very controversial territory, http://theamericanmercury.org/

as does the H.L. Mencken Club:

You're welcome.

Another great wit (and great radio voice) is Orson Welles. Few these days have heard his very funny 1972 radio production, _The Begatting of the President_, which satirized American politics in mock-Biblical style:

Mitt Romney's 47 Percent Disproportionately Live In Republican States

Brett LoGiurato | Sep. 18, 2012, 9:01 AM | 21,798 | 44

Share on Tumblr

In leaked comments from a private fundraiser that have caused quite the stir over the past 18 hours, Mitt Romney perpetuates the popular conservative meme that 47 percent of Americans do not pay any income tax.

Here's what Romney said in the footage published Monday by the liberal magazine Mother Jones:

"All right, there are 47 percent who are with him, who are dependent on government, who believe they are victims, who believe the government has a responsibility to care for them, who believe that they are entitled to health care, to food, to housing, to you name it. That's an entitlement. And that government should give it to them. And they will vote for this president no matter what These are people who pay no income tax."

The surprising thing about Romney's statement, though, is where the non-income tax filers live. They come from a surprisingly red base.

Here's a look at the map from the Tax Foundation:

Tax Foundation

Out of the 10 states with the highest percentage of filers with no liability, all but one ☐ Florida ☐ are reliable Republican stalwarts.

This map, however, only measures Americans who file tax returns without liability. Millions of others have some income, but not enough to file a return. Those people, combined with the 52 million who make up this map, comprise the 47 percent.

Of course, just because people don't pay income taxes doesn't mean they don't pay any taxes at all. Here's another breakdown of the 47 percent, which shows how nearly two-thirds of that 47 percent pay payroll taxes. Most of the last third are comprised of the elderly (who also tend to vote reliably Republican) and people who make less than $20,000 (big Obama supporters).

Romney defends his comments, says they weren't 'elegantly stated' >

The word GENIUS has been so over used it has become a trite cliche

Speaking to NBC’s "Meet the Press" on Sunday, Jew PM Netanyahu said Iran is close to developing the enriched uranium needed for a nuclear weapon.

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu: "So I think that as they [Iran] get closer and closer and closer to the achievement of weapons-grade material — and they’re very close, they’re six months away from being about 90 percent of having the enriched uranium for an atom bomb — I think that you have to place that red line before them now, before it’s too late. We have to stop them. Don’t rely on containment. That is not the American policy. It would be wrong. It would be a grave, grave mistake. Don’t let these fanatics have nuclear weapons. It’s terrible for Israel, and it’s terrible for America. It’s terrible for the world."

Despite his warning of a six-month window before Iran advances its alleged nuclear weapons program, this wasn’t the first time Netanyahu has made such a prediction. In 1992 — 20 years ago — Netanyahu said that Iran was just three to five years from developing a nuclear weapon and urged U.S.-led international action to stop the purported threat.

Is lying, deception and treachery in these people's DNA? Can they help themselves? Should they actually be objects of our pity instead of loathing? Just asking.

Yes.

And there's definitely something wrong with the people who keep believing all their lies, too.

Now they're about to whip the morons into a murderous rage against yet _another_ totally innocent nation.

Wake up, pawns.

What country possesses the most gigantic stockpile of "weapons of mass destruction"? -- and what country has been using them continuously for a decade, invading and bombing and occupying and engineering bloody revolutions in at least half a dozen countries that were absolutely no threat whatsoever, based on the most transparent media lies imaginable, engineered by the richest national/ethnic group on this planet (one which, despite its wealth, wants _us_ to fight its wars)?

Iran's response to all this carnage and killing and purely evil war-making on all these nations, many of which are right on or nearly on its borders, and to the threats of war against them for their provably nonexistent nuclear weapons (which they have every right to develop should they decide to do so), has been almost unbelievably restrained.

Wake up, pawns. There's blood not only all over your hands. You're covered with it. Especially your eyes.

With all good wishes,

Kevin Alfred Strom.

Interesting. And an impressive work of engineering and construction. Some amateur should buy the site and use the antennas on 40 meters. As I recall, they were quite effective there.

Radio Moscow in the early 70s must have had some incredible transmitters and antennas too, since they put some almost unbelievable field strengths into eastern North America -- enough to actually overload one of my microphone preamps once when I had a 30' extension cable plugged in!

With all good wishes,

That gap is not cellular range. That's mostly military aviation.
Cellular would be in the range of US TV Ch 60-83, about 600-900 MHz, and a bunch of bands in the 1-2 GHz range, which this does cover.

Looks to me like they're re-purposing something from TV and/or satellite TV, as that range covers all of terrestrial TV, and what you'd get on the coax down from a dish. My guess would be a front end tuner for a satellite TV set top box.

Apple isn't alone. Google Android apps usually access your phone's identity/number and contact list, giving the names and numbers to whoever wants them. People don't check the permissions needed by an application before installing them.

Google has a nasty habit of tracking your every move on the web. With cell phones they also know where you all are, anytime the phone is turned on.

Let's not forget That other partner in this axis of evil, Microsoft.
They own Skype, so your countenance is subject to every facial recognition program on earth.

Things are worse than Orwell ever imagined.

Very insightful analysis Hils. Yes the military industrial complex had to find a new boogie man to terrify the lemmings with when communism fizzled out. Hmm...what to do? Terrorism! Yes that's the ticket! Perpetual war with perpetual profits and perpetual oppression of civil liberties to keep us all FREE! What a stroke of genius! But will the lemmings buy it? Of course they did and the war profiteers have perpetual hard-ons. Gore Vidal penned an excellent book on the subject: Perpetual War for Perpetual Peace.

You might enjoy an interview Vidal did for the Prague Writers' Festival. He talked about about history, the cold war and who really runs America. See http://www.guardian.co.uk/books/2001/mar/29/politics

Iran's acquisition of an atomic weapon would stabilize the Middle East and actually enhance the chances for attaining "peace" for that troubled region. The reality of mutual assured destruction would demand it. Empirical evidence supports such a thesis, viz. USA-USSR postwar relations.

It's unbelievable," said an unemployed waitress. "How can Obama be leading in the polls and likely to win enough electoral votes for a second term despite the worst economic performance by any President in the past 100 years?"

"It's downright frightening," said A small business owner. "What is the real plan that Obama and the Democrats have for their ‘transformation of America' and, more importantly, how are they going to achieve that plan and how will it affect my business and my family?"

The answers to these critical questions is clear. There is enough evidence, both direct and circumstantial, to provide reasonable answers. Yet, the reasons for Obama's showing in the polls and his transforming plan are kept masked by a media and a public who is seduced by the silver-tongued politician.

Obama's ability to mask his intentions produces an almost opium-like effect. That mask, however, will be removed once re-elected and America will, more clearly than ever, see and feel the impacts of the ‘plan'. Here is that unbelievable, frightening plan to transform America.

Bill Clinton Was Right That Dems Create More Jobs Than GOPers -- and Here's the Scoreboard for Good Jobs Making Real Things
Posted: 09/20/2012 5:41 pm

Since President Bill Clinton's September 5 speech to the Democratic National Convention, a great deal of attention has centered on his claim that, since 1961, the "jobs score" during seven Republican and six Democratic presidential terms amounts to 24 million for the Republicans and 42 million for the Democrats. The fact checkers have given these numbers their approval (see, for example, the Bloomberg verdict andThe Tampa Bay Times PolitiFact evaluation), although some critics (e.g.,The Washington Post) have questioned whether they are meaningful as a verdict on policy differences between the two parties. All of this raised for us a related -- and perhaps more important -- question: what about manufacturing jobs? We ran the numbers a few different ways, finding the manufacturing jobs score was just as lopsided in favor of Democratic presidents as the overall jobs score. Since World War II, Democratic administrations have, on average, added between 160,000 and 250,000 manufacturing jobs each year they have been in office. Republican administrations have lost manufacturing jobs at about the same rate. In other words, when we turn our attention from overall jobs to good middle-class jobs, Democratic presidents do even better than Republicans.

There is little political disagreement that manufacturing jobs are crucially important: a recent report by the President's Council of Advisors on Science and Technology underscored the importance of manufacturing to the "future ability of the United States to innovate and invent new products and industries, provide high quality jobs to its citizens, and ensure national security." In Pennsylvania, Republican Governor Tom Corbett's Manufacturing Advisory Council concluded that manufacturing was "the foundation on which Pennsylvania's economy was built and the driving force that provides family-sustaining wages for Pennsylvanians."

These assessments are borne out by the numbers: manufacturing accounts for about two-thirds of all U.S. exports, almost 90 percent of the export of goods, and over three-quarters of export growth over the last year. Manufacturing firms account for about two-thirds of private research and development. Manufacturing contributes to economic activity and employment in other sectors more so than any other industry. Despite its long decline, manufacturing still accounts for 12 million production jobs and sustains a wide array of service, sales, and supply chain employment. Manufacturing accounts for more than 10 percent of employment in 19 states, and more than 10 percent of gross product in 31 states. It is a central economic asset of the nation's cities. And manufacturing is especially important as a source of good jobs -- those that pay a decent wage, and provide some health and retirement coverage -- especially for those without a college degree.

Just as important, manufacturing workers along with manufacturing-intensive states and regions are critical politically. They make up a large part of the so-called Reagan Democrats, the "forgotten majority" of white non-college workers. These voters (especially the men) are often decisive in presidential elections. Little surprise, in this respect, that rust-belt states like Ohio, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin, in which the past and future of manufacturing is so important, have become such key battlegrounds in electoral politics.

To calculate the manufacturing jobs score across presidential administrations, we went back to 1948 and analyzed manufacturing employment growth (or decline) in all post-World War II presidential terms: nine Republican and seven Democratic. We also did what we could to address one of the objections to the numbers used in President Clinton's jobs score: for which period of time should a president be considered "responsible" for job changes. We ran our manufacturing numbers by presidential term three different ways to see whether our findings are robust across alternative methods.
The first, and simplest, approach is to take manufacturing employment in the first quarter of a president's term and compare that with manufacturing employment in the first quarter of the next president's term. What manufacturing employment situation did each president inherit from his predecessor and what did he pass on to the next?
The second method is similar, although it uses annual (rather than quarterly) employment averages. A year of data is more statistically robust than three months, and, as Princeton political scientist Larry Bartels argues, it takes a lag of a year for each new president's policies to take effect.*
Our third method holds each administration accountable for the changes in manufacturing employment from the first year of its term to the last year of its term. Thus, no president is held responsible for changes in manufacturing employment between the last year of one term and the first year of the next. This is a shorter window of responsibility but allows us to avoid any time when the succeeding administration's policies may impact the data.
Since we don't have data yet for the end of 2012 and for 2013, we use the most recent data available for President Barack Obama's administration -- the last 12 months of data in methods two and three and the last three months for method one. If following recent trends manufacturing jobs continue to grow over the next 18 months, Obama's record could look slightly better.
Here's what we found. The different metrics yield some important differences, especially in the distribution of recessionary losses across administrations. But the most remarkable and robust result is this: manufacturing employment has declined substantially in most Republican presidential terms and increased or declined by less in Democratic terms. Across the nine Republican terms, manufacturing employment fell between 7.3 million and 9 million, depending on method. Across the seven Democratic terms, manufacturing employment (again, depending on the method) rose by 5.4 million to 7 million.
We chart our findings at Manufacturing Jobs Score:

(Source: Bureau of Labor Statistics, Current Employment Statistics, All Employees: Manufacturing, Series ID CES3000000001;)
A couple of caveats are in order. First, the backdrop for all of this is a long, secular decline in manufacturing. Over time, the increases in employment get smaller and the losses get steeper, yielding the net decline summarized in the following table: At just under 12 million jobs, manufacturing now accounts for less than 10 percent of the nonfarm workforce, down from 30 percent in the early postwar years and 20 percent as recently as 1981. Value-added in manufacturing, which accounted for over a quarter of GDP into the late 1960s, is now about half that.

As manufacturing declined, so too did the wages of workers with modest educational attainment. In the 30 years since 1980, the median wage for a white male worker without a college education fell by over 25 percent, from almost $16 per hour to under $12 per hour. Wages fell under both Democratic and Republican administrations, but, on average, they fell twice as fast (using measures one and two) when Republicans were in the White House.

A second caveat: some of the partisan differences we found reflect accidents of timing rather than policy priorities. The dot.com crash of 2000-01, for example, pushed most of its recessionary losses onto the balance sheet of Bush junior; had that bubble popped a year earlier, Bush's numbers would have improved and some of the boom would have faded from the Clinton side of that business cycle.

Some observers will want to focus on Obama's record. Here's what we found on that score (using, as noted, the most recent available numbers for Obama). Based on all three of our measures, Obama's manufacturing jobs record is currently better than eight of the nine Republican presidential terms. President Ronald Reagan's second term does slightly better than Obama's incomplete first term, but the numbers are close enough that this may change once we have all the numbers. An interesting question is what Obama's manufacturing jobs record might have been had he not intervened to save General Motors and Chrysler.

Over the full span of our data, the differences we found are large. To gauge how large, it may help to consider how much bigger U.S. manufacturing employment would be if manufacturing employment trends across all Republican administrations had been the same as across all Democratic ones. The smallest aggregate gap between Democratic and Republican administrations, using our three methods, is about 12.7 million. This means that if Republican presidents had performed as well as Democratic presidents, the United States would have more than double the manufacturing jobs it has today. Put differently, the manufacturing employment share would be approaching the 20 percent employment share of German manufacturing. (For international manufacturing employment comparisons, click here.)

What explains our striking findings for manufacturing employment trends under Republican and Democratic presidents?

Differences in macroeconomic policy certainly seem a plausible part of the explanation. Clearly, the manufacturing job losses in Reagan's first term were related to the effort to drive inflation out of the economy, which was led by Federal Reserve Board Chair Paul Volcker. More recently, the Recovery Act that the Obama administration navigated through Congress (without a single House Republican vote) played a critical role in limiting the amount of additional manufacturing job loss after the first part of 2009. In the last two years, the Obama administration and Democrats in Congress favored doing more to strengthen job growth but were unable to do so in the face of Republican opposition. That would have further improved the manufacturing numbers. This emphasis on macroeconomic differences echoes Bartels' analysis, which identifies Democratic "Keynesianism" and the contrasting Republican focus on inflation as the key policy difference driving disparate patterns of income growth under Republican and Democratic administrations.

A second policy area of importance to manufacturing is trade, including exchange rate policy. Here there is not as much distance between the parties -- both of which have supported free-trade agreements while also periodically using trade law to protect particular industries. (The two most prominent examples of the latter occurred under Republican presidents: the Voluntary Restraint Agreements negotiated in the auto sector under President Reagan, and the steel tariffs established in President George W. Bush's first term). Both parties have also been reluctant to unilaterally or through negotiations lower U.S. exchange rates with key manufacturing trading partners, with the most substantial of such efforts (the 1985 Plaza Accord with Japan, Britain, France and West Germany) coming on Republican watch. One question worthy of further study is whether domestic macroeconomic policy more focused on fighting inflation also contributes to raising the value of the dollar, increasing manufacturing imports and lowering exports under Republican presidents.

A third policy area is manufacturing or "industrial" policy. Presidents Clinton and Obama have been supportive of policies aimed at helping U.S. manufacturers become more productive (for example, through funding for "Manufacturing Extension Partnerships" patterned conceptually after agricultural extension technical assistance that helped make U.S. agriculture the most productive in the world). The auto industry bailout opposed by most Republicans, the Obama Advanced Manufacturing Partnership announced in 2011, and Recovery Act efforts to stimulate green and other advanced manufacturing sectors are recent examples of Democratic support for manufacturing-specific policies.

Whatever the explanation for these manufacturing employment trends, the record is clear: Democratic administrations have sustained American manufacturing employment better than have Republicans -- in good times and in bad, across a long history of secular decline in U.S. manufacturing as a share of the overall workforce. On balance, considering bipartisan agreement on trade and the relative weakness of industrial policy, it might be more accurate to say that Democrats have not done enough to aid manufacturing but that their policies have done less damage than those of Republican administrations.

No doubt, questions remain about how to interpret these numbers. But we think that, at a minimum, voters have a right to know the manufacturing jobs score is and to draw their own conclusions about what it means in this year's election and for the future of manufacturing.

Five Lies in Romney's War on the "47 Percent"

MARK KARLIN,
EDITOR OF BUZZFLASH AT TRUTHOUT

About the only factual statistic that is verifiable in Mitt Romney's now infamous trashing of 47 percent of Americans is that, indeed, his figure is accurate for those who technically don't pay income taxes (a category that BuzzFlash at Truthout has pointed out may very well include Romney, particularly for the year 2009).

Beyond that, Romney's mean-spirited, callous dismissal of nearly half the nation -- as recorded at an August fundraiser hosted by a 1 percenter with a penchant for orgies -- was filled with both blatant lies and slander by innuendo.

Here is what Romney said, in regard to the "47 percent," as recorded on a videotape obtained by Mother Jones:

There are 47 percent of the people who will vote for the president no matter what. All right, there are 47 percent who are with him, who are dependent upon government, who believe that they are victims, who believe the government has a responsibility to care for them, who believe that they are entitled to health care, to food, to housing, to you-name-it. That's an entitlement. And [that] the government should give it to them. And they will vote for this president [Obama] no matter what These are people who pay no income tax.

Romney's Five Lies and Opportunistic Innuendoes

1) Yesterday, BuzzFlash pointed out that the states with the highest number of non-income tax payers are southern GOP red states. These states, in general, also receive net financial subsidies from the federal government, meaning that they are the top geographically contiguous welfare states in the nation.

You could call the Republican southern base the welfare queens of state moochers, living off of northern states, for example, who generally receive less back from the federal government than they pay in. In short, Romney's base electoral block fits to near perfection his disparaging rant about those "who are dependent upon government, who believe that they are victims, who believe the government has a responsibility to care for them, who believe that they are entitled to health care, to food, to housing, to you-name-it."

BuzzFlash even reported that -- when Romney was running in the Republican primaries in the spring -- he visited Mississippi and stated that the state government there was a model for the nation ☐ and implied that if every state was run like Mississippi, the US would be in fine financial shape. As BuzzFlash has revealed in a previous commentary, Mississippi is number one in receiving more federal funds than it pays out in income taxes: ranging from $2 to $2.75 in recent years received from the feds for every dollar paid in income tax by Mississippi residents. Among the welfare queen states of the South, Mississippi is the queen of queens.

So, if we take at face value Romney's sneering disregard for not representing the 47% of Americans who don't pay income taxes, then he is dumping on his mother lode of electoral votes in the South.

2) Romney clearly and categorically stated that the so-called 47% are people who "will vote for this president [Obama] no matter what." But as the National Memo documents,

In 2008, according to the New York Times, 25 percent of voters earning under $15,000 per year and 37 percent of those earning between $15,000 and $30,000 per year voted for John McCain and Sarah Palin.

An even more substantial number are older Americans who rely on Social Security benefits, Medicare, and Medicaid ☐ and who have displayed an increasing tendency to vote Republican in recent elections (until this week, at least). Four years ago, voters over 65 years old supported McCain over Obama by a margin of eight points, and the most recent New York Times survey shows the same group backing Romney this year by a margin of 15 points.

A significant number of low-income whites, in particular, vote Republican for reasons of socially conservative issues and white identity politics. Romney just wrote these people off as individuals he would not represent as president.

"[M]y job is not to worry about those people," Romney was recorded as saying. "I'll never convince them they should take personal responsibility and care for their lives."

It also means he apparently wants their votes but doesn't plan to represent them.

3) A CNN article points out that more than 40% of the 47% who don't pay income taxes include those who pay their 7.6% obligation to cover Social Security and Medicare; seniors on a low-fixed income; and on-duty military.
Less than 7% of the 47% don't pay because they are working age and poor.
As Paul Krugman states, "in middle age, close to 80 percent of the population pays income taxes."

Then add in people with disabilities, students, etc., and the 47% figure is extremely misleading, providing a fraudulent image of a good segment of the population that is not wealthy.

What's more, a basic irony is that more than half of the 47% are workers paying for Social Security and Medicare, which they then receive as an earned benefit, not an entitlement, when they retire. Then 10 ☐ 12% of those seniors become non-income tax payers because the Social Security payments that they receive ☐ and which they paid into as workers to receive as an earned benefit after retiring ☐ are too meager to be assessed income taxes.

So this is not as Romney later claimed in his remarks an issue of more people working (although that affects a percentage of non-income tax payers), but primarily a problem of people not making enough money, not being able to work, or being retired, but still paying other taxes (retail taxes in most states for one).

4) Among those who don't pay taxes according to CNN are at least 4000 millionaries, maybe including Romney in some post-2000 tax years. Indeed, Romney with his offshore accounts, payment of taxes to foreign governments (to reduce his US income tax liability) and Swiss bank accounts is exhibit number one in how the wealthy reduce their taxable income to below what many in the middle class pay, if someone like Romney pays income tax at all in some years.

5) As part of his "47 percent" remarks at the fundraiser, Romney said, "And I mean, the president starts off with 48, 49, 48☐he starts off with a huge number. These are people who pay no income tax. Forty-seven percent of Americans pay no income tax. So our message of low taxes doesn't connect. And he'll be out there talking about tax cuts for the rich. I mean that's what they sell every four years."

As proven earlier in this commentary, many likely Romney voters fall into his "moocher" category. It is a lie to state that those who vote for Obama are leeches off of the federal government, particularly when the lead federal dependents in the nation are from the deep South ☐ GOP country. It is a lie to call blue state residents who vote Democratic "victims" of laziness when the blue states are subsidizing Romney's red state voters.

But the most basic insidious lie to the above statement is that the rich are proud of paying income taxes, as long as you attach the oxymoron assumption that they want to pay as little as possible ☐ and, as cited above, this includes the estimated 4000 millionaires who don't pay any income tax. Romney stated that he wanted to get people into jobs where they would be proud to pay income taxes, but the Republican Party has as one of its core principles that income taxes are a federal intrusion on laissez faire individual income.

This is perhaps the biggest and most dangerous lie of all, that the wealthy want to support the United States when they are takers not creators. What they create is their own vast income and wealth. Some may create jobs, but so many of them, like Romney, nowadays are vulture capitalists or Wall Street gamblers on abstract financial products that threaten the economy, not benefit it.

Why didn't Romney ask the super-rich attendees at his fundraiser how many of them are proud to pay income taxes, if they pay them at all?

BuzzFlash doubts a hand would be raised in the audience ☐ and you certainly wouldn't see Romney's five fingers go up in the air.

Hmmm...the "unemployed waitress" has a bad memory about "the worst economic performance by any President".

She seems to have forgotten that G. W. Bush started two UNFUNDED wars that cost the country TRILLIONS.

Furthermore, she seems to have forgotten that the big crash, the Great Recession, started on BUSH's watch in 2008, yes, the same W that had seven and a half years to see it coming and try to head it off.

Spent some time, last night, comparing the reception of a Sony 7600GR and a Tecsun PL660. Used only the extendable built-in antennas. While the Tecsun was generally more sensitive, there were some signals (particularly from transpolar routes) that were fairly strong on the Sony, yet virtually inaudible on the Tecsun. African and Oceania signals, however, were far stronger on the Tecsun. Explanations?

Despite the apparent similarity of the two whip antennas, their directional patterns may be quite different -- perhaps due in part to the way they capacitively or directly couple into the ground. In fact, with single-ended antennas that are tiny in terms of wavelength, the ground system and the coupling to the ground system are the major elements affecting antenna performance.

Obama isn't a Democrat anymore than the Hon. Sen Dr. Ron Paul is a Republican.
Obama is a Marxist!

The war in Afghanistan ended this week. We lost.

Barack Obama has done so many despicable things it’s hard to be outraged by them all. But I never thought I’d see the day when an American president would sic the cops on a film-maker on behalf of the murderous Islamist swine.

There was more security around Nakoula Basseley, a Coptic Christian émigré from Egypt, in Los Angeles than Ambassador Stevens had in Benghazi.

You can also use an antenna tuner to place in between, if your poratables overload, I use an older MFJ-959B, which helps a great deal.My old desktop receivers work fine with just 30' of wire attached to the antenna terminal. I have improvised many different types of apratment antennas over the years, and have had good results, but there is nothing like an outdoor random wire.

Hi, I am very interested in your apartment setup, sense I'm in that type of situation myself. Can you tell me exactly what a Zep line is and where I can get one. Also, I would appreciate more details on how you hooked all of it up. I was wondering what would happen if I ran the wire around the wall in my apartment, so reading your post gave me more ideas. If you could explain more of what you did, that would be great. I'm a newbie here, so bare with me. -Thanks

The visuals of the police walking the guy to the police car help defuse the situation. The cops needed to remove him for his own safety anyway, so why not put on a show for Aljazeera? You got to play smart all the time.

A consulate is a bad place to try to secure. By definition it is not a fort. The security of diplomats was outsourced by Bush-Cheney a decade ago. I suggest you find Erik Prince and bitch at him.

Come on, the guy posted back in 2006, your quote even points that out.

Chances are very slim that the guy is still here. Just because google lets you reply to messages older than 30 days (and it is a bug, they need to fix it, like they did once before) doesn't mean you should. Especially when you're clueless enough to not realize how old the message is.

If it's older than 30 days, don't reply to it. Start a new thread, saying exactly what you want to say, instead of acting like some guy from six years ago will be waiting to answer your late reply.

We have been informed by the readers of rec.radio.shortwave that a | recent (2008) attempt to update these documents and post them (or links |
to them) at regular intervals, has since been abandoned, so the project |
is once again open to a sincere and motivated volunteer. |

We are interested in offering any technical support necessary to get True.

The very title of this thread contains an error, by the way. For Barack Hussein Fetchit to "transform America," he would have to be in charge, which he quite evidently is not. Hence the new name I gave him.

Rob-me, in the eventuality that the ethnically distinct bankers allow him to be elected, won't be in charge either.

With every good wish,

And that success has been recognized by others: Recently the No Agenda Report http://report.noagendaproducer.com/?p=17011 and http://www.noagendareport.com/?p=15461

and the FRRL

http://frrl.wordpress.com/2012/05/06/saturday-night-live-on-amateur-radio/have run excerpts from, and articles on, the Liberty Net -- thanks, guys!

Here's a little sample of the issues discussed during the latest meeting of the Net:

ï¿½ So far this year 42 banks have failed -- and failing isn't easy when you can create money! (24 minutes)

ï¿½ A previously unknown group calling itself "The Cutting Sword of Justice" has taken responsibility for the virus that attacked and destroyed workstations at the Saudi Aramco oil company. Such a claim certainly doesn't rule out intelligence agency involvement -- and the major intelligence agencies, especially the CIA and Mossad, are probably the greatest centers of murderous and criminal activity on this planet. (25 minutes)

ï¿½ Should the Muslim religion be banned in our societies because of its adherents' tendency to overreact violently to real or imagined slurs? What about certain other Middle Eastern religions which manipulate us into far more violent wars? (31 minutes)

ï¿½ Is the old saw "third parties can never win" just a self-fulfilling meme purposely inculcated in us to prevent change? Perhaps we should only support alternative parties. (49 minutes)

ï¿½ Why was control of the presidential debates taken away from the League of Women Voters? Were representatives of the two banker-controlled parties terrified of the League's tendency to give equal time to new parties? (51 minutes)

ï¿½ Some Americans are wondering why America gives so much money to Muslim-Brotherhood-controlled Egypt. They don't know that the endless giveaway is a payoff to Egypt for making a deal with Israel. (Israel not only does not fight its own wars, it also does not make its own payoffs. The stupid American taxpayers do.) (1 hour 1 minute)

ï¿½ Why is "democracy" worshiped and even conflated with freedom by ignorant people? Not only are democracy and freedom not the same thing, they are pretty close to being mutually exclusive. Democracy is two lions and a lamb voting on what to have for lunch. (1 hour 5 minutes)

ï¿½ The unbelievable lying about "weapons of mass destruction" through which the American suckers were jingoed into invading Iraq was such an egregious and obvious crime that you'd think that Americans could never be fooled by the same trick again. But just look at all the gullible millions who are being jingoed into wanting to kill Iranians today. (1 hour 12 minutes)

ï¿½ As we approach the phony elections, we are also approaching the infamous "October Surprise" time frame, during which violent events may be purposely triggered in order to anger and manipulate us. (1 hour 29 minutes)

ï¿½ Confused about the wars and conflicts in the Middle East? Just think of it this way: A certain third party is encouraging us to do things which make the Muslims hate us -- and also encouraging the Muslims to do things which make us hate them. That third party is closely connected to Israel. Clear now? (1 hour 32 minutes)

The Liberty Net -- amateur radio's longest-running current events discussion net -- is on the air every Saturday night at 10PM Eastern Time on or around 3950 kHz SSB (usually higher in frequency -- recently around 3967 -- to avoid interference). You might have to tune around, but we're not hard to find.

Remember, thanks to our multiple audio feeds, you're likely to be nearly interference-proof! And, as always, you can download the net recording right here at http://3950.net and listen at your leisure.

So the President (of any party) is personally responsible for outside contractors?

You DO realize that the U.S. government has tens of thousands of outside contractors (from guarding embassies to mopping floors to fixing airplane engines), don't you?

And just where do you think any one individual would get the time to individually oversee these tens of thousands of outside contractors?

Nice tap dance, but otherwise you are waaay off the beam. Sorry, but your extreme partisanship and / or racism is showing.

For NOT doing his job..... the President's job is the safety of America and particularly the people that perform that task for the President.

Consulates aren't forts. The Ambassador was in the best position to assess danger. Apparently he sensed some but did not flee when he could.

Where does it say the Prez is responsible for anyone's "safety". We are to protect commerce and the Constitution, and the people too weak to help do the same. "Safety" is a trap for cowards. Safety is the opposite

A New America www.NewAmericaMovie.com is a documentary film that outlines the history of the Progressive movement in America over the last century. It analyzes how Progressive ideology has transformed public policy, the structures of government, and its potential impact on the country’s future. An example of historical analysis contained in the film would be the argument that the Progressive ideals employed by FDR’s New Deal were the cause of the Great Depression, not the solution to it.

Through interviews with Constitutional scholars, authors, historians, public policymakers, and others, it reviews the original intent of the Founders, why it is important and lays out how Progressivism is in conflict with that original intent.

Anyone who is NOT a public Union/Liberal/Progressive/Socialist/

Anyone who refutes a public Union/Liberal/Progressive/Socialist/
Communist is a moron according to Useful Liberal JackAss Idiots.

As socialistworker.org admits, http://socialistworker.org/2003-2/471/471_09_Fascism.shtml
the left routinely applies the term "fascist" to any Republican political leader. In Britain The Guardian, BBC, and other liberal media pounced on purported links between the Bush family and corporations that had dealings with Nazi Germany. The fact that Prescott Bush, George W. Bush's grandfather, was a "director and shareholder" with companies that had indirect financial dealings with Germany in the 1930s would hardly seem damning, however. Much the same could be said for many other affluent individuals in America or Britain at the time. Every American today with mutual fund holdings is invested, at least indirectly, in Hugo Chavez's Venezuela. Does that make them Marxist revolutionaries?

Talk of Hitler became a lot more common during the Bush years, when it was accepted wisdom on the left that George Bush was worse than Hitler. Then there was Nancy Pelosi, who spent weeks back in 2010 complaining of the Tea Party's so-called "swastika signs" -- signs that did not signal an alliance with fascism but opposition to it. Pelosi was hardly alone in accusing the Tea Party of fascism. Marc Rubin, writing for examiner.com, referred to Tea Party members as "text book fascists." He went on to pin the neo-fascist label on Tom Tancredo, presumably because of Tancredo's concerns over illegal immigration. If those concerns make Tancredo a fascist, they would make the majority of Americans who share those concerns fascists as well. But that's pretty much how the left sees America.

The immediate response of liberals such as Chris Matthews http://www.mrc.org/biasalert/2011/20110412110017.aspx to the Ryan "Path to Prosperity" was to characterize it as a killer not just of babies and old people but of "half the people who watch this show." This attempt to portray the GOP plan as genocidal is just another example of the fascist rhetoric. It appears that Matthews is attempting to portray the Ryan plan as some sort of Final Solution.

It's not just loose cannons on MSNBC who resort to fascist innuendo. Obama's speechwriters are good at crafting sinister suggestions even without using the "F" word. Obama's budget speech of April 13 actually set the tone for the current debate. With Rep. Ryan sitting on the front row, Obama lectured his audience that the GOP plan would kick "someone's grandparents" out of nursing homes and cause children with autism and Down's syndrome to "fend for themselves." It is well known that Hitler sent legions of the disabled to concentration camps to be gassed, but the suggestion that a plan to actually save Medicare and Medicaid resembles the Holocaust, if that is what Obama intended, is repellent. It was one more proof, as if we needed any more, of a fatal weakness in the character of this President. He is a man whose entire existence is devoted to gutter politics. For such a man, statesmanship and dignified leadership are inconceivable.

The plain truth is that America can no longer afford this sort of reckless partisanship on the part of the chief executive. The fact that Obama disagrees with Rep. Ryan's budget plan does not justify accusations of killing sick children or tossing old folks out on the street. That kind of rhetoric may pass for wit in the sixth grade, but it is juvenile coming from the President.

"It is obvious what the fraudulent issue of fascism versus communism accomplishes: it sets up, as opposites, two variants of the same political system; it eliminates the possibility of considering capitalism; it switches the choice of “Freedom or dictatorship?” into “Which kind of dictatorship?”—thus establishing dictatorship as an inevitable fact and offering only a choice of rulers. The choice—according to the proponents of that fraud—is: a dictatorship of the rich (fascism) or a dictatorship of the poor (communism)."

"That fraud collapsed in the 1940’s, in the aftermath of World War II. It is too obvious, too easily demonstrable that fascism and communism are not two opposites, but two rival gangs fighting over the same territory—that both are variants of statism, based on the collectivist principle that man is the rightless slave of the state—that both are socialistic, in theory, in practice, and in the explicit statements of their leaders—that under both systems, the poor are enslaved and the rich are expropriated in favor of a ruling clique—that fascism is not the product of the political “right,” but of the “left”—that the basic issue is not “rich versus poor,” but man versus the state, or: individual rights versus totalitarian government—which means: capitalism versus socialism."

"Just as the Left was drawn to the communist killing machines of Lenin, Stalin, Mao, Pol Pot, and Castro, so too it is now attracted to radical Islam."

"The contempt that German Hitlerytes had for "Bolshevism" or "marxist Jews" generally should also not mislead us in assessing the similarity between National Socialism and Communism. Leftist sects are very prone to rivalry, dissension, schism and hatred of one-another. One has only to think of the Bolsheviks versus the Mensheviks, Stalin versus Trotsky, China versus the Soviet Union etc. Similarity does not preclude rivalry. Hitler and Stalin were literally brothers in arms BEFORE they became rivals. That socialist brothers sometimes fall out should not prevent us from noting the brotherhood concerned."

"The fundamental dogma of all brands of socialism and communism is that the market economy or capitalism is a system that hurts the vital interests of the immense majority of people for the sole benefit of a small minority of rugged individualists. It condemns the masses to progressing impoverishment. It brings about misery, slavery, oppression, degradation and exploitation of the working men, while it enriches a class of idle and useless parasites."

"This doctrine was not the work of Karl Marx. It had been developed long before Marx entered the scene. Its most successful propagators were not the Marxian authors, but such men as Carlyle and Ruskin, the British Fabians, the German professors and the American Institutionalists. And it is a very significant fact that the correctness of this dogma was contested only by a few economists who were very soon silenced and barred from access to the universities, the press, the leadership of political parties and, first of all, public office. Public opinion by and large accepted the condemnation of capitalism without any reservation."

Dr. Ludwig von Mises - http://mises.org/midroad.asp

"The term 'planning' is mostly used as a synonym for socialism, communism, and authoritarian and totalitarian economic management. Sometimes only the German pattern of socialism-Zwangswirtschaft-is called planning, while the term socialism proper is reserved for the Russian pattern of outright socialization and bureaucratic operation of all plants, shops, and farms. At any rate, planning in this sense means all-around planning by the government and enforcement of these plans by the police power. Planning in this sense means full government control of business. It is the antithesis of free enterprise, private initiative, private ownership of the means of production, market economy, and the price system. Planning and capitalism are utterly incompatible. Within a system of planning production is conducted according to the government's orders, not according to the plans of capitalists and entrepreneurs eager to profit by best filling the wants of the consumers.

"But the term planning is also used in a second sense. Lord Keynes, Sir William Beveridge, Professor Hansen, and many other eminent men assert that they do not want to substitute totalitarian slavery for freedom. They declare that they are planing for a free society. They recommend a third system, which, as they say, is as far from socialism as it is from capitalism, which, as a third solution of the problem of society's economic organization, stands midway between the two other systems, and while retaining the advantages of both, avoids the disadvantages inherent in each.

"These self-styled progressives are certainly mistaken when they pretend that their proposals are new and unheard of. The idea of this third solution is very old indeed, and the French have long since baptized it with a pertinent name; they call it interventionism. Hardly anybody can doubt that history will link the idea of social security, more closely than with the American New Deal and with Sir William Beveridge, with the memory of Bismarck whom our fathers did not precisely describe as a liberal. All the essential ideas of present-day interventionist progressivism were neatly expounded by the supreme brain-trusters of imperial Germany, Professors Schmoller and Wagner, who at the same time urged their Kaiser to invade and to conquer the Americas. Far be it from me to condemn any idea only on account of its not being new. But as the progressives slander all their opponents as old-fashioned, orthodox, and reactionary, it is expedient to observe that it would be more appropriate to speak of the clash of two orthodoxies; the Bismarck orthodoxy versus the Jefferson orthodoxy.

Dr. Ludwig von Mises - 1952 - http://mises.org/books/planningforfreedom_mises.pdf

The origins of the modern left can be traced back to the famous passage in Rousseau’s Discourse on the Origin and Foundations of Inequality, in which he condemned the institution of private property:

“The first man, who after enclosing a piece of ground, took it into his head to say, ‘this is mine,’ and found people simple enough to believe him, was the real founder of civil society.”

Added Rousseau: “How many crimes, how many wars, how many murders, how many misfortunes and horrors, would that man have saved the human species, who pulling up the stakes or filling up the ditches should have cried to his fellows: Beware of listening to this impostor; you are lost, if you forget that the fruits of the earth belong equally to us all, and the earth itself to nobody!”

Around the 1830s, a faction of French liberals gravitated toward Romanticism and the philosophy of the late Rousseau, proclaiming that capitalism, private property, and the increasing complexity of modern society were agents of moral decay -- both for the individual and for society at large. This is essentially the worldview that has made its way, through history, into the collective mind of the modern left; it is a worldview calling for a revolution that not only will topple the existing capitalist order and punish its corrupt leaders, but that also will replace that order with a socialist regime where the utopian ideals of perfect justice and equality will reign. Such an ambition can be put into effect only by a totalitarian state with the authority to micromanage every facet of human life, precisely the end-point toward which the policies and crusades of the modern left are directed.

When the term “liberalism” (from the Latin word liberalis, meaning “pertaining to a free man”) first emerged in the early 1800s, its hallmarks were a belief in individual rights, the rule of law, limited government, private property, and laissez faire economics. These would remain the defining characteristics of liberalism throughout the liberal epoch (generally identified as the period of 1815-1914). Yet the modern left, which portrays itself as the agent of enlightened commitment to “liberal” causes, in fact stands for the antithesis of each of the foregoing liberal ideals. Contrary to its self-definition, the left is neither “liberal” nor “progressive,” but rather a reactionary force that seeks to resurrect the traditions that characterized the epoch which preceded the rise of classical liberalism.

The following is from The World Book Encyclopedia, 1947 edition:
The chief characteristics of Fascism are as follows:

THE CULTIVATION OF IGNORANCE

Fascism, like all forms of government, rests firmly on the sincere consent of a large part of the population... To maintain this consent, the Fascist leadership must cut off the people from any information which might cause them to doubt the complete correctness of the fixed Fascist principles... All forms of communication are carefully censored, so that the public will receive only those facts that the dictators want known... Travel to other countries must be controlled, and freedom of speech and assembly must be rigorously suppressed...

Fascism depends upon the police to crush all opposition or dissent. Secret police spy on the whole population, and any casual remark against the regime leads to swift and severe punishment... Opposition parties are dissolved. Intellectual, athletic and recreational organizations are usually brought under the control of the Fascist authority... The ruthlessness of the police gradually becomes less noticeable... This is because within a year or so after a Fascist government takes power, vigorous opponents of the regime have either left the country, been killed or jailed...

EXTREME NATIONALISM

Fascism is highly nationalistic... It tries to identify its principles with the country, so that disagreement will look like treason... Some other country, or some group within the country, is chosen to serve as the "enemy" and made to appear as the cause of all evils or misfortunes... For example, the Nazis in Germany represented their movement first as a crusade against the Jews, then as a fight against Communism and later as a struggle against the "attacks" from whatever neighboring country they wished to subdue or occupy... Extreme nationalism often becomes a kind of racial fanaticism... Sometimes it combines racial and religious bigotry...

http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/groupProfile.asp?grpid=6535

MILITARISM

Fascism maintains among the people a permanently warlike frame of mind... Every citizen feels that he is mobilized against enemies of the regime from within, and against possible foreign foes... The dictator usually comes to power during a period of economic crisis or depression... He relieves the depression partly by employing many people in the making of armaments... To justify this procedure, he must convince the people that the country is threatened, and must point toward some of the enemies against whom the armaments may be needed...

A New America www.NewAmericaMovie.com is a documentary film that outlines the history of the Progressive movement in America over the last century. It analyzes how Progressive ideology has transformed public policy, the structures of government, and its potential impact on the country’s future. An example of historical analysis contained in the film would be the argument that the Progressive ideals employed by FDR’s New Deal were the cause of the Great Depression, not the solution to it.

Through interviews with Constitutional scholars, authors, historians, public policymakers, and others, it reviews the original intent of the Founders, why it is important and lays out how Progressivism is in conflict with that original intent.

As socialistworker.org admits, http://socialistworker.org/2003-2/471/471_09_Fascism.shtml
the left routinely applies the term "fascist" to any Republican political leader. In Britain The Guardian, BBC, and other liberal media pounced on purported links between the Bush family and corporations that had dealings with Nazi Germany. The fact that Prescott Bush, George W. Bush's grandfather, was a "director and shareholder" with companies that had indirect financial dealings with Germany in the 1930s would hardly seem damning, however. Much the same could be said for many other affluent individuals in America or Britain at the time. Every American today with mutual fund holdings is invested, at least indirectly, in Hugo Chavez's Venezuela. Does that make them Marxist revolutionaries?

Talk of Hitler became a lot more common during the Bush years, when it was accepted wisdom on the left that George Bush was worse than

Hitler. Then there was Nancy Pelosi, who spent weeks back in 2010 complaining of the Tea Party's so-called "swastika signs" -- signs that did not signal an alliance with fascism but opposition to it. Pelosi was hardly alone in accusing the Tea Party of fascism. Marc Rubin, writing for examiner.com, referred to Tea Party members as "text book fascists." He went on to pin the neo-fascist label on Tom Tancredo, presumably because of Tancredo's concerns over illegal immigration. If those concerns make Tancredo a fascist, they would make the majority of Americans who share those concerns fascists as well. But that's pretty much how the left sees America.

The immediate response of liberals such as Chris Matthews http://www.mrc.org/biasalert/2011/20110412110017.aspx to the Ryan "Path to Prosperity" was to characterize it as a killer not just of babies and old people but of "half the people who watch this show." This attempt to portray the GOP plan as genocidal is just another example of the fascist rhetoric. It appears that Matthews is attempting to portray the Ryan plan as some sort of Final Solution.

It's not just loose cannons on MSNBC who resort to fascist innuendo. Obama's speechwriters are good at crafting sinister suggestions even without using the "F" word. Obama's budget speech of April 13 actually set the tone for the current debate. With Rep. Ryan sitting on the front row, Obama lectured his audience that the GOP plan would kick "someone's grandparents" out of nursing homes and cause children with autism and Down's syndrome to "fend for themselves." It is well known that Hitler sent legions of the disabled to concentration camps to be gassed, but the suggestion that a plan to actually save Medicare and Medicaid resembles the Holocaust, if that is what Obama intended, is repellent. It was one more proof, as if we needed any more, of a fatal weakness in the character of this President. He is a man whose entire existence is devoted to gutter politics. For such a man, statesmanship and dignified leadership are inconceivable.

The plain truth is that America can no longer afford this sort of reckless partisanship on the part of the chief executive. The fact that Obama disagrees with Rep. Ryan's budget plan does not justify accusations of killing sick children or tossing old folks out on the street. That kind of rhetoric may pass for wit in the sixth grade, but it is juvenile coming from the President.

The choice—according to the proponents of that fraud—is: a dictatorship of the rich (fascism) or a dictatorship of the poor (communism)."

"That fraud collapsed in the 1940’s, in the aftermath of World War II. It is too obvious, too easily demonstrable that fascism and communism are not two opposites, but two rival gangs fighting over the same territory—that both are variants of statism, based on the collectivist principle that man is the rightless slave of the state—that both are socialistic, in theory, in practice, and in the explicit statements of their leaders—that under both systems, the poor are enslaved and the rich are expropriated in favor of a ruling clique—that fascism is not the product of the political “right,” but of the “left”—that the basic issue is not “rich versus poor,” but man versus the state, or: individual rights versus totalitarian government—which means: capitalism versus socialism."

NAZI Origins of LIBERAL FASCISTS Global Warming - While this may sound odd to many who have bought into the Marxian propaganda over the years that the Nazis were right wing capitalistic extremists, Greens who signed up for the Nazi Party were actually very typical of the day. Between 60% and 70% of the German Greens were NAZI Party members, compared to only 10% of the population at large.

"Just as the Left was drawn to the communist killing machines of Lenin, Stalin, Mao, Pol Pot, and Castro, so too it is now attracted to radical Islam."

"The contempt that German Hitlerytes had for "Bolshevism" or "marxist Jews" generally should also not mislead us in assessing the similarity between National Socialism and Communism. Leftist sects are very prone to rivalry, dissension, schism and hatred of one-another. One has only to think of the Bolsheviks versus the Mensheviks, Stalin versus Trotsky, China versus the Soviet Union etc. Similarity does not preclude rivalry. Hitler and Stalin were literally brothers in arms BEFORE they became rivals. That socialist brothers sometimes fall out should not prevent us from noting the brotherhood concerned."

"The fundamental dogma of all brands of socialism and communism is that the market economy or capitalism is a system that hurts the vital interests of the immense majority of people for the sole benefit of a small minority of rugged individualists. It condemns the masses to progressing impoverishment. It brings about misery, slavery, oppression, degradation and exploitation of the working men, while it enriches a class of idle and useless parasites."

"This doctrine was not the work of Karl Marx. It had been developed long before Marx entered the scene. Its most successful propagators were not the Marxian authors, but such men as Carlyle and Ruskin, the British Fabians, the German professors and the American Institutionalists. And it is a very significant fact that the correctness of this dogma was contested only by a few economists who were very soon silenced and barred from access to the universities, the press, the leadership of political parties and, first of all, public office. Public opinion by and large accepted the condemnation of capitalism without any reservation."

"The term 'planning' is mostly used as a synonym for socialism, communism, and authoritarian and totalitarian economic management. Sometimes only the German pattern of socialism-Zwangswirtschaft-is called planning, while the term socialism proper is reserved for the Russian pattern of outright socialization and bureaucratic operation of all plants, shops, and farms. At any rate, planning in this sense means all-around planning by the government and enforcement of these plans by the police power. Planning in this sense means full government control of business. It is the antithesis of free enterprise, private initiative, private ownership of the means of production, market economy, and the price system. Planning and capitalism are utterly incompatible. Within a system of planning production is conducted according to the government's orders, not according to the plans of capitalists and entrepreneurs eager to profit by best filling the wants of the consumers.

"But the term planning is also used in a second sense. Lord Keynes, Sir William Beveridge, Professor Hansen, and many other eminent men assert that they do not want to substitute totalitarian slavery for freedom. They declare that they are planing for a free society. They recommend a third system, which, as they say, is as far from socialism as it is from capitalism, which, as a third solution of the problem of society's economic organization, stands midway between the two other systems, and while retaining the advantages of both, avoids the disadvantages inherent in each.

"These self-styled progressives are certainly mistaken when they pretend that their proposals are new and unheard of. The idea of this third solution is very old indeed, and the French have long since baptized it with a pertinent name; they call it interventionism. Hardly anybody can doubt that history will link the idea of social security, more closely than with the American New Deal and with Sir William Beveridge, with the memory of Bismarck whom our fathers did not precisely describe as a liberal. All the essential ideas of present-day interventionist progressivism were neatly expounded by the supreme brain-trusters of imperial Germany, Professors Schmoller and Wagner, who at the same time urged their Kaiser to invade and to conquer the Americas. Far be it from me to condemn any idea only on account of its not being new. But as the progressives slander all their opponents as old-fashioned, orthodox, and reactionary, it is expedient to observe that it would be more appropriate to speak of the clash of two orthodoxies; the Bismarck orthodoxy versus the Jefferson orthodoxy.

Dr. Ludwig von Mises - 1952 - http://mises.org/books/planningforfreedom_mises.pdf

The origins of the modern left can be traced back to the famous passage in Rousseau’s Discourse on the Origin and Foundations of Inequality, in which he condemned the institution of private property:

“The first man, who after enclosing a piece of ground, took it into his head to say, ‘this is mine,’ and found people simple enough to believe him, was the real founder of civil society.”

Added Rousseau: “How many crimes, how many wars, how many murders, how many misfortunes and horrors, would that man have saved the human species, who pulling up the stakes or filling up the ditches should have cried to his fellows: Beware of listening to this impostor; you are lost, if you forget that the fruits of the earth belong equally to us all, and the earth itself to nobody!”

Around the 1830s, a faction of French liberals gravitated toward Romanticism and the philosophy of the late Rousseau, proclaiming that capitalism, private property, and the increasing complexity of modern society were agents of moral decay -- both for the individual and for society at large. This is essentially the worldview that has made its way, through history, into the collective mind of the modern left; it is a worldview calling for a revolution that not only will topple the existing capitalist order and punish its corrupt leaders, but that also will replace that order with a socialist regime where the utopian ideals of perfect justice and equality will reign. Such an ambition can be put into effect only by a totalitarian state with the authority to micromanage every facet of human life, precisely the end-point toward which the policies and crusades of the modern left are directed.

When the term “liberalism” (from the Latin word liberalis, meaning “pertaining to a free man”) first emerged in the early 1800s, its hallmarks were a belief in individual rights, the rule of law, limited government, private property, and laissez faire economics. These would remain the defining characteristics of liberalism throughout the liberal epoch (generally identified as the period of 1815-1914). Yet the modern left, which portrays itself as the agent of enlightened commitment to “liberal” causes, in fact stands for the antithesis of each of the foregoing liberal ideals. Contrary to its self-definition, the left is neither “liberal” nor “progressive,” but rather a reactionary force that seeks to resurrect the traditions that characterized the epoch which preceded the rise of classical liberalism.

The following is from The World Book Encyclopedia, 1947 edition:
The chief characteristics of Fascism are as follows:

THE CULTIVATION OF IGNORANCE

Fascism, like all forms of government, rests firmly on the sincere consent of a large part of the population... To maintain this consent, the Fascist leadership must cut off the people from any information which might cause them to doubt the complete correctness of the fixed Fascist principles... All forms of communication are carefully censored, so that the public will receive only those facts that the dictators want known... Travel to other countries must be controlled, and freedom of speech and assembly must be rigorously suppressed...

THE POLICE STATE

Fascism depends upon the police to crush all opposition or dissent.
Secret police spy on the whole population, and any casual remark against the regime leads to swift and severe punishment... Opposition parties are dissolved. Intellectual, athletic and recreational organizations are usually brought under the control of the Fascist

authority... The ruthlessness of the police gradually becomes less noticeable... This is because within a year or so after a Fascist government takes power, vigorous opponents of the regime have either left the country, been killed or jailed...

EXTREME NATIONALISM

Fascism is highly nationalistic... It tries to identify its principles with the country, so that disagreement will look like treason... Some other country, or some group within the country, is chosen to serve as the "enemy" and made to appear as the cause of all evils or misfortunes... For example, the Nazis in Germany represented their movement first as a crusade against the Jews, then as a fight against Communism and later as a struggle against the "attacks" from whatever neighboring country they wished to subdue or occupy... Extreme nationalism often becomes a kind of racial fanaticism... Sometimes it combines racial and religious bigotry...

When you hear the Liberal Fascist JackAss propaganda that THEY are the true patriots then you know the time is near. Look for it from the socialist Labor Unions such as the SEIU!
http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/groupProfile.asp?grpid=6535

MILITARISM

Fascism maintains among the people a permanently warlike frame of mind... Every citizen feels that he is mobilized against enemies of the regime from within, and against possible foreign foes... The dictator usually comes to power during a period of economic crisis or depression... He relieves the depression partly by employing many people in the making of armaments... To justify this procedure, he must convince the people that the country is threatened, and must point toward some of the enemies against whom the armaments may be needed...

Could you post a tax plan that will allow the top 1% to only pay 1% of

The figures are based on AGI; AGI stands for Adjusted GROSS Income.

First Post provided a valid citation that based their report on the IRS reports.

You provide NO citations.

You can verify the data from the Tax foundation by going to IRS.gov and look for the statistics page.

Here is one instance....

["The United States shall guarantee to every State in this Union a Republican Form of Government, and shall protect each of them against Invasion; and on Application of the Legislature, or of the Executive (when the Legislature cannot be convened), against domestic Violence."]

The ambassador was on U.S. soil, they were in an embassy when it was invaded.

That may even be dereliction of duty?

["There is a lot of information that most people donï¿½t know about Dereliction of Duty. The fact that there is three different ways that the soldier will be convicted of Dereliction of Duty. Also what is considered a soldiers ï¿½postï¿½ and what the different punishments are. Now most people donï¿½t receive the full punishments when it comes to Dereliction of Duty. It is completely up to the soldiers chain of command and it depends on the situation. Most of the time it will not go higher than an Article 15 if it even gets that far. Most of the time the team leader will talk to the soldier and the soldier will get a negative counseling.
Dereliction of Duty is when any sentinel or look-out who is found drunk or sleeping upon his post, or leaves it before he is regularly relieved, shall be punished, if the offense is committed in time of war, by death or such other punishment as a court-martial may direct, but if the offense is committed at any other time, by such punishment other than death as a court-martial may direct. There are several different elements that need to be met in order for the crime to be Dereliction of Duty. The first is that the person was posted or on some sort of duty as required as his job and wasnï¿½t on any form of duty. The second is that the person was either drunk wile he was working, sleeping or he left before he was properly released. The third is if the person was receiving any kind of special pay like hazard duty pay, then you would add that to the list. "]

We are at war.

The main objection to both the Marxists and the Finance Capitalists, outside of their both being preposterously wrong about practically everything, is the fact that they are acutely boring.

When you distill their philosophies down to their essence, they amount to who has to plow the turnip field, who has to plant the turnips, and how many turnips everyone gets to eat. And the ultimate goal of all human striving is to make sure everyone gets plenty of turnips. Or dollars; same thing.

How stupid.

With all good wishes,

Kevin Alfred Strom.

Earning real money...at Wal-Mart? Bwahahahahaha

How many books have you read by former Wal-mart employees describing what a crappy place to work it is...minimal wages, lousy hours, keep you on 'part-time' hours to minimize benefits?

None?

You haven't read a single book about that?

I went through your article line by line; where does it dispute:

The total top 1% makes 16.9% of the total US AGI.
The top 1% pays 36.7% of total Income taxes alone.

maybe you need to work for the government, Obama made 5 million in 3 years as President.

Maybe NOT Wal-Mart wages but it's a living.

It's working hours in your time zone... shouldn't you be contributing to the economy by doing something productive? (It would be a waste of time to explain to you the idea of the standard deduction, or the lack of a financial transaction tax, let alone simple mathematics.)

I mean, really... who are you trying to argue with: other people here, or yourself?

Highlights of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
17 - 23 September 2012

Solar activity reached low levels this week. C-class x-ray flares were observed on 17-20 and 23 September. The largest, a C2/Sf, was recorded from Region 1576 (S21, L=180, class/area Dso/70 on 20 September) at 19/1512 UTC. The remainder included a C2 flare from Region 1575 (N08, L=181, class/area Eko/320 on 22 September) at 17/1406 UTC, a C1 at 18/1009Z, and a C1 from Region 1574 (S22, L=302, class/area Cao/40 on 20 September) at 20/1139 UTC, and a long-duration C1 from beyond the east limb at 23/1556 UTC. The long-duration C-flare was associated with a vivid CME in LASCO C2 imagery. Estimated plane-of-sky speed was around 600 km/s.

No proton events were observed at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit reached moderate levels each day of the week except the 20th when it remained at background levels.

The geomagnetic field ranged from quiet to active levels during the week, with minor storm levels observed at high latitudes on all but the first and last days. The week began with the geomagnetic field at quiet to unsettled levels. Geomagnetic field activity increased to active levels late on the 19th when a corotating interaction region (CIR) became geoeffective. A coronal hole high speed stream followed on the 20th bringing mostly quiet to unsettled conditions.
Between the 19th and the 20th, the solar sector changed from positive to negative, consistent with the geoeffective coronal hole polarity. Solar wind speed at the ACE spacecraft fluctuated between 600 and 400 km/s between the 20th and 21st, before beginning a slow decline late on the 21st. Solar wind speed by the end of the week had dropped to about 350 km/s. The Bz component of the interplanetary magnetic field reached its maximum of approximately -11 nT late on the 19th with the arrival of the CIR.
```

Forecast of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
24 September - 20 October 2012

Solar activity is expected to be at low levels with an increasing chance for moderate activity during the first two weeks of the period as active regions rotate onto the visible disk.

A slight chance for a proton event exists due to potential activity associated with returning regions from 24 September through 08 October.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit is expected to be at high levels on 8-9 October and again on 17-18 October.

Geomagnetic field activity is expected to remain mostly at quiet to unsettled levels except for 3-5 October, 09-10 October, and 16-17 October when recurrent coronal hole high speed streams are expected to bring a chance for active levels.

its easy to beat "THE CONSERVATIVE" idiots on this. as millions are removed from the tax rolls due to the fact that the wealthy have driven them into poverty, it skews the percentage of what the wealthy pay in. it appears they are paying a ever larger percentage, because so many have been driven into poverty.

Additionally, the Bush Tax cuts removed even more people from the tax rolls, and increased the tax benefits to the poor.

Liberals often talk about the Bush Tax Cuts for the Wealthy, but fail to realized that the Bush Tax Cuts for everyone else are far greater. If the Bush tax cuts for the wealthy were eliminated, the federal increase in revenue for 2011 would have been only 36 billion, and only $700 Billion for the next 10 years. If the Bush Tax Cut for everyone else were eliminated, the increase in revenue for the next 10 years would be $3 Trillion.

Other than the seasonal part time workers, Wal Mart, like every other retail competitor they have does allow their full time workers to advance. I personally know several folks that are Wal Mart employees that earn over $40K a year and have health benefits along with vacation and 401K.
No, it is not the place to work if you want to ever make really good money but it beats the shit out of flipping burgers.

If you're going to declare WalMart a worthlkess job then you have to include, Target, JC Pennys, Sears, KMart, and virtually every other retail chain in the nation with them as they are all about the same.

It's going to be pretty damend funny if the day ever comes where retail starts paying wages comparable to say a union electrician.

Then idiots such as yourself will be wondering how the hell you're

Failing to take into account that a select few benefited from 2/3 of Bush's tax cuts, with half of that to just the top 1%, over the 150 million or so who had to share the other third.

Still waiting for dave to prove his statement that the Walton family earns over a trillion $ a year as he stated.
That's how much the bottom 40% earn in total which he claims the Waltons make so much more than.

Advance to where? Walmart has about a million employees, 90% of whom are low-wage frontline and backroom workers. The other 10% is already taken up by people on the managerial level. Even if there were openings on that level, they would amount to a fraction of 1%, at best, at any given time. Chances of promotion for a frontline or backroom employee are virtually NIL.

Funny that about the only things Obama has been able to do right is continue the Bush policies (ie tax cuts for example) that he was so against prior to being elected.

There are cites at the end of the article. I like pictures. Numbers make my head spin. Facts have a Liberal Bias in some peoples' minds. What we have here...is a Populist Uprising enhanced by social media. These things always follow Gilded Ages so quit freakin' out, willya? It's part of the natural order of things here in the USA. We will not provide certainty to the risk takers; if they don't want to risk, they certainly don't deserve rewards. CEOs are overpaid vs others with comparable skills. Shareholder revolts ensue...

The point being a topheavy republic always collapses into proletariat revolt and/or authoritarianism. Money is being hoarded. There are 600 trillion dollars in debt just in the banking system. We are taught to fear owing 16 trillion, while the banks create 40 times that debt in transactions no one understands. It is really 250 families vs the rest of the world. They like to see us at each other's throats as they toy with us.

Everything you just wrote is a diversion. Please state where, in the article you referenced, it disputes that:

The total top 1% makes 16.9% of the total US AGI.
The top 1% pays 36.7% of total Income taxes alone.

You have yet to provide a valid citation that proves your statement that, "The top 1% make way more than 37% of all the income."

"In the United States, wealth is highly concentrated in a relatively few hands. As of 2007, the top 1% of households (the upper class) owned 34.6% of all privately held wealth"

Privately held wealth is probably what he means. Which, like capital gains, is still income, right?

http://www2.ucsc.edu/whorulesamerica/power/wealth.html

That was in 2007. You can better believe that in 2012 it's at least 37% now.

Either you are trying to divert, as Dave was doing, or you have a reading comprehension problem.

Dave stated, " The top 1% make way more than 37% of all the income. "

Got that??? "...37% of all the INCOME", not wealth.

I wish capital gains were still income. Apparently, pushing a button to trade a stock is more valuable than any other kind of labor in the country.

Wealth is not income? Well, then neither is Capital Gains. Or are you just being selective to your own control freak benefit as to what income really is?

What do you think wealth is derived from? It's derived from income. You don't get it any other way. If there is another way to amass wealth, well, tell us the secret, I'd sure as hell would give it a shot to become the next Warren Buffet.

Boy, you're stupid.

Could be, Which job are we discussing and yet here you are.... and I can say I've worked many hours for 35 years, how are you doing? I also worked the grave yard shift with another job or my own business a few times to make it a 16 to 20 hour day, for months and years. I'm good with about 6 hours of sleep per day/night. That means I have to find interests to fill any time I'm NOT sleeping.

Buy the way I run my post through an encrypted Proxy and a few rotating regular proxy servers and change my locations and my computers and time zones and sometimes my language base so at this moment I may not be in the zone my computer or proxy servers are in, I see my posts at any time including 4am and 4pm and 9pm and 9am I post all times and all places and it's all work just like a doctor or lawyers day is all practice. You never considered education and self improvement work?

Perhaps you need to define work for us so we know what you think we should all be doing on any given hour of the day. Does the IRS define work as getting continuing education? Or is it wasted time as you say, is philosophy a job? Or do we need to meet your standard of work to live in this brave new Socialist America?

And just what does "Fundamentally changing America" mean?

That would be what you should ask Obama..... he plays golf more than I do, he took more vacations in 4 years than I had in 35 years.

That's right, I learned all that many many years ago and every day since. It would be a waste to repeat to me what I already do better and faster than you.

Often as NOT it's myself.... believe it or not I don't KNOW EVERYTHING and I have to explore all possibilities to ensure I am on the right track. I "argue" with myself all the time and not just here. The truth is always relevant. I sometimes find myself agonizing over spending $20 on something, imagine that, when $20 is nothing a tiny little nothing yet I stop to think about it.

When and if I'm wrong I'll just have to accept it and modify my ideas to that reality.

But petty jealousy of others, isn't likely to prove me wrong.

I will have to add this to my ever expanding list of "dumb shit" comments from Wy.

Prove it. Provide a reputable and valid citation stating that wealth
IS income.

There once was a three way competition for the title of Village Idiot. Ray Fisher was giving it his best, but had to bow out to both you and yoorg. It then came down to a two way competition between you and yoorg. I thought that yoorg was in the lead, BUT You have finally surpassed yoorg in the competition for village idiot.

Congratulations!

You want a prize for going through proxies? With all that spare time you

Yeah, but I'm sure Homeland Security is on top of you with all their tracking software.

But so far, you've posted 51 messages per day this month, and in just the last 3 hours there have been at least 7 messages.

And, of course, it probably wouldn't take long for someone a little more willing and saavy than myself to begin to track you down with this as a start:

Digital footprints eventually lead to somewhere. Just to let you know that you're not as invisible as you think you are.

Oh, so you can't answer the question of where wealth comes from, can you?

So? Where does it come from? Come on, you're the self-declared supposed brainiac in this group (maniac is more like it, though). How is wealth derived? Does it appear magically out of thin air? Or is it in exchange for cans of beans? Do worms in the ground weave out wealth? Well? Where does it come from? You have all the answers at your fingertips and cites to back you up. Or are you choking on your own vomit of stupidity right now, realizing full well that yes, wy is correct, wealth really is derived from income. What's that old saying? It takes money to make money. Oops. Money making more money? And that money funneled into everything from savings to investments to collections to property to business ventures....? Why, that all just adds up to ... Wealth!

Now disprove it, maniac brainiac.

the majority of the cuts went to the few, to the detriment of the many. yet, you still have not refuted the fact that by increasing the wealth of the already stinking rich beyond all reasons .001%, they have driven millions into poverty, who no linger pay in, thus skewing the percentage upwards artificially of what the already stinking rich pay in.

demand for goods and services is wage driven. if we relied on chinese wages in america for cheap products, we would be chinese communist serfs.

stalin and mao starved millions to death.
hitler and musolinni crafted the useless eaters theory. stalin and mao hated labor unions.
hitler and musolinni hated labor unions.
stalin and mao hated liberals.
hitler and musolinni hated liberals.
marx and rand hated big government, and wanted to destroy it.
stalin and mao thought that only the strong shall survive.
hitler and musolinni thought that only the strong shall survive.
all four hated homosexuals.
all four ran a show me your papers police state.
in stalins russia, as well as mao's china, almost all wealth and power
ended up in the hands of a few.
its also happening in the west, where ever the conservatives and rands cranks theories are being employed.

Try taking your own advice.
You're the one that raised questions about his time zone and now that he's explained it you try to make some kind of half assed argument about it?
And you're calling him the "kook"?

If ya can't beat 'em on the facts, make it up in bluster.

First of all, the facts make it obviously a clear lie that that Walton family makes anywhere near what was claimed in the earlier comparison of that family to the bottom 40%.

Secondly, the facts are simple. After denying them, you now have changed your position to overload us with a smoke screen. Why? Because you found that the facts as posted were unassailable and you wanted to (a) save face, and (b) change the subject so you could launch a counterattack.

Forget it. You lost on this one. Next time someone posts facts, do a little research so you don't wind up with egg on your face.

His time zone was an educated guess. If he gets that fired up about a time zone, perhaps he should get therapy.

How is it far greater for those under a $20,000 income getting only $799 out of it over 10 years and those earning half-a-million getting over half-a-million out of it over 10 years - on average per person?

Replying to some of these people is the biggest waste of time of all.
You caught on quick.

But I'm easy-going, what they doesn't know is my TV hasn't been on for a week, and I learned some more guitar tunes.

I really don't need someone to manage my time for me, but he seems to think he can do a better job of living my life than I can.... typical Liberal.

I'm done with this.

They should all buy stock in Wal-Mart, if every worker bought a thousand shares they could start to have some voice, but that would require them to put "their" money on the line wouldn't it?

When they do that and take that risk, then they should be demanding more money. And when it all collapses under the weight of the employees demands they can each lose $25,000, that fair.

I wouldn't track me. And I don't track anyone else, I believe you should all say what ever you want, and I believe you should exercise your right to keep and bear arms too, and I'm not in fear of any of you being free....

I also have encryption that can lock down private things on a per file basis, at better than 1024 encryption it will at least waste a lot of someone else's time to see what say in private.

Yeah, you're a real brainiac. And where do you think each of those workers earning maybe $25,000 per year would find $74,000 to buy 1,000 shares each in Walmart stock?

just ask any rich spoiled brat that inherits their money, and never has worked a day in their worthless unproductive lives, if the wealth they inherited is used as a investment vehicle. the majority of the founders were liberals, who despised a aristocracy, and the immense poverty that goes along with it.

Anyone who "you" can't read their mail, is a terrorist?

Don't worry I'm sure it only takes Obama and company a few extra key strokes to find me, I'm not hiding I'm deflecting the hoards of Libs that would send malware and worm their way into my private space, to infect my software and try to stop me from expressing views other than their official Socialist mantra.

An industry has cropped up to halt the abuse of my computer by people like you who feel you have the right to pillage through my private papers. And I have firewalls too, I have at least a few and I'm working on a Linux Box that runs a virtual box so you will have to get past two secure systems and I may try for a computer running a box in a box in a box.... just to confuse the whole thing and use it to tunnel.

These virtual Machines are actually cool and they work. I set up a server in a Virtual Machine in a real PC and I encrypted the drive.

But hey, I'm just a shit fer brains.... I wonder what the smart people who really want to redistribute your wealth to themselves are doing?

Once again into an area that you want to pry into but can't, and this seems to upset you. If I'm not forcing you to surf those sites in your dirty little mind, why would you care what I'm viewing? Are you a religious NAZI that wants to make sure I'm pure so that your soul will be saved by virtue of the fact you are saving my soul... You know "a Religious Socialist zealot"? And if I am NOT on sites you disapprove of, will you be content to look over my shoulder like big brother?

I suppose you want to read my taxes also?

Shoot me up with a little pentathal to make sure I'm telling you everything?

You must not have a life, you want to concern yourself with the details and micromanage others and I just wouldn't have time to waste like that since I go out and live my own life. I don't have all the hours and energy to live my own life as fully as I'd like, much less waste it trying to sniff your but hole like you want to do to everyone else. What a sad little person you must be.

I can't imagine having that little lust for life that you are willing to squander it sniffing around the piles that other people are leaving behind them.....

I haven't had a crashed system in a long long time..... you do it your way I'll stick to what is working for me. That's what made America Great.

Oh I see you're upset because you you can't get into my system if you want to see something. But why do I need less security than the banking computers that also contain my accounts and passwords and other private information? They use millions of dollars in systems to keep people and governments out, why should I let them read it at the source if the banks are keeping them from reading it at the collection point?

Good idea I like that one... by the time I really have anything to say they'll be tired of cranks like you and dismiss you outright as a loony bird.

Sieg Heil when you sign the report, that was what all good Germans did when reporting their neighbors to the SS for suspected lack of loyalty to the Furer and for helping Jews.

Nice try, tweaking me would be fun wouldn't it..... but you failed at that too. I had the fun. I had a chance to paint you with all the negative stereotypes in one post, I particularly liked the one about the zealot. The Hitler innuendo was a cheap laugh (I'm ashamed) but hey it always gets a laugh from me.

You could have, at the absolute very least, tried to form a coherent

If wealth IS income, then it would be easy for you to prove it with reputable and valid citations stating that wealth
IS income.

You were the one making the statement, it is up to you to prove it,

I've seen several employee owned companies over the years in the construction industries and in my opinion they are a good thing.
What I found interesting is that when those companies became employee owned, 9 times out of 10 the employees actually began to display a lot of good common business sense once they got it into their heads that it was their money invested that could either be lost or grown.
Instead of showing up for work to try to get through a workday doing the least most tried to find ways to improve efficiency, for example.

Of course liberals are mostly against such ESOPs as typically, employee owned businesses rarely ever vote to unionize.
As stated, once the employees wrap their heads around it being their own money being on the line they usually take a completely different attitude from the guys that are just trying to make their check each week.

Under the leadership of Barack H. Obama, though hardly noticed by the pro-Obama mainstream media, the U.S. Marine Corps has suffered its worst air squadron catastrophe since Vietnam, and its prized VMA-211 squadron has taken its worst hit since its defense of Wake Island in World War II.

It happened on September 14, 2012, northwest of the city of Lashkar Gah in southern Afghanistan. A team of fewer than two dozen Taliban fighters attacked the USMC's massive Camp Bastion base there, killing VMA-211 squadron commander Lt. Col. Christopher Raible and destroying or permanently disabling eight of the ten top-of-the-line harrier AV-8B attack aircraft stationed under him.

By the time the smoke cleared, roughly 7% of the total harrier fleet operated by the USMC had been wiped out on a single day by a small force of ground combatants whose most potent weapon was the suicide vest, one of which was used to breach the camp's perimeter fence.

Under Obama, the U.S. has taken 1,491 casualties in Afghanistan, over 70% of the total 2,121 casualties sustained since the fighting there began.

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Fa1sj0gwnuQ

"It is obvious what the fraudulent issue of fascism versus communism accomplishes: it sets up, as opposites, two variants of the same political system; it eliminates the possibility of considering capitalism; it switches the choice of “Freedom or dictatorship?” into “Which kind of dictatorship?”—thus establishing dictatorship as an inevitable fact and offering only a choice of rulers. The choice—according to the proponents of that fraud—is: a dictatorship of the rich (fascism) or a dictatorship of the poor (communism)."

"That fraud collapsed in the 1940’s, in the aftermath of World War II. It is too obvious, too easily demonstrable that fascism and communism are not two opposites, but two rival gangs fighting over the same territory—that both are variants of statism, based on the collectivist principle that man is the rightless slave of the state—that both are socialistic, in theory, in practice, and in the explicit statements of their leaders—that under both systems, the poor are enslaved and the rich are expropriated in favor of a ruling clique—that fascism is not the product of the political “right,” but of the “left”—that the basic issue is not “rich versus poor,” but man versus the state, or: individual rights versus totalitarian government—which means: capitalism versus socialism."

"Just as the Left was drawn to the communist killing machines of Lenin, Stalin, Mao, Pol Pot, and Castro, so too it is now attracted to radical Islam."

"The contempt that German Hitlerytes had for "Bolshevism" or "marxist Jews" generally should also not mislead us in assessing the similarity between National Socialism and Communism. Leftist sects are very prone to rivalry, dissension, schism and hatred of one-another. One has only to think of the Bolsheviks versus the Mensheviks, Stalin versus Trotsky, China versus the Soviet Union etc. Similarity does not preclude rivalry. Hitler and Stalin were literally brothers in arms BEFORE they became rivals. That socialist brothers sometimes fall out should not prevent us from noting the brotherhood concerned."

"The fundamental dogma of all brands of socialism and communism is that the market economy or capitalism is a system that hurts the vital interests of the immense majority of people for the sole benefit of a small minority of rugged individualists. It condemns the masses to progressing impoverishment. It brings about misery, slavery, oppression, degradation and exploitation of the working men, while it enriches a class of idle and useless parasites."

"This doctrine was not the work of Karl Marx. It had been developed long before Marx entered the scene. Its most successful propagators were not the Marxian authors, but such men as Carlyle and Ruskin, the British Fabians, the German professors and the American Institutionalists. And it is a very significant fact that the correctness of this dogma was contested only by a few economists who were very soon silenced and barred from access to the universities, the press, the leadership of political parties and, first of all, public office. Public opinion by and large accepted the condemnation of capitalism without any reservation."

"The term 'planning' is mostly used as a synonym for socialism, communism, and authoritarian and totalitarian economic management. Sometimes only the German pattern of socialism-Zwangswirtschaft-is called planning, while the term socialism proper is reserved for the Russian pattern of outright socialization and bureaucratic operation of all plants, shops, and farms. At any rate, planning in this sense means all-around planning by the government and enforcement of these plans by the police power. Planning in this sense means full government control of business. It is the antithesis of free enterprise, private initiative, private ownership of the means of production, market economy, and the price system. Planning and capitalism are utterly incompatible. Within a system of planning production is conducted according to the government's orders, not according to the plans of capitalists and entrepreneurs eager to profit by best filling the wants of the consumers.

"But the term planning is also used in a second sense. Lord Keynes, Sir William Beveridge, Professor Hansen, and many other eminent men assert that they do not want to substitute totalitarian slavery for freedom. They declare that they are planing for a free society. They recommend a third system, which, as they say, is as far from socialism as it is from capitalism, which, as a third solution of the problem of society's economic organization, stands midway between the two other systems, and while retaining the advantages of both, avoids the disadvantages inherent in each.

"These self-styled progressives are certainly mistaken when they pretend that their proposals are new and unheard of. The idea of this third solution is very old indeed, and the French have long since baptized it with a pertinent name; they call it interventionism. Hardly anybody can doubt that history will link the idea of social security, more closely than with the American New Deal and with Sir William Beveridge, with the memory of Bismarck whom our fathers did not precisely describe as a liberal. All the essential ideas of present-day interventionist progressivism were neatly expounded by the supreme brain-trusters of imperial Germany, Professors Schmoller and Wagner, who at the same time urged their Kaiser to invade and to conquer the Americas. Far be it from me to condemn any idea only on account of its not being new. But as the progressives slander all their opponents as old-fashioned, orthodox, and reactionary, it is expedient to observe that it would be more appropriate to speak of the clash of two orthodoxies; the Bismarck orthodoxy versus the Jefferson orthodoxy.

Dr. Ludwig von Mises - 1952 - http://mises.org/books/planningforfreedom_mises.pdf

The origins of the modern left can be traced back to the famous passage in Rousseau’s Discourse on the Origin and Foundations of Inequality, in which he condemned the institution of private property:

“The first man, who after enclosing a piece of ground, took it into his head to say, ‘this is mine,’ and found people simple enough to believe him, was the real founder of civil society.”

Added Rousseau: “How many crimes, how many wars, how many murders, how many misfortunes and horrors, would that man have saved the human species, who pulling up the stakes or filling up the ditches should have cried to his fellows: Beware of listening to this impostor; you are lost, if you forget that the fruits of the earth belong equally to us all, and the earth itself to nobody!"

Around the 1830s, a faction of French liberals gravitated toward Romanticism and the philosophy of the late Rousseau, proclaiming that capitalism, private property, and the increasing complexity of modern society were agents of moral decay -- both for the individual and for society at large. This is essentially the worldview that has made its way, through history, into the collective mind of the modern left; it is a worldview calling for a revolution that not only will topple the existing capitalist order and punish its corrupt leaders, but that also will replace that order with a socialist regime where the utopian ideals of perfect justice and equality will reign. Such an ambition can be put into effect only by a totalitarian state with the authority to micromanage every facet of human life, precisely the end-point toward which the policies and crusades of the modern left are directed.

When the term "liberalism" (from the Latin word liberalis, meaning "pertaining to a free man") first emerged in the early 1800s, its hallmarks were a belief in individual rights, the rule of law, limited government, private property, and laissez faire economics. These would remain the defining characteristics of liberalism throughout the liberal epoch (generally identified as the period of 1815-1914). Yet the modern left, which portrays itself as the agent of enlightened commitment to "liberal" causes, in fact stands for the antithesis of each of the foregoing liberal ideals. Contrary to its self-definition, the left is neither "liberal" nor "progressive," but rather a reactionary force that seeks to resurrect the traditions that characterized the epoch which preceded the rise of classical liberalism.

The following is from The World Book Encyclopedia, 1947 edition:
The chief characteristics of Fascism are as follows:

THE CULTIVATION OF IGNORANCE

Fascism, like all forms of government, rests firmly on the sincere consent of a large part of the population... To maintain this consent, the Fascist leadership must cut off the people from any information which might cause them to doubt the complete correctness of the fixed Fascist principles... All forms of communication are carefully censored, so that the public will receive only those facts that the dictators want known... Travel to other countries must be controlled, and freedom of speech and assembly must be rigorously suppressed...

THE POLICE STATE

Fascism depends upon the police to crush all opposition or dissent.
Secret police spy on the whole population, and any casual remark against the regime leads to swift and severe punishment... Opposition parties are dissolved. Intellectual, athletic and recreational organizations are usually brought under the control of the Fascist authority... The ruthlessness of the police gradually becomes less noticeable... This is because within a year or so after a Fascist government takes power, vigorous opponents of the regime have either

EXTREME NATIONALISM

Fascism is highly nationalistic... It tries to identify its principles with the country, so that disagreement will look like treason... Some other country, or some group within the country, is chosen to serve as the "enemy" and made to appear as the cause of all evils or misfortunes... For example, the Nazis in Germany represented their movement first as a crusade against the Jews, then as a fight against Communism and later as a struggle against the "attacks" from whatever neighboring country they wished to subdue or occupy... Extreme nationalism often becomes a kind of racial fanaticism... Sometimes it combines racial and religious bigotry...

When you hear the Liberal Fascist JackAss propaganda that THEY are the true patriots then you know the time is near. Look for it from the socialist Labor Unions such as the SEIU!
http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/groupProfile.asp?grpid=6535

MILITARISM

Fascism maintains among the people a permanently warlike frame of mind... Every citizen feels that he is mobilized against enemies of the regime from within, and against possible foreign foes... The dictator usually comes to power during a period of economic crisis or depression... He relieves the depression partly by employing many people in the making of armaments... To justify this procedure, he must convince the people that the country is threatened, and must point toward some of the enemies against whom the armaments may be needed...

2. Liberal-Progressivism (The Drive for Social Improvement through Change and Promising Hope;
More Draconian Liberal Polices are Implemented to Transform The People into a New Society that

3. Liberal-Fascism (The Rise of the Party Leader over 'The Party' Ensuring the Unity and Uniformaty of 'The Party' and Enforcing The Will of 'The Party' Over the People.) The Party Leader will Cleanse 'The Party' of All those Who Are NOT of 'The Party'; and 'The Party' Will Cleanse the People of All Those Who Do NOT Support 'The Party' and The Party Leader. The organization rate of labor unions against all employees in the United States is 11.9% [1], compared to 18.4% in Japan [2]. However, I have yet to hear about Honda having abysmal sales, poor quality and a government bailout. Could it be because their chief executive officer is paid a mere ¥122M ($1.6M) [3] compared to $7.7M for GM's CEO [4]?

Has it ever occurred to you that it could be bad corporate decision making, and not the union's mere existence, that causes a company's downfall? Think about it, please.

sense, of course. Now dispute that, and feel free to come up with as many cites as you want. Until then, you know I'm right and I win and

The proof is in your inability to disprove it.

I'm sorry, but you are an idiot.

I provide citations to back up my statements; you produce blather.

Prove that you aren't beating your wife. You inability to disprove it must mean that it is true.

You insist that others "prove it" when it comes to their statements, why do you think you should be immune from your premise that a person should prove their statements?

I'm still waiting for your citations to back up whatever statement you have to make about from where wealth is derived.

That's easy. I don't have a wife. But does a girlfriend count? Or is a girlfriend like capital gains and not like the way a wife is, like income?

Got you there. But then, I always do. Wherever "there" is. Do you even have a "there" that's worth getting?

I can make any statement I want, true or outlandish, and don't have to prove any of it - until someone wants to try to disprove it. So, try to disprove it. I'm waiting. Otherwise, I win and you lose.

4004. Maybe America(Obama) should divert some of that foreign aid and United Nations funding and NATO funding to buying new jets, because the American tax payers are all tapped out.

Under the "LACKING" leadership of Obama we lost hundreds of millions of dollars of jets..... the human toll was not quantifiable with an ambassador dead and all the others.

Obama wants to send 2 billion dollars to the Muslim Brotherhood and to the starving children in Africa and the rest of the people that took delight in destroying our aircraft and killing our personnel?

Maybe America(Obama) should divert some of that foreign aid and United Nations funding and NATO funding to buying new jets, because the American tax payers are all tapped out.

Rumination

The least government necessary is the best government possible

Reducing regulations is primary since regulation is what stifles commerce, the more regulations, the more it costs our economy. Most regulations are used by existing businesses to reduce competition, and competition would help us get out of this depression.

End the "war on drugs" make them legal (increase competition) and sold at any drug store and push for prostitution to be legal too, that will take the BIG money out of trafficking in drugs, and that will reduce the gangs/dealers income and that should reduce the value of sex slaves and hurt the human trafficking business income also. Why have illegal prostitutes when there are so many legal tax paying prostitutes out there?

Create Bi-color money, Red money for inside the USA and Original Green money outside the USA..... NOTHING BUT A COLOR/INK difference, and suddenly sending red money home to Mexico would be useless as the RED money would be useless in Mexico since the Banks and etc wouldn't accept it abroad. All electronic money leaving the USA would be debited the Sales tax when the money is sent/spent.

The Drug dealers would have Red money that they need to exchange for green money, makes it hard to do in large amounts and hard to spend and more expensive to deal with .. that makes Drug smuggling less profitable as would dropping the income tax and installing a NATIONAL ☐NEW ITEM☐ SALES TAX NOT IMPLEMENTING A VAT TAX WHICH WILL HELP THE DRUG DEALERS and illegals by making their tax free money leaving the country even more valuable. If they had to buy/exchange the RED money for GREEN money then you would charge the sales tax at that point.

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=R7FshBjkS6U&oref=http%3A%2F%2Fwww.dogpile.com%2Finfo.dogpl.prefer%2Fsearch%2Fweb%3Fq%3Dportugal-legalizes-drugs--crime-usage-falls

Have the States Ratify an amendment withdrawing the 16th amendment... Maybe enact something similar to the http://fairtax.org (Federal sales tax) BUT NOT A VAT or VALUE ADDED TAX with the same mendment that removes income tax and the IRS, preferably a Federal NEW ITEM sales tax.

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=S7AgwtSzxt8

This will reduce the number of tax crimes that people are in jails for and it will give the people back their privacy. It will also promote GREEN living where people will save more and waste less and buy second hand and wear things out rather than discard and buy new. Then add to the amendment that if congress raises any tax by 1% they are forced to cut every single expenditure of the government by 3%.

Begin to draw down troops as needed from around the world. Put half of our military bases along the southern Border to minimize the amount of border that the Border patrol needs to watch, the military and Federal trespassing laws will push the illegals to spaces between the military bases.

This tax/border policy will financially assault the drug dealers and hookers and other underground economy's by forcing them to have to pay tax when they spend their money , which will further reduce the benefit of dealing in other illegal stuff. There needs to be one type of dollar for use inside America and one type(color) of dollars for use outside the USA. That will make it harder for smugglers to get money out of the country and if they do spend it here then they will pay the sales tax and that money is used to enforce the laws to catch smugglers and terrorists. We are "right now" taking money from peoples pay checks before they get them and at the same time we don't tax drug dealers terrorists or hookers or illegals or others at all, we are penalizing the working Americans and giving a TAX loop hole bonus to illegal activity. Sales tax will also encourage saving money rather than encouraging the leveraging of every dime you can borrow like income tax does.

This will drive people in the underground economy to become part of the real economy. It will stop most of the turf killings and end our immigration problems with illegals stealing identities since they will be paying tax(as sales tax). Offer illegals less welfare and charge them tax and they won't be so eager to come here and we won't need to chase them......

End Social Security/Medicare, grandfather it out of existence.

Pass an amendment to the constitution that makes all laws_and_treaties have a seven year sunset clause, and it requires that each law/treaty be voted by a separate roll call vote every seven years to continue to be maintained in our laws.

There should also be some constitutional amendments to stifle congress' borrowing and spending making it more difficult for that process. And a constitutional amendment to limit the Interstate Commerce Clause. The politicians use that clause to justify all sorts of socialist crap. The founding fathers never meant for it to be so broadly applied. Limit it with an amendment, so government can't justify every crazy idea by saying its legal under the interstate commerce clause.

Pass another amendment creating term limits on congress so the House has 6 terms and the Senate has 2 terms, for a total of 12 years in either side of congress. WE NEED TO STOP CONGRESS FROM PASSING FRIVOLOUS LAWS TAXES AND BORROWING AND ENDLESSLY PRINTING MONEY.

To quit filling the jails with people over social taboos , we need to take away congress' ability to "social engineer" businesses or private people by removing the governments use of tax code to manipulate people.

Government needs to spend 10% less every year until they meet the income of the government. The best way, is to use_both_cutting_and_taxing , the Congress should implement a rule to force an across the board spending freeze/cap (That only allows cutting spending) and then across the board cuts on the government spending, to do that we have to include a law in our TAX amendment to the constitution that can't be easily circumvented, to force them to cut spending 3% for every 1% Congress raise taxes. So any federal sales tax increase would result in automatic spending cuts using a baseline of 10% taxes.

And we need to give up our roll as the police man of the world, let them fight their own fights. We also need fewer crimes for people to be committing, we need fewer police and prisons to support.... the above drug and tax plan, will reduce police and prison needs by at least that 10% that this plan suggested cutting each year.

NO welfare to corporations, and cut welfare to private people by 10% each year until it is 10% of today's cost. Any way you look at it, we're in DEEP for a long time.

Sorry Charlie, but I asked you first; go back through the posts.

I never made any statement as to where wealth came from, therefore, I don't have to back up the claim.

It should be quite easy doing a search for: wealth is income.

Prove you don't have a wife. If you have a wife, proving so is easy; if you don't have a wife,proving you don't have a wife is virtually impossible unless you post every single marriage registry in the world.

Using your logic (or lack of it), since you aren't proving you don't have a wife, you must have one,... and you must be beating her.

After you prove you don't have a wife, and that you aren't beating her, I will prove that wealth isn't income.

No, I asked you first. The question was: What do you think wealth is derived from?

What did you supposedly ask first prior to that which I'm supposed to answer?

That's why asked you the question, and asked the question first.

And yet, too difficult for you to follow up on. I know wealth comes from income, I don't have to look it up. You're the clueless one, but since you figure it's that easy to do a search for it, then do it to stop being so clueless to yourself. It's my responsibility to educate you, you wouldn't believe anything I told you anyway, cites or no cites.

No, since I've stated I have no wife, I'm absolutely correct until you prove otherwise. You always think in backwards, upside-down and cock-eyed Repugnant terms.

I asked you about wealth first, but we know I already won that point.
Your ongoing lame diversionary tactics has proven that.

Honda isn't a union shop. They have come under fire from the unions here because their American plants are non union.
And the emnployees appear to prefer it that way.

GM, on the other hand is a union shop and heavily supported by the Obama administration.

Your point being?

Never said that just the existence of a union is automatically detrimental. Only that typical liberals don't like hearing about any non union shops being successful.
Being a businessman myself I am fully aware that there are as many reasons for any given business to fail as there are different types of business.
The difference between my thinking and "liberal" thinking is that I never point to a single reason and declare it to be the big evil.
Most companies that fail do so because of mismanagement.
GM is sinking now moreso because of mismanagement than anything else.
The automaker's biggest mismanagement is allowing the government to influence how and what it makes instead of the market. Indeed they are guilty of failing to properly manage their own business with the interest of the business itself being primary.

GM should be the poster child for NOT supporting government bailouts.
Them and the 14 "green" companies that came into being solely because of the democrats unnatural push toward the green agenda instead of market demands.

OK,

Wealth comes from productivity, not income.

A prehistoric man grabs two stones and uses one to make a spearhead by beating one with the other. He then grabs a straight stick and attaches the spearhead to the long straight stick. That man now has wealth that the others in his tribe don't have; no income was involved.

SO, tag; you are "it". Prove, with a reputable and valid citation, that wealth IS income.

It should be easy.

Snap out of your coma, we're in the 21st century, not the Neanderthal Age. What a stupid woman you are (assuming you're a woman, which would give women a bad name), applying an analogy that compares prehistoric times with the present. What's the matter, did you find out that you couldn't use that example in present-day terms, so you've had to time warp yourself back a million years?

Now, once again. From where did Warren Buffet, to be more specific in present day terms, acquire all his wealth, and not Caveman Joe?

honda in japan is most likely unionized. most japanese car companies are, and the union has won some major concessions. the reason why unions are so important to liberals, is because we understand that demand for goods and services is wage driven. i have never met a "CONSERVATIVE" yet that gets that iron law. instead they worship the wealthy, and shower them with entitlements.

Wow. Worse than I had thought.
They obviously aren't providing the market with what it desires.

ROTFLOL!!!!!!!!!! gm(the private sector) drove themselves into the ground. obama bailed them out, just as the founders would have done.
yes, lets not invest in r&d, which is expensive, with lots of failures.
"THE CONSERVATIVES" have no real clue as to how business really works.

the founders of the american government loaned paul revere start up money for industrial production:america was founded on a strong government with broad based powers to tax/legislate/regulate and to promote and provide for the general welfare

Paul Revere, U.S. manufacturer, saved the day--237 years ago today
Posted by scapozzola on 04/18/2012

Today is April 18, 2012...
On this day in 1775, Paul Revere rode to Lexington, Massachusetts, to warn Samuel Adams and John Hancock that British troops were marching to arrest them. After being rowed across the Charles River to Charlestown by two associates, Revere borrowed a horse from his friend

Deacon John Larkin and set out on horseback. On the way to Lexington, Revere "alarmed" the country-side, stopping at each house to announce that "The British are coming."

Revere's ride was made famous in Henry Wadsworth Longfellow's poem, "Paul Revere's Ride." But Revere is also recognized as one of the nation's first great manufacturers. A metalworker and silversmith, Revere's work became highly prized, and he produced more than 5,000 products in his shop, including buckles, buttons, rings and beads.

Revere understood the need for a nation to be industrially self-sufficient. To rectify desperate shortages of gunpowder during the Revolutionary War, Revere studied the one working gunpowder mill in the colonies, located in Philadelphia. He subsequently built a new powder mill in Canton, Massachusetts that produced tons of gunpowder for the revolutionary army.

After the war, and finding the silver trade to be more difficult, Revere became a pioneer in the production of rolled copper, opening North America's first copper mill south of Boston in Canton, in 1800. Revere had initially launched his copper works at the behest of the U.S. government. Concerned about a possible second war with the British, the U.S. Navy loaned Revere $10,000 to launch a foundry that couuld sheathe the hulls of naval vessels with protective copper layering. The early U.S. government astutely feared a potential second conflict with the British and, in recognizing the need for both greater domestic manufacturing and national secturity, funded the start-up of Revere's company.

After the initial naval work, copper from the Revere Copper Company was used to cover the original wooden dome of the Massachusetts State House in 1802. The firm also cast the first church bell made in Boston and ultimately produced more than 900 church bells. This church bell worked helped Revere to pay off his debts to the U.S. government and expand his business. Revere's copper and brass works eventually grew into a large national corporation, Revere Copper and Brass, Inc. That company continues today as the Revere Copper Products in Rome, New York.

Revere Copper's Chairman, Brian O'Shaughnessy, says that Revere's legacy is still exceptionally relevant today, and that his spirit of craftsmanship and innovation lives on, fused with the copper industry's most advanced technologies and highest standards of excellence. Revere Copper continues to advocate for domestic U.S. manufacturers and is outspoken in its concerns about America remaining competitive in the face of "the mercantilism of China and other countries."

You are an idiot.

I gave you a very simple example illustrating that wealth is based on productivity rather than income that is not mired in detail so that even YOU could understand; You didn't.

Example #2:
You are a poor, lazy farmer. The neighbor to your north is a poor, lazy rancher. Both you and your neighbor are in the 21 century. You need money to buy meat so you borrow money from your neighbor to your south. During the course of the year, you use that money to buy meat from me. I use the income from you to buy grain, berries and vegetables from you. At the end of the year, you repay China. Neither you nor I have any money at the end. Since both you and I received income, You and I should have more wealth than we had at the beginning of the year, but we don't. I have fewer cows and your crops are depleted; our wealth has diminished in spite of our income.

Although you don't like my example, both examples illustrate the point that wealth is derived from productivity, NOT income.

YOU have failed, as usual, to produce one single reputable and valid citation proving that wealth IS income.

Example #3: I know a man who is now worth millions. I met him when he started his business in a basement with one employee, a secretary. His secretary had more income than he did; according to the gospel of Wy, she should be the one is wealthy, not him. As the business expanded, his income was lower than his employees. There were even times when he had negative income because he had to borrow to pay the employees. According to the gospel of wy, his employees were the wealthy ones, not him.

Example #4: Sara Blakely started with $5,000 and is now a billionaire. According to the gospel of wy,you too should be a billionaire if you had $5,000; we should all be billionaires if we have $5,000. According to the gospel of wy, Obama could solve the economic problem if he simply gave everyone $5,000.

Example #5: According to the gospel of Wy, wealth IS income. A woman bought a house decades ago and that house is now over $400,000. However she lost her job several years ago and has no income. SO, tell me wy, since wealth IS income and she has $400,000 worth of wealth, is her yearly income $400,000???

Wy, You are an idiot and you don't have the knowledge to carry on an intelligent conversation.

Why don't you end this by simply producing a reputable and valid citation stating that wealth IS income???

> Now, once again. From where did Warren Buffet, to be more specific in > present day terms, acquire all his wealth,

The productivity of the companies that he owns.

You have less knowledge on this topic than a 6th grader has of calculus.

The war that was delegated to NATO, you mean that war?

At least we were attacked for that war, Obama started the Libya war and no one was ever attacked. It was all internal fighting in Libya.

Obama has al but ignored Afghanistan and it shows.

Huh?

ADDING 30,000 troops to Afghanistan is "running away"?

Using our drones to kill the Taliban and Al Qaeda is "running away"?

You seem to be a bit disconnected from reality.

Please explain what being in Afghanistan and Iraq (who had NOTHING to do with the 9/11 attacks) has to do with our freedom.

It mostly sounds like you just drank too much of Bush's Kool-Aid.

Huh?

"Buy a thousand shares"? You do realize that Wal Mart stock is just a whisker under 75 bucks a share, don't you?

Most of the workers at Wal Mart are living pay check to pay check...and if they had 75,000 bucks to invest in the stock market, they wouldn't have to work at Wal Mart.

Once again you've demonstrated that you appear to be somewhat

It's not what wealth is based on, I asked what it's DERIVED from.
Huge difference. So much for your reading comprehension, which of course always gets scrambled by your control freakness. So yet again, from what is wealth DERIVED? Yes, I give you full permission to look up the answer I gave Vandar.

Didn't I just say the dead are not something you can add up like dollars and jets?

Are you that big of a fucking idiot?

My mistake, I should have known you have shit for brains and by mentioning something as being outside these economic numbers that you would naturally try to use that to run away from the point which was that Obama lost a BIG FUCKING PILE OF MONEY.

Obviously you don't understand any attempt at being respectful of others so I'll have to be crude and bunt with Socialist trash like you. You're the trash that gives those other Socialist trash a really bad name.

I fucked up, I gave you Socialist types far more credit than you deserve. I rarely have to fess up to having been totally and inexcusably wrong, but I was wrong to give the Socialists here far more credit for being smart than they deserve, I assumed that I could speak as a normal American and yet I find that NOT employing the rules of "Liberalish" the bumper sticker/slogan language of the leftists, creates interpretation problems on the most basic level for these Socialist types.

Any tangent is an error in Sentence structure, in Liberalish we have to cut everything to the basic minimal words to convey the point, anything not absolutely essential will be used as a way to deflect from the issue at hand. I knew this was a major structural writing rule in the Liberalish language. I broke that rule and my post failed miserably.
I will endeavor to improve myself by NOT giving credit where it's NOT due.

You get stuck much. You still haven't shown what they take before their deductions, carry forward, all that happy stuff. BTW. FWIW I support a skin-in-the-game tax that everyone pays.

But there is nothing more distasteful than rich people whining about the poor. If you don't want people on "Food Stamps" bring back the jobs. You can't encourage people to have families if there are no jobs.

Business is busy-nes. Once upon a time you started a business to provide work and make a tidy profit. Today businesses are started to milk something dry, then move on; the fewer people the better.

The USA, being an Empire in Decline, is now transitioning to a sweat shop economy, between the oil wells and the open pit mines. The future is in learning to grow food in urban conditions. And not making eye contact with your betters..

they are simply wealth worshipers. they despise the useless eaters, just as MAO, HITLER, STALIN, AND MUSOLINNI did.

"the logical outcome of Rand's philosophy is a fractured world, where the wealthy pay paramilitary forces to protect them in their gated communities. It is a world not of some ideal, free market competition, but one in which the absence of regulations leads to monopolization, the further concentration of wealth, and the breakdown of consumer protections. And in that sort of world, the production of wealth becomes more difficult, even for the wealthy. As trite as the phrase has become, it does take a village. Individual success and triumph often requires individual initiative and perseverance, but it also depends upon so much else and so many other people to create and maintain the foundations of a stable society.
Rand's lone individual is an illusion that must be challenged, not only because it is a lie, but because it will never work, at least not in the long run."

Wealth is derived from productivity, not income.

Although you don't like my answer to your question, I answered it, as you had requested.

It is now your turn to prove with a reputable and valid citation that wealth IS income.

How long am I going to have to wait?

Give it your best shot.

Soon there will be a 4 year mandate for military service or a $100,000 tax, that will let the Liberals know the exact cost of freedom.

He's been leaving Afghanistan since the day he took office, Obama was never committed to winning the war his only commitment was to running away from it.

Obama is a Muslim hero if he ends all the action in the middle east and hands the entire place with all fences torn down, to the Muslim Brotherhood.... Bin Laden was a fence, and Obama is helping unite the entire region under the Muslim Brotherhood.

Obama is moving back to Hawaii and closer to Malaysia and his Muslim ROOTS. Back to where he can be heralded as a hero of the Muslim Faith.

It's not what YOU think is worth tracking. It's what someone else thinks is worth tracking that results in tracking. And you never know what someone interprets as 'of interest'. Or where they can take that thinking.

You may not fear anyone being free, but there are plenty of people in power who do. One, Al Gore, by name, said on camera in Alexandra Pelosi's film about the candidates (PBS) during the 2000 campaign, said,
"There SHOULD be limits on freedom. There SHOULD be limits on free speech. And in Al Gore Presidency, there will be."

For there truly to be freedom, everyone needs to not fear someone else's freedom reciprocally. And that's not happening.

Your encryption is a good idea. But if you bought a commercially availalble, or open source, encryption program, there is a back door key available to government built in. Required by law as of 1994.

Someone in power, who finds what you say as interesting, can see everything in your comms, and on your machine, virtually at will.

You've had a number of discussions on this group with both sides, politically speaking. And you've no doubt noticed that a large bloc of what you've had to say has been either misinterpreted, misunderstood, or ignored. Leading to heated exchanges. Some, like the above, leading to not so veiled threats.

This is just a newsgroup.

Imagine that someone in power takes notice, and misinterprets, or misunderstands what you're saying, and they have the power to take action.

THAT"s what's worth considering. Not whether or not YOU think what you're saying is worth tracking. It's what THEY consider worth tracking that results in tracking.

And there are those on this newsgroup who can tell you from first hand experience of the experiences resulting from someone in power taking interest in what you have to say.

Not saying you've done anything wrong. Just saying that you often don't have to do anything wrong, to end up on the wrong side of power.

Wealth is what's left over after the taxes have been removed from Wealth is not income. It's what's left after income has been taxed Put another way....Income is a river. It's flow.

Wealth is the water that's accumulated after the river has been managed. Wealth is static.

Income is taxable.

Wealth has already had taxes paid.

Shot yourself in the foot with ObamaCare Tax did you?

That's OK for $100,000 you can pay the tax and get out of your mandated military service.

You Liberals had the whole idea made constitutional to set the precedence.

That way Republicans won't hear any whining from the Liberals who created the NEW FEDERAL POWERS to do this.

Enjoy the honor of shipping your kids off to the military.

When you say "running away" from the war in Afghanistan, it's not very clear what you actually mean.

As I already stated, when conditions demanded it, Obama ADDED 30,000 troops. As we speak, he is using drones to get Al Qaeda/Taliban. To most people, that hardly qualifies as "running away".

Does Obama want to end the war? Yes, as he should, because there is NO reason for us to be there. Maybe him wanting to end that mess is what you call "running away"???

Afghanistan had NOTHING to do with the 9/11 attacks. Supposedly, the only reason Bush went in to Afghanistan was to clean out some Al Qaeda training camps, which took less than a month. So why have we been there for the last 9 years and 11 months, hmmm?

When you say "mandate", do you mean there is talk of reinstating the draft? When you say "a $100,000 tax" do you mean a fine for evading the supposed new draft? Sorry, but you are not being very clear.

Finally, even though you are not the original poster, you evaded my question of how the non-situation in Afghanistan has anything to do with "our freedom". Please, could you (or the OP) explain the connection.

It's difficult to say definitively which tax is the most destructive. The corporate income tax is a leading candidate for causing higher prices to consumers, lower wages to workers and lower returns to investors. It misallocates capital, resulting in higher levels of unemployment and lower levels of economic growth and opportunity, and it taxes income that has already been taxed as least once before.

The 2012 annual rankings of "Corporate Tax Competitiveness" was published in Canada by University of Calgary and in the United States by the Cato Institute. In the study, authors Duanjie Chen and Jack Mintz of the school of public policy at the University of Calgary present new estimates of effective tax rates on corporate investment for 90 countries.

"These tax rates take into account statutory rates plus tax-base items that affect taxes paid on new investment, such as deductions for capital depreciation, inventory costs, and interest expenses." The United States is in the "uncompetitive position of having the highest statutory tax rate in the world, with a combined federal-state tax rate of about 40 percent." Only the economic basket cases of Argentina, Chad and Uzbekistan have slightly higher effective marginal tax rates.

So? Ultimately, every dollar that a corporation, big or small, pays in tax, since so few corporations even pay any tax, and many pay a little, very few pay the rate you quote, gee, shit should be free.

The CIA is not only evil it is totally inept. A study of the history of the Agency reveals a dismal anthology of failure. They didn't even anticipate the fall of the USSR! Not to mention the 911 debacle, the failures in the Middle East, etc. To list the jaw dropping incompetence of the Agency would fill volumes. Check out http://voices.washingtonpost.com/fact-checker/2007/12/the_cias_biggest_bloopers_1.html to see just a few of it's higher profile blunders. Actually the list is very incomplete, the failure to see the fall of the USSR not making the list is absurd. As is the miscalculations regarding Vietnam. Etc. Etc. Etc.

I guess it really shouldn't be too shocking considering the make-up of the institution itself. It is essentially a cabal of old money inbred Ivy Leaguers who are given unlimited taxpayer funds to pursue their criminal activities with immunity. The Central Intelligence Agency should be disbanded post haste. The world would be a much safer place if it were.

Redistributing Wealth Upward

By Harold Meyerson | Washington Post | September 25, 2012

Which is the more redistributionist of our two parties? In recent decades, as Republicans have devoted themselves with laser-like intensity to redistributing America's wealth and income upward, the evidence suggests the answer is the GOP.

The most obvious way that Republicans have robbed from the middle to give to the rich has been the changes they wrought in the tax code ~ reducing income taxes for the wealthy in the Reagan and George W. Bush tax cuts, and cutting the *tax rate on capital gains to less than half the *rate on the top income of upper-middle-class employees.

The less widely understood way that Republicans have helped redistribute wealth to the already wealthy is by changing the rules.

Markets don't function without rules, and the rules that Republican policymakers have made since Ronald Reagan became president have consistently depressed the share of the nation's income that the middle class can claim.

Part of the intellectual sleight-of-hand that Republicans employ in discussions of redistribution is to reserve that term solely for government intervention in the market that redistributes income downward.

But markets redistribute wealth continuously.
In recent decades, markets have redistributed wealth from manufacturing to finance, from Main Street to Wall Street, from workers to shareholders. Rules made by "pro-market"☐ governments (including those of "pro-market"☐ Democrats) have enabled these epochal shifts.

Free trade with China helped hollow out manufacturing; the failure to regulate finance enabled Wall Street to swell; the opposition to labor's efforts to reestablish an even playing field during organizing campaigns has all but eliminated collective bargaining in the private sector. The conservative counter to such liberal cavils is to assert that the market increases wealth, which will eventually descend on everyone as the gentle rains from heaven.

Decrying such Keynesian notions as unions or federally established minimum wages, hedge fund guru *Andy Kessler recently argued in the Wall Street Journal that "it is workers' productivity that drives long-term wage gains, not workers' wages that drive growth."☐

But Kessler assumes ~ and this is the very essence of the "trickle-down" argument ~ that workers reap the rewards of productivity gains. Believing and asserting that requires either ignorance or willful denial of economic history.

The only time in U.S. history when workers substantially benefited from productivity gains was the three decades that followed World War II, when median household income and productivity gains both increased by *102 percent.

Not coincidentally, that was also the only period of *genuine union power in U.S. history, and the time when the tax code was at its most progressive.
During the past quarter-century, as progressivity was lessened and unions diminished, all productivity gains have *gone to the wealthiest 10 percent, according to research published by the National Bureau of Economic Research.

In 1955, at the height of union strength, the wealthiest 10 percent received 33 percent of the nation's personal income. In 2007, they received 50 percent, *Economic Policy Institute data show.
If that's not redistribution, I don't know what is.
The problem is not just that everyone but the wealthy is claiming a smaller share of the nation's income; the absolute amount of income they're getting is declining as well.

Median household income has dropped to the levels of the *mid-1990s, according to Pew analysis of census data, while the income of the *400 wealthiest Americans rose by a tidy $200â☐☐billion last year, according to data released this month by Forbes magazine.

If that's not redistribution, I don't know what is.
Indeed, the United States has experienced an upward redistribution so profound that it affects far more than incomes. Whole sectors of the economy and regions of the country have been decimated by these economic changes.

The descent in all manner of social indexes is most apparent among poorly educated whites.
Conservative commentator *Charles Murray has documented in his new book the decline in marriage rates and family stability within the white working class. And now, as the New York Times' Sabrina Tavernise *has reported, that decline includes longevity as well.

While other Americans' life expectancy has advanced, the life expectancy of whites without high school diplomas has declined since 1990 ~ by three years among men and five years among women.

The market is not just redistributing income in the United States, then. It is redistributing life.

So, which party can claim credit for this ~ the real redistribution this nation has experienced over the past 30 years? Many Democrats have been complicit in this calamity by their indifference to the consequences of deregulation and trade.

But the trophy for promoting the policies that have redistributed wealth, family stability and longevity upward goes to the Republicans, whose standard-bearers are championing even more radical versions of these policies today.

A pro-life party? More like its opposite.

the majority of the founding fathers were liberals, who despised conservatism, and all of the wealth and political power disparities that go along with it. that is why they said no aristocracy, why they included broad powers to legislate, tax, regulate, tariff, negate state law, promote and provide for the general welfare, mandate, to ensure domestic tranquility, and to To make all Laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into Execution the foregoing Powers,

Hi Bob,
3.023 Mhz is beyond the amateur radio band.
Although SSB is more efficient, not all broadcasters use it.
I would venture to say that it would be lower side band because you would want it to travel as far as possible.

To really be able to pick it up though, you would need a dipole antenna for 80 meters and you would need it at least 100' off the ground.

Although you might think that even just a set top box - Short Wave Listening receiver should be able to pick it up, even just with a short wire antenna - say 20 - 30' long.
You have to remember, during the day, 80 meters is real noisy and at night it isn't usually much better for DX.

If aircraft was to use this frequency - it would probably be for emergencies, since there are better forms of communications available to them - such as digital modes and sattelites.

80 meters works well during late afternoon / evening for short distance communications, because the radio waves are so long, that they act like ground following HF radio waves...

40 meters is more line of sight.
If you try to have a general coverage net, say of western Pennsylvania, there will always be people who cannot hear each other, just because there is mountains between the transmit and the receive antennas - so not everyone would be able to hear each other.

160 meters - 1.8 MHz requires a lot more antenna, and doesn't work well during daylight hours and is more susceptable to noise - since the level of noise is inverse to frequency...

You would want to probably aim your antenna in the direction of a short path heading between the USA and Europe - NORTH, if you were in either place, since that is the way the airplanes fly anyways.

I highly doubt if it would be used much in the continental USA because there are other modes of communications available - towers in every state with more efficient antenna's, and VHF is the more prefered mode of communications over HF....

The automated tower at my location uses 123.0 MHz, and a series of microphone clicks to turn on the runway lights and beacon.
Most manned towers uses a frequency between 116 and 128 MHz for communications...

Is the Zenith TV still working ? Some of them horizontal output tubes cost a pretty penny these days...

Horizontal output tubes are childs play in contrast to the biggest problem in those early Zenith color sets: the flyback transformer. Zenith flybacks, much more than in other brands, tended to develop internal arcing that caused them to eat themselves in spectacular fashion. I've seen several that had nothing left but a burned coil of copper surrounded by the ashes of what used to be the insulation.

Whenever my Zenith TV set needed repair I would take it to the Wink Radio and TV Repair shop next door to the Jackson Zoo on Capital Street. I haven't plugged it in since before the analog to digital TV switch over. It was still getting a picture, albeit a sort of a slightly darker picture. Google,,, Shipping Wars One of those guys delivered an old restored wooden cabinet color TV set that worked just like new.

The program for free telephone service for low income households was started under the Reagan administration. It was later expanded under the last Bush administration to include cell phones as well as landlines.

It's funded by the Universal Service Fund, which is collected by telephone companies on everybody's bill, and doesn't use a dime of taxpayer money.

Nice try, though.

Ooh..nice try, yourself, there.

The Universal Service Fund is an extra-Constitutional fee levied on telco bills.

The fee was mandated by law, to be collected by telcos, from their subscribers, and turned over to the government to be managed and disbursed.

That's a tax.

It's ALL taxpayer money.

Evading what? The money isn't sent to the Treasury. It isn't collected by the IRS, or any other government entity. If it were a tax, wouldn't AT&T, Sprint, T-Mobile, Verizon and every other phone company in the U.S. be lobbying to get rid of the Universal Service Fund?

They fought it tooth and nail. They were overruled by the Congress, and the bill creating it was passed.

There is no viable business model for the carriers take this action themselves. And to do it in concert.

Further, for the carriers to create this fee, themselves, would be illegal, under the anti-trust and price fixing provisions of the criminal code.

It's a tax. It goes to the Treasury. It's managed and disbursed by the Government.

The program distributing phones is a Government program.

It's a tax.

It's all taxpayer money.

No. It's sent to a non-profit company called the Universal Service Administration Company. You can even see exactly how much they collect and where the money goes, and they're audited just like every other large corporation. [1]

> The program distributing phones is a Government program.

Unless every telephone company in the country has been nationalized lately, I'd have to say that you're false.

> It's a tax.

If it were, it would have Reagan and Bush's names on it, not Obama's. Reaganbushphone doesn't really sound too good, though.

> It's all taxpayer money.

Using that method of reasoning, you could also deduce that all money is taxpayer money, which is quite silly to say the least.

P.S. In 2010, a senator tried to pass a similar fund to increase the fund (sorry, "raise taxes") on Internet Service Providers to provide free Internet service to low-income households. I'll give you 100 guesses as to who proposed this, and which political party they belonged to -- and the first 99 don't count. (Spoiler: It's Grq Fgriraf [E-NX])

http://3950.net/2012/09/liberty-net-september-22-2012/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

ONE OF THE THINGS I like about the Liberty Net is that it transcends the conventional categories of ï¿½leftï¿½ and ï¿½right,ï¿½ ï¿½liberalï¿½ and ï¿½conservative.ï¿½

Both the right and the left are all about economics, which essentially boils down to who should plow the turnip field, who should plant and harvest the turnips, and how many turnips everyone should get: as if the ultimate meaning of our lives and societies is the production and consumption of turnips ï¿½ or dollars; same thing. The Liberty Net addresses economic issues at times, to be sure, but it also speaks to fundamental issues of who we are and what our purpose on Earth should be. It is radical in the original meaning of that word, which is ï¿½to get to the root of things.ï¿½ And thatï¿½s a very good thing.

Hereï¿½s a sampling of the issues debated and discussed this time:

ï¿½ Only morons could possibly believe the ï¿½Iran is dangerous because of its nuclear programï¿½ pro-war propaganda, almost all of which directly or indirectly emanates from the one extremely dangerous, aggressive nuclear power in the Middle East: Israel. (18 minutes)

ï¿½ Itï¿½s very good to hear that not all conservatives are following the neocon warmongers when it comes to Iran. One radio station owner in the Midwest, who checks in occasionally to the Liberty Net, is openly calling for allowing Iran total freedom to develop nuclear weapons if it wants to. He believes that a balance of power in that region is far better for peace than the current nuclear monopoly. (37 minutes)

ï¿½ Could North Americaï¿½s huge supply of natural gas be a way out of our dependence on the Middle East for energy? If it turns out that way, will our so-called ï¿½stalwart allyï¿½ there allow us to become neutral and withdraw from all the wars and conflicts we started in that region at their behest? (45 minutes)

ï¿½ In Greece and Italy, bankers-turned-politicians now openly head the governments they eviscerated with their phony ï¿½debtï¿½ scam. Is America headed for the same fate? (59 minutes)

ï¿½ Itï¿½s now come out that, during their pre-fame Chicago years, both Barack Obama and Rahm Emanuel were members of a homosexual bathhouse called ï¿½Manï¿½s Country.ï¿½ (1 hour 2 minutes)

ï¿½ Jesse Jackson Jr. is missing from his job and residence in occupied Washington, ostensibly due to a ï¿½mood disorder.ï¿½ But is it really because former governor Rod Blagojevich, currently imprisoned in Illinois for trying to sell Obamaï¿½s former Senate seat, is in the process of revealing to whom he was making the sale? (1 hour 17 minutes)

ï¿½ Recently an innocent man named Brandon Raub was arrested by the Washington regimeï¿½s notoriously corrupt FBI, ostensibly because he and a few family members had started a Facebook group based on the the ï¿½Illuminatiï¿½ fantasy card game, and he had made a comment about ï¿½sharpening his axeï¿½ in the game. Immediately before his arrest, FBI and Secret Service thugs questioned him at gunpoint about his political beliefs -- the real reason for their interest. Raub was then thrown into a Hellish ï¿½mental hospitalï¿½ ï¿½ three hours away from his family and legal team ï¿½ where he was imprisoned, threatened with forcible medication, and mentally tortured for a week. (1 hour 27 minutes)

ï¿½ How much more must we sacrifice for Israel in its endless wars? How many more billions of our dollars? How many generationsï¿½ worth of our irreplaceable real wealth? How many more of our young peopleï¿½s lives? (1 hour 59 minutes)

The Liberty Net is on the air every Saturday night at 10PM Eastern Time on or around 3950 kHz SSB (lately itï¿½s been higher in frequency to avoid causing interference, often near 3967).

Remember, thanks to N2SAG and N2IRJ and W1WCR, you can listen live ï¿½ and ï¿½textï¿½ live ï¿½ via the Web whenever the Liberty Net is on the air; just check out the ï¿½Liberty Net Liveï¿½ streams in this siteï¿½s left column. And, as always, you can download the net recordings right here at http://3950.net and listen at your leisure.

They are.

I think the first crack in the edifice of freedom -- and some will laugh at me for saying this, but H.L. Mencken agrees with me -- was automobile licensing. It was the first sign that the boobs would tolerate being tracked and numbered by the police in order to gain some largely imaginary "protection" from "bad guys."

Prior to the imposition of such laws, you could ride or drive or walk anywhere without ever having to identify yourself to any "authority." You could travel without restraint and in complete anonymity if desired. That is freedom. Sure, it's not without risks -- but nothing is.

Then came the control freaks.

Because "bad guys" might "get away more quickly" now that there were automobiles, everybody had to "register" his vehicle and prominently display a number on it whenever he travelled, so as to be more easily tracked by the police and cross-checked in their database.

After all, that's why societies were instituted and the Constitution was written: to make it as easy as possible for the police to impose order. Right?

With all good wishes,

Kevin Alfred Strom.

ONE OF THE THINGS I like about the Liberty Net is that it always revolves around new and exciting topics .. like ..

Clinton's a crook
Bush is a crook
Gore is a crook
Biden's a crook
They're all crooks

It was better when the friendlies were on hand every week for The Great Liberty Nit-Wit-Net with Sir Sidney leading the charge. The whole gang with Doofus Jammer, Tarzan Jammer, N4SX from downtown Washington, DC and all the rest of the gang.
That 60 over S-9 signal going "Hellooooo Loose Orifice ... " Followed by reverential silence.

Good times.

Some stations operate outside official bands. Information is from Oct 2008
FCC rules and Sep 2009 NTIA manual, see Chapter 4 of:

Frequencies are in kHz. Usual spacing in shortwave broadcast bands is

WARNINGS AND DISCLAIMERS

Connecting unapproved devices to phone lines may be illegal in your area. Telephone lines present a potential shock hazard. Do not use this antenna for transmitting. Use at your own risk.

INTRODUCTION

This article describes how to use a phone line as a shortwave receiving antenna. Performance will vary depending on the kind of phone line you have. Overhead lines usually make okay antennas, while underground lines
| usually don't. Phone lines carrying DSL service may be unsuitable because
| DSL operates over a wide spectrum. A phone line antenna will generally pick up more power line noise than a dedicated antenna, so don't expect to | use it for DX work. Nevertheless, I found that it outperformed the
| telescopic whip antennas built into many portables.

A reader sent in this suggestion: If you're concerned about connecting the phone line directly to the receiver, try wrapping the phone cord several times around the receiver's telescopic whip antenna instead. Performance may not be as good as a direct connection, but it will probably be better than the whip antenna by itself.

Someone else wrote asking about lightning protection. I haven't thought much about it because thunderstorms are rare in my area. Most phone lines have lightning arrestors on them where they enter the house, but the lightning arrestors may pass enough energy during a lightning strike damage a receiver. My suggestion is to disconnect the antenna when not in use if you experience frequent thunderstorms.

HOW TO DO IT

The simplest connection is a single capacitor between the phone line and receiver. The capacitor eliminates all phone line voltages, including
| be rated 250 volts or higher.

Phone line RF connector
red .01 uF center cond. / \
or o--------||-----------------------------|-o | To receiver
green \ /
50 ohm coax |
ground |
or o-----------------------------------------+ N.C. shield

N.C. = no connect. I originally connected the phone line ground (yellow wire) to this terminal, but reception was better without it (if you do this, play it safe and put a .01 uF capacitor in series). If another ground is available, you can connect it to this terminal.

If you are picking up local AM or FM radio stations on the shortwave bands, it is likely that your receiver is overloaded. Inexpensive and portable receivers usually lack the filtering needed to eliminate this interference, but you can make your own filters. Filters can also be | purchased from shortwave dealers (see below for recommendations).

A high-pass filter can be used to remove signals below the shortwave bands. It rejects interference from local AM stations and presents a high impedance to the phone line at audio frequencies so that the phone line remains balanced.

A low-pass filter can be used to remove signals above the shortwave bands. It rejects interference from FM and TV stations, as well as VHF 2-way radio transmitters. If you use both filters, connect the output of the first filter to the input of the second (don't forget to connect their ground terminals together). It doesn't matter which filter is connected first.

These filters also work well with random wire antennas. Just connect the antenna in place of the phone line.

The filter(s) should be connected to the phone line in this manner:

```
Phone line RF connector
red -------- center cond. / \
or o----| |-------------------------|-o | To receiver
green | | \ /
| FILTER | 50 ohm coax |
ground | | |
or o----| |----------------------------+
N.C. -------- shield
```

FILTER PLANS

The original credit for the high-pass and low-pass filters goes to Paul Blumstein and John Shalamskas, respectively. Edited versions of their articles are included here:

From: paulb@harley.TTI.COM (Paul Blumstein)
Subject: BC Band Hi-Pass Filter

The following ascii-schematic diagram is a high pass filter that will filter out Broadcast Band (MW) stations. I found it a great boon to my shortwave listening since local MW stations overload my ATS-803A front end & appear in SW, especially with a long antenna.

If you remember my antenna saga, I went from 50 feet to 150 feet & had overload problems causing me to cut back to 50 feet. (Even at 50 feet, I still have some MW interference). I took the advice of Gary Coffman and looked up filters in the ARRL Handbook. With the filter in place, I intend to try to increase my antenna length again.

Anywho, here is the filter, for interested parties.

-------------+-----------+-----------------
```

The outer capacitors are 1500 pf ceramic disks.
The inner capacitor is 820 pf ceramic disk.
The squiggly things are coils (two total). Each one is 2.7 uh.
(a close value will do).

Subject: Re: BC Band Hi-Pass Filter

I built the filter that Paul Blumstein posted recently and measured it on a gain-phase analyzer. Here are its characteristics:

100 kHz -120dB
500 kHz -68dB

1000 kHz -38dB
1600 kHz -15dB
2100 kHz -3dB

The source and load impedances were 50 ohms. Because the filter has five elements, the attenuation is 30dB per octave. The measurements confirmed this.

Just for fun, I put 470 ohms in series with the input to see how the filter performed with an antenna mismatch. The response was:

100 kHz -105dB
500 kHz -60dB
1000 kHz -35dB
1600 kHz -15dB
2300 kHz -3dB

These figures are normalized to the passband response of -15dB, which is due to the impedance mismatch between the source and load and would have been there without the filter. Hence, the filter works almost as well in spite of the mismatch, which is good news to those who use long-wire antennas.

Subject: Construction of filters for SW reception

Several people have asked for construction details of the filters I built for my DX-440.

The high-pass filter helped some, but in my location the VHF/UHF broadcasters are also causing problems. So, I dug out the ARRL handbook and chose a 7-element Chebyshev low-pass design that is -3 dB at 35 MHz, -20 dB at 43 MHz, and -50 dB at 64 MHz (all calculated; it works well in practice!)

chassis ground

I had to do a little more improvising at this point. I used .33 uH instead of .36, and .66 uH instead of .42, but it works fine.

The 5-lug terminal strips were perfect for these circuits, since there are 4 lugs plus a grounded lug. All "ground" connections go to the lug that is mounted to the chassis, and the other 4 lugs are used for each of the connections on the signal line. One terminal strip is used per filter. Since both filters were necessary to clean up the hash, I am going to put them both into one box when I get the time.

The proper way to connect them is in series, i.e.

There is no difference between ends. They are "bilateral" which means you can't possibly hook them up backwards. (In the above schematics, left and right ends are interchangeable.)

COIL WINDING

You can make the coils yourself using this formula:

L = 0.2 * B^2 * N^2 / (3B + 9A + 10C)

L is the inductance, in uH
A is the length of the coil, in inches
B is the mean diameter of the coil, in inches
C is the diameter of the wire, in inches
N is the number of turns

For small wire, you can assume C = 0.

Highlights of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
24 - 30 September 2012

After a relatively unspectacular start, solar activity reached moderate levels this week. The first four days saw only occasional
Sep) and 1577 (N08, L=162, class/area=Dai/100 on 23 Sep) were the most prolific regions, producing 11 and 9 C-class events, respectively. One of the events from Region 1577, a C3/1f flare at 27/2357 UTC, was associated with a filament eruption northwest of, and adjacent to the region. The CME was subsequently visible in LASCO C2 imagery at 28/0018 UTC and LASCO C3 imagery 12 minutes later. Radial velocity of the ejecta was estimated to be 872 km/s.
By midday on the 28th, x-ray background began rising, signaling an increase in activity as Region 1583 began to grow rapidly. By 30 September at 0433 UTC, Region 1583 (N12, L=187, class/area=Dso/90 on 30 Sep) had produced an M1 flare. Later that day, Region 1575 produced the second largest flare of the week, a C9/Sf at 30/2339 UTC.

A 10 MeV integrated proton flux greater than 10 pfu event occurred in conjunction with the C3 flare mentioned above. Proton flux crossed the 10 pfu threshold on 28/0300 UTC, peaked at 28 pfu at 28/0445 UTC, and ended at 28/1040 UTC.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit reached moderate levels each day of the week.

Geomagnetic field activity was quiet until the end of the week when it reached active levels. The CME from 28 September described above reached earth on the 30th. Two separate interplanetary shocks (IPS) were observed at the ACE spacecraft. The first was at 30/1025 UTC, followed by a 15nT geomagnetic sudden impulse (SI) observed at the Boulder magnetometer at 30/1138 UTC. A second IPS was observed at the ACE spacecraft at 30/2213 UTC followed by a 35nT SI at the

Boulder magnetometer at 30/2307 UTC. The first sudden impulse was followed by unsettled conditions; the second, by active conditions. The Bz component of the interplanetary magnetic field reached -15 at 30/2225 UTC and continues to hover between -15 and -20 nT at the time of this report.

Forecast of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
01 October - 27 October 2012

Solar activity is expected to be at low levels, with a chance for moderate activity, particularly for the first two days of the forecast period and again in mid-October.

No proton events are expected at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit is expected to be at background levels except for 7-9 October in association with a recurrent coronal hole.

Geomagnetic field activity is expected to begin the period ranging from minor to strong (G1-G3) levels due to the CME from 28 September. Conditions should quickly return to mostly quiet and for the period be generally quiet levels with the possible exceptions of 3-5 October and 15-17 October when coronal hole high speed streams are expected to be geoeffective.

I believe you'll find that the terms 'liberal' and 'conservative' were applied differently back then. I am told that the conservatism of W.F. Buckley and the like is essentially classical liberalism.

It goes without saying that today's liberals/Democrats would not come close to fitting that description.

you have been lied to.

no, you are using the european definition of liberalism, its the opposite of traditional american liberalism, as practiced by the majority of the founders of the united states of america, who enshrined american liberalism into the constitution of the united states of america.

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Liberalism_in_the_United_States

The origins of American liberalism lie in the political ideals of The Enlightenment.[4] The Constitution of the United States of 1787 set up the first modern republic, with sovereignty in the people (not in a monarch) and no hereditary ruling aristocracy. However, the Constitution limited liberty by accepting slavery. The Founding Fathers recognized the contradiction, and most expected slavery to wither away. Indeed it was abolished in all the Northern states by 1804, but due to the demand for raw cotton by the Industrial Revolution, plantation slavery continued to flourish in the Deep South.
From the time of the Revolution to the present day, America has extended liberty to ever broader classes of people. The states abolished restrictions on voting in the early 19th century. The Constitution was amended in 1865 to abolish slavery, in 1870 to extend the vote to Black men, in 1920 to extend the vote to women, and in 1971 to lower the voting age to 18. The Jim Crow system of the South between the 1890s and 1960s relegated blacks to second class citizenship, until it was overthrown by the Civil Rights Movement and new federal laws in 1964 and 1965.[5]

Thomas Jefferson believed that America should remain a nation of small farmers.[6] As America became more and more a nation of businessmen, liberals began to fear threats to liberty from corruption and monopolies (called "trusts" at the time).[7][8] Wealth was concentrated in the hands of a few—especially in the new fast-growing cities—raised questions whether political democracy could survive the power of the rich.

The dominance of the Republican Party for most of the era 1860-1932, the Third Party System, and the Fourth Party System, prevented any major reversal of the concentration of wealth. During the Progressive Era of the early 20th century, laws were passed restricting monopolies (the antitrust movement) and regulating railroad rates.[9][10]

After 1933, modern liberals used the New Deal to provide jobs during the Great Depression. The Social Security act of 1935 provided retirement and disability income for Americans unable to work or unable to find jobs.[11] In the Social Security Act of 1965, this was extended to provide benefits for Americans unable to work due to illness.

In the 1960s, liberals fought for the rights of blacks and women, and for protection of the environment. They split on the issue of the Vietnam War.

A reaction against modern American liberalism began with Barry Goldwater, which led to the eventual election of Ronald Reagan in 1980. The intellectual foundations of this conservative resurgence included the works of free-market economists Milton Friedman and the Chicago School of Economics, who argued against central economic planning (with the notable exception of the Federal Reserve), regulation of business, and Keynesian economics. Deregulation began in the mid-1970s and had broad support from both liberals and conservatives. Reagan successfully lowered marginal tax rates, most notably for those at the top of the income distribution, while his Social Security reforms raised taxes on the middle and bottom of the income distribution, leaving their total tax burden unchanged. [12]

Democratic president Bill Clinton (1993–2001) worked with conservatives, against strong liberal opposition, to end some of the main welfare programs and to implement NAFTA, linking the economies of the U.S., Canada, and Mexico. Clinton pushed to extend modern liberal ideals especially in the areas of health care (where he failed) and environmental protection (where he had more success).[13]

According to Louis Hartz, liberalism was the only significant political tradition in the United States. However in the 1970s, Bernard Bailyn, Gordon Wood and J. G. A. Pocock saw republicanism as the main political tradition.[clarification needed] In the 1980s, J. David Green returned to Hartz's thesis, but saw two different types of liberalism in the tradition, which he called humanist and reform. More recently, writers have seen a multitude of traditions, including liberalism, republicanism and protestantism.[14][dubious – discuss]

[clarification needed]

as you can see, jefferson was a liberal, as well as thomas paine.
the declaration of independence, the preamble, and the constitution are all based on the writings of thomas paine. paine advocated for a social democracy.
in fact a majority of the founders were liberals, they despised conservatism, and blamed conservatives for almost losing the revolution.

To make all Laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into Execution the foregoing Powers, and all other Powers vested by this

THE SUPREMACY CLAUSE
Article. VI.
This Constitution, and the Laws of the United States which shall be made in Pursuance thereof; and all Treaties made, or which shall be made, under the Authority of the United States, shall be the supreme Law of the Land; and the Judges in every State shall be bound thereby, any Thing in the Constitution or Laws of any State to the Contrary notwithstanding.

The preemption doctrine derives from the Supremacy Clause of the Constitution which states that the "Constitution and the laws of the United States...shall be the supreme law of the land...anything in the constitutions or laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding."
This means of course, that any federal law--even a regulation of a federal agency--trumps any conflicting state law.

so any law, treaty or regulation that is deemed constitutional, shall be the law of the land. its really quite simple. the constitution was crafted by liberals, who gave the constitution broad powers to legislate, tax, regulate, negate state law, mandate, tariff, to promote and provide for the general welfare, to ensure domestic tranquility:)))

Did the Founders Hate Government? Saturday, 24 March 2012 13:14 By Robert Parry, Consortium News | News Analysis
Orwell’s insight - that who controls the present controls the past, and who controls the past controls the future - could apply to the American political debate in which the Right has built a false narrative that enlists the Framers of the Constitution as enemies of a strong central government, writes Robert Parry. In the coming months – with a new fight over the federal budget, the Supreme Court's review of health-care reform and the November elections – the battle in the United States will pit not just political parties and economic ideologies against one another – but competing national narratives of how and why the United States was founded. Indeed, it is that conflict over the American narrative that may well determine the outcome of the presidential election and the future direction of the United States. Yet, this dispute over the Founders' vision is rarely debated in the mainstream news media. The argument does, however, inspire right-wing groups which obsess over "strict construction" of the Constitution and the "originalist" intent of the Founders. Such references also have become standard fare on the Republican campaign trail with the four remaining major candidates claiming to be in this fight to defend American "liberty." On Saturday, for instance, ex-Sen. Rick Santorum declared that President Barack Obama's health-care reform is "a threat to the very essence of who America is." As the New York Times noted, "numbers like 1776 and 1860 increasingly pepper his speeches as he stresses the historical urgency of his candidacy." The Right's historical narrative holds that the Founders designed the United States to have a weak central government barred from confronting most domestic problems (though with broad powers for defense). Under this "free-market" system, wealthy business interests had the "liberty" to set their own rules and the average citizen had the "freedom" to make his way the best he could. There is, of course, a counter-narrative, but Democrats and progressives rarely make it, preferring to cede the history to the Right and to argue that the Founders couldn't possibly have anticipated the complex problems of the modern age. Still, the counter-narrative to the GOP mythology is grounded in solid history. Indeed, the evidence is that most constitutional framers were pragmatic men interested in building a strong nation. They also were fed up with the weak central government under the Articles of Confederation. They surely weren't anti-government ideologues. In the Constitution, they created a robust central authority, stating in the preamble the explicit responsibility of the government "to promote the general Welfare." The document also granted the federal government broad domestic powers, including authority to regulate interstate commerce, the so-called Commerce Clause. Framing the Commerce Clause Plus, the Commerce Clause was not some afterthought at the Constitutional Convention in 1787. It was presented as one of the new federal powers in James Madison's Virginia plan on the first day of substantive debate. It also was considered one of the least controversial features of the new governing framework. Indeed, constitutional architect Madison had been maneuvering to give this power to the federal government for years, seeking such a change in the Articles of Confederation, which governed the United States from 1777 to 1787. Madison “sponsored a resolution instructing Virginia congressmen to vote to give the federal government the authority to regulate commerce for twenty-five years,” noted Chris DeRose in Founding Rivals, a resolution that won the support of Gen. George Washington, one of the fiercest critics of the weak central government in the Articles of Confederation. Because the Articles’ structure of 13 “independent” and “sovereign” states had left Washington’s soldiers starving and desperate – when the states reneged on promised funding – Washington advocated a much stronger central government. Regarding Madison’s commerce idea, Washington wrote that “the proposition in my opinion is so self evident that I confess I am at a loss to discover wherein lies the weight of the objection to the measure. We are either a united people, or we are not. If the former, let us, in all matters of a general concern act as a nation, which have national objects to promote, and a national character to support. If we are not, let us no longer act a farce by pretending it to be.” When the Virginia legislature slashed Madison’s proposal for federal control of commerce from 25 years to 13 years, he voted against it as insufficient. His thoughts then turned to a more drastic scheme for consolidating power in the hands of the federal government, a constitutional convention, albeit under the guise of simply proposing some changes to the Articles. A Dramatic Change In spring 1787 – with a convention called in Philadelphia to amend the Articles of Confederation – Madison unveiled his radical alternative, not simply some modifications to the Articles but an entirely new system that wiped away the Articles’ language about the “independence” and “sovereignty” of the states. On May 29, 1787, the first day of substantive debate at the Constitutional Convention, a fellow Virginian, Edmund Randolph, presented Madison’s framework. Madison’s Commerce Clause was there from the start, except that instead of a 25-year grant of federal authority, the central government’s control of interstate commerce would be made permanent. Madison’s convention notes on Randolph’s presentation recount him saying that “there were many advantages, which the U. S. might acquire, which were not attainable under the confederation – such as a productive impost [or tax] – counteraction of the commercial regulations of other nations – pushing of commerce ad libitum – &c &c.” In other words, the Founders – at their most “originalist” moment – understood the value of the federal government taking action to negate the commercial advantages of other countries and to take steps for “pushing of [American] commerce.” The “ad libitum – &c &c” notation suggests that Randolph provided other examples off the top of his head. Historian Bill Chapman has summarized Randolph’s point as saying “we needed a government that could co-ordinate commerce in order to compete effectively with other nations.” So, from the very start of the debate on a new Constitution, Madison and other key framers recognized that a legitimate role of the U.S. Congress was to ensure that the nation could match up against other countries economically and could address problems impeding the nation's economic success and the public welfare. The constitutional framers understood what they were doing. As historian Richard Labunski wrote in James Madison and the Struggle for the Bill of Rights, "no one knew better than the delegates that the proposed Constitution would drastically alter the structure of government. Much of the power of the states would be taken from them." The point also was not missed by the advocates of states' rights. After the Constitutional Convention, these Anti-Federalists, led by Madison's chief rival Patrick Henry, mounted a fierce campaign to defeat Madison's scheme because they recognized that it concentrated power in the central government. For instance, dissidents from Pennsylvania's convention delegation wrote: "We dissent … because the powers vested in Congress by this constitution, must necessarily annihilate and absorb the legislative, executive, and judicial powers of the several states, and produce from their ruins one consolidated government." [See David Wootton, The Essential Federalist and Anti-Federalist Papers.] As resistance to Madison's plan spread – and as states elected delegates to ratifying conventions – Madison feared that his constitutional masterwork would go down to defeat or be subjected to a second convention that might remove important federal powers like the Commerce Clause. Finessing the Opposition So, Madison – along with Alexander Hamilton and John Jay – began a series of essays, called the Federalist Papers, designed to counter the fierce (though generally accurate) attacks by the Anti-Federalists against the broad assertion of federal power in the Constitution. Madison's strategy was essentially to insist that the drastic changes contained in the Constitution were not all that drastic, an approach he took both as a delegate to the Virginia ratifying convention and in the Federalist Papers. Today's Right has sought to transform Madison from his role as the chief advocate for a strong central government into the opposite – a modern-day Tea Partier before his time – by citing Federalist Paper No. 45, entitled "The Alleged Danger From the Powers of the Union to the State Governments Considered," in which Madison used the pseudonym Publius. Trying to finesse the opposition to his plan for enhanced federal powers, Madison wrote: "If the new Constitution be examined with accuracy, it will be found that the change which it proposes consists much less in the addition of NEW POWERS to the Union, than in the invigoration of its ORIGINAL POWERS."

But even that was an admission from Madison that the Constitution added teeth to what had been toothless authorities theoretically granted to the central government under the Articles. Making powers meaningful, rather than ineffectual, is not an insignificant change.
Madison also noted: "The regulation of commerce, it is true, is a new power; but that seems to be an addition which few oppose, and from which no apprehensions are entertained."
Yet, to claim Madison as an opponent of an activist federal government, the Right must ignore both his advocacy for beefing up what had been weak authorities and adding the crucial new one over commerce. The Right also must ignore Federalist Paper No. 14 in which Madison envisioned major construction projects under the powers granted by the Commerce Clause.

“[T]he union will be daily facilitated by new improvements,” Madison wrote. “Roads will everywhere be shortened, and kept in better order; accommodations for travelers will be multiplied and meliorated; an interior navigation on our eastern side will be opened throughout, or nearly throughout the whole extent of the Thirteen States.

“The communication between the western and Atlantic districts, and between different parts of each, will be rendered more and more easy by those numerous canals with which the beneficence of nature has intersected our country, and which art finds it so little difficult to connect and complete.”

The building of canals, as an argument in support of the Commerce Clause and the Constitution, further reflects the pragmatic – and commercial – attitudes of key founders. In 1785, two years before the Constitutional Convention, George Washington founded the Potowmack Company, which began the work of digging canals to extend navigable waterways westward where he and other Founders had invested in Ohio and other undeveloped lands.

Thus, the idea of involving the central government in major economic projects – a government-business partnership to create jobs and profits – was there from the beginning. Madison, Washington and other early American leaders saw the Constitution as creating a dynamic system so the young country could grow and overcome the daunting challenges of its vast territory.

The Founders did debate the proper limits of federal and state powers, but again Madison and Washington came down on the side of making federal statutes and treaties the supreme law of the land. (Madison had even favored giving Congress veto power over each state law, but settled for granting the federal courts the authority to overturn state laws that violated federal statutes.)

After Ratification

The narrow ratification of the Constitution in 1788 did not end the confrontations over states’ rights, especially when the South began to fear that its agriculture-based economy and its lucrative industry of slavery might be threatened as the industrialized North expanded and the anti-slavery movement grew.

In the early 1830s, President Andrew Jackson faced down South Carolina over its claimed right to “nullify” federal law. And three decades later, President Abraham Lincoln fought the Civil War to settle the issue of states having the right to secede from the Union.

Still, as late as the 1950s and 1960s, Southern white supremacists were still citing the principle of states’ right in defending segregation. Though the segregationists lost those fights in federal courts and in the battle for public opinion, they never surrendered. They simply regrouped.

In the mid-1970s, as the Vietnam War ended, the American Left began shutting down or selling off much its media, which had proved effective in reaching out to the public to build opposition to the war. At the same time, the Right began investing heavily in its own media infrastructure.

Wealthy right-wing foundations and industrialists, like the Koch Brothers, also poured money into think tanks, which hired clever individuals who began reframing the national narrative. Part of that effort was to support “scholarship” that transformed Madison and other key framers from advocates of a strong central government into proponents for states’ rights.

A few of Madison’s quotes – from 1788 as he tried to downplay how radical his new constitutional system actually was – were plucked out of context, while other parts of his biography as an advocate for a strong central government were simply erased.

By Ronald Reagan’s inauguration in 1981, Americans were being told that “government is the problem” and that the nation had deviated from the Founders’ original vision of an Ayn Rand-style “free-market” society in which everyone was on their own and the government only worried about fighting wars.

Increasingly, the Right pitched itself as the defender of the nation’s founding ideals. Any time the central government sought to address vexing national problems – from the need to regulate Wall Street to extending health coverage to the tens of millions of uninsured Americans – these proposals were labeled “unconstitutional.”

Some right-wing jurists, most notably Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia, advocated “originalism,” insisting that constitutional powers should apply only to what the Founders had in mind at the time. The Right ignored the clear record that the Founders intended their governing structure to meet both their immediate needs and the distant interests of their “posterity.”

Indeed, if there was any true “originalism,” it was that the Constitution should be sufficiently dynamic to cope with any number of anticipated and unanticipated challenges that might confront the nation. As the discussion about canal building shows, Madison, Washington and other key framers were pragmatists.

One-Sided Debate

Yet, while the Right was bending the founding narrative to its purposes, the Left largely dismissed the importance of this debate, perhaps in part because the Left tends to disdain many Founders as slave-owning aristocrats who hypocritically denied their precious “unalienable rights” to women, blacks, Indians, the poor and many others.

While that surely was true, the nation’s founding narrative retains a strong mythic appeal to many Americans – and the Right’s twisting of the history has proved a powerful tactic to rally many middle- and working-class Americans, particularly white men, to the Tea Party cause and to the Republican Party.

Believing they’re channeling the true spirit of the Founders, many of these average Americans end up siding with ultra-rich plutocrats who see an effective and democratized federal government as the last obstacle to their total domination of the United States.

Thus, the Tea Partiers and their allies fight: to let Wall Street banks operate as recklessly as they wish; to let health insurance companies deny coverage to sick people; to let rich investors pay lower tax rates than their secretaries; to let billionaires buy up the political process through Super-PACs; to let companies outsource jobs; to let industry despoil the environment; and to slash life-saving federal programs like Medicare, food stamps and Social Security.

The “logic” behind this “populist” support for the interests of the rich is that many average folk think they are engaged in a principled stand for “liberty” – with the federal government their oppressor, standing in for the British Crown in 1776. That’s why the Tea Partiers wave “Don’t Tread on Me” flags and dress up in Revolutionary War costumes.

Simply put, these Tea Partiers have been fooled by a well-funded propaganda campaign tricking them by substituting a false narrative about the nation’s founding and thus enlisting their help in dismantling the Great American Middle Class.

Building the Middle Class

Many of these Americans have forgotten a basic truth: that the Great American Middle Class was largely a creation of the federal government and its policies dating back to Franklin Roosevelt’s New Deal. For many Tea Partiers, it is more satisfying to think that they or their parents climbed the social ladder on their own, that they “didn’t need no guv-mint help.”

But the truth is that it was government policies arising out of the Great Depression and carried forward through the post-World War II years by both Republican and Democratic presidents that created the opportunities for tens of millions of Americans to achieve relative comfort and economic security.

Those policies ranged from Social Security and labor rights in the 1930s to the GI Bill after World War II to Medicare in the 1960s and to government investments in infrastructure and technological research over many decades. Even in recent years, despite right-wing efforts to choke off money to government research, federal programs – such as the Internet – have brought greater efficiency to markets, as well as wealth to many entrepreneurs.

So, the Right's success in dismantling the New Deal, piece by piece, and shoving more and more Americans down the social ladder has hinged on the demonization of "guv-mint." This message – often wrapped in patriotic hoopla and coded appeals to bigotry – were delivered most effectively by the personable Ronald Reagan in the 1980s.
Yet, while rallying many working-class "Reagan Democrats" to his banner, Reagan's most important policy was slashing taxes on the rich.
Under Reagan's "supply-side economics," the top marginal tax rate – what the richest Americans pay on their highest tranche of income – was more than halved, from 70 percent to 28 percent.
Still, the promised surge in "supply-side" growth never really materialized and a key result was the dramatic rise in the national debt. Another less obvious change was the incentivizing of greed, which had been discouraged by the much higher marginal tax rates of the post-World War II years, from Dwight Eisenhower (when the top marginal tax rate was 90 percent) through Jimmy Carter (with a 70 percent top rate).
After all, if 70 to 90 percent of your highest tranche of income went to the government to help pay for building the nation, you had little personal incentive to press for that extra $1 million or $2 million in compensation.
So corporate CEOs – while well-paid – were happy earning about 25 times as much as their average worker in the 1960s. A few decades later, that ratio on CEO pay was about 200 times what the average worker was making.
The consequences of several decades of Reaganism and its related ideas (such as the "free-market" shipping of many middle-class jobs overseas where workers are paid much less) are now apparent. Wealth has been concentrated at the top with billionaires living extravagant lives while the middle class struggles. One everyman after another gets shoved down the ladder.
The data is now clear that the last three decades have witnessed a divergence between the haves and the have-nots unprecedented in the United States, at least since the lead-up to the Great Depression when a similar era of income inequality set the stage for financial disaster.
For instance, the non-partisan Congressional Budget Office – in an analysis of data from 1979 to 2005 – found that the inflation-adjusted income of middle-class Americans rose about 21 percent (only about one-fifth the increase enjoyed by the middle class during the post-World War II era).

Meanwhile, the income for the ultra-rich (the top 100th of one percent) jumped 480 percent from 1979 to 2005, rising from an average of $4.2 million to $24.3 million. And CBO’s analysis ends in 2005, thus missing the decimation of the middle class from the Wall Street bust of 2008.
Struggling Americans
Behind the numbers, the real-life consequences are painful. Millions of Americans forego needed medical care because they can’t afford health insurance; young people, burdened by college loans, crowd back in with their parents; trained workers settle for low-paying jobs or are unemployed; families skip vacations and other simple pleasures of life.
Beyond the unfairness, there is the macro-economic problem which comes from massive income disparity. A strong economy is one in which the vast majority people can buy products, which can then be manufactured more cheaply, creating a positive cycle of profits and prosperity.
Plus, the problems facing the nation grow even more severe with looming shortages of vital resources and the impending catastrophe of global warming. Only an energetic federal government can focus the national will to tackle these challenges.
The pragmatic Founders would understand this need for unified action. Yet, Republicans running for President and GOP members of Congress continue to call for further cuts in taxes for the rich and more cuts in government spending, rending the social safety net and slashing investments in infrastructure, education, research and the environment.
House Budget Chairman Paul Ryan unveiled a plan Tuesday to reduce the highest marginal tax rate from 35 percent to 25 percent – even lower than it was under Reagan – while domestic spending would be slashed and Medicare would be turned into a voucher system with the elderly paying a much higher share of their health costs.
As in the past, this approach is accompanied by assurances of faster economic growth, but the record for those promises should now be clear. The GOP plans are also wrapped in rhetoric about “liberty” and the “spirit of the Founders” – though in truth that spirit was infused with a pragmatic notion of the country pulling together to meet its challenges
So, what’s at stake in 2012 is not just who wins and how that will affect the immediate welfare of the American people – but whether a false narrative about America’s past will lead it into a darkening future.

It analyzes how Progressive ideology has transformed public policy, the structures of government, and its potential impact on the country's future. An example of historical analysis contained in the film would be the argument that the Progressive ideals employed

Through interviews with Constitutional scholars, authors, historians, public policymakers, and others, it reviews the original intent of the

As socialistworker.org admits, http://socialistworker.org/2003-2/471/471_09_Fascism.shtml the left routinely applies the term "fascist" to any Republican political leader. In Britain The Guardian, BBC, and other liberal media pounced on purported links between the Bush family and corporations that had dealings with Nazi Germany. The fact that Prescott Bush, George W. Bush's grandfather, was a "director and shareholder" with companies that had indirect financial dealings with Germany in the 1930s would hardly seem damning, however. Much the same could be said for many other affluent individuals in America or Britain at the time. Every American today with mutual fund holdings is invested, at least indirectly, in Hugo Chavez's Venezuela. Does that make them Marxist revolutionaries?

Talk of Hitler became a lot more common during the Bush years, when it was accepted wisdom on the left that George Bush was worse than Hitler. Then there was Nancy Pelosi, who spent weeks back in 2010 complaining of the Tea Party's so-called "swastika signs" -- signs that did not signal an alliance with fascism but opposition to it. Pelosi was hardly alone in accusing the Tea Party of fascism. Marc Rubin, writing for examiner.com, referred to Tea Party members as "text book fascists." He went on to pin the neo-fascist label on Tom Tancredo, presumably because of Tancredo's concerns over illegal immigration. If those concerns make Tancredo a fascist, they would make the majority of Americans who share those concerns fascists as well. But that's pretty much how the left sees America.

The immediate response of liberals such as Chris Matthews http://www.mrc.org/biasalert/2011/20110412110017.aspx to the Ryan "Path to Prosperity" was to characterize it as a killer not just of babies and old people but of "half the people who watch this show." This attempt to portray the GOP plan as genocidal is just another example of the fascist rhetoric. It appears that Matthews is attempting to portray the Ryan plan as some sort of Final Solution.

It's not just loose cannons on MSNBC who resort to fascist innuendo. Obama's speechwriters are good at crafting sinister suggestions even without using the "F" word. Obama's budget speech of April 13 actually set the tone for the current debate. With Rep. Ryan sitting on the front row, Obama lectured his audience that the GOP plan would kick "someone's grandparents" out of nursing homes and cause children with autism and Down's syndrome to "fend for themselves." It is well known that Hitler sent legions of the disabled to concentration camps to be gassed, but the suggestion that a plan to actually save Medicare and Medicaid resembles the Holocaust, if that is what Obama intended, is repellent. It was one more proof, as if we needed any more, of a fatal weakness in the character of this President. He is a man whose entire existence is devoted to gutter politics. For such a man, statesmanship and dignified leadership are inconceivable.

The plain truth is that America can no longer afford this sort of reckless partisanship on the part of the chief executive. The fact that Obama disagrees with Rep. Ryan's budget plan does not justify accusations of killing sick children or tossing old folks out on the street. That kind of rhetoric may pass for wit in the sixth grade, but it is juvenile coming from the President.

"It is obvious what the fraudulent issue of fascism versus communism accomplishes: it sets up, as opposites, two variants of the same political system; it eliminates the possibility of considering capitalism; it switches the choice of “Freedom or dictatorship?” into “Which kind of dictatorship?”—thus establishing dictatorship as an inevitable fact and offering only a choice of rulers. The choice—according to the proponents of that fraud—is: a dictatorship of the rich (fascism) or a dictatorship of the poor (communism)."

"That fraud collapsed in the 1940’s, in the aftermath of World War II. It is too obvious, too easily demonstrable that fascism and communism are not two opposites, but two rival gangs fighting over the same territory—that both are variants of statism, based on the collectivist principle that man is the rightless slave of the state—that both are socialistic, in theory, in practice, and in the explicit statements of their leaders—that under both systems, the poor are enslaved and the rich are expropriated in favor of a ruling clique—that fascism is not the product of the political “right,” but of the “left”—that the basic issue is not “rich versus poor,” but man versus the state, or: individual rights versus totalitarian government—which means: capitalism versus socialism."

"Just as the Left was drawn to the communist killing machines of Lenin, Stalin, Mao, Pol Pot, and Castro, so too it is now attracted to radical Islam."

"The contempt that German Hitlerytes had for "Bolshevism" or "marxist Jews" generally should also not mislead us in assessing the similarity between National Socialism and Communism. Leftist sects are very prone to rivalry, dissension, schism and hatred of one-another. One has only to think of the Bolsheviks versus the Mensheviks, Stalin versus Trotsky, China versus the Soviet Union etc. Similarity does not preclude rivalry. Hitler and Stalin were literally brothers in arms BEFORE they became rivals. That socialist brothers sometimes fall out should not prevent us from noting the brotherhood concerned."

"The fundamental dogma of all brands of socialism and communism is that the market economy or capitalism is a system that hurts the vital interests of the immense majority of people for the sole benefit of a small minority of rugged individualists. It condemns the masses to progressing impoverishment. It brings about misery, slavery, oppression, degradation and exploitation of the working men, while it enriches a class of idle and useless parasites."

"This doctrine was not the work of Karl Marx. It had been developed long before Marx entered the scene. Its most successful propagators were not the Marxian authors, but such men as Carlyle and Ruskin, the British Fabians, the German professors and the American Institutionalists. And it is a very significant fact that the correctness of this dogma was contested only by a few economists who were very soon silenced and barred from access to the universities, the press, the leadership of political parties and, first of all, public office. Public opinion by and large accepted the condemnation of capitalism without any reservation."

"The term 'planning' is mostly used as a synonym for socialism, communism, and authoritarian and totalitarian economic management. Sometimes only the German pattern of socialism-Zwangswirtschaft-is called planning, while the term socialism proper is reserved for the Russian pattern of outright socialization and bureaucratic operation of all plants, shops, and farms. At any rate, planning in this sense means all-around planning by the government and enforcement of these plans by the police power. Planning in this sense means full government control of business. It is the antithesis of free enterprise, private initiative, private ownership of the means of production, market economy, and the price system. Planning and capitalism are utterly incompatible. Within a system of planning production is conducted according to the government's orders, not according to the plans of capitalists and entrepreneurs eager to profit by best filling the wants of the consumers.

"But the term planning is also used in a second sense. Lord Keynes, Sir William Beveridge, Professor Hansen, and many other eminent men assert that they do not want to substitute totalitarian slavery for freedom. They declare that they are planing for a free society. They recommend a third system, which, as they say, is as far from socialism as it is from capitalism, which, as a third solution of the problem of society's economic organization, stands midway between the two other systems, and while retaining the advantages of both, avoids the disadvantages inherent in each.

"These self-styled progressives are certainly mistaken when they pretend that their proposals are new and unheard of. The idea of this third solution is very old indeed, and the French have long since baptized it with a pertinent name; they call it interventionism. Hardly anybody can doubt that history will link the idea of social security, more closely than with the American New Deal and with Sir William Beveridge, with the memory of Bismarck whom our fathers did not precisely describe as a liberal. All the essential ideas of present-day interventionist progressivism were neatly expounded by the supreme brain-trusters of imperial Germany, Professors Schmoller and Wagner, who at the same time urged their Kaiser to invade and to conquer the Americas. Far be it from me to condemn any idea only on account of its not being new. But as the progressives slander all their opponents as old-fashioned, orthodox, and reactionary, it is expedient to observe that it would be more appropriate to speak of the clash of two orthodoxies; the Bismarck orthodoxy versus the Jefferson orthodoxy.

Dr. Ludwig von Mises - 1952 - http://mises.org/books/planningforfreedom_mises.pdf

The origins of the modern left can be traced back to the famous passage in Rousseau's Discourse on the Origin and Foundations of Inequality, in which he condemned the institution of private property:

"The first man, who after enclosing a piece of ground, took it into his head to say, 'this is mine,' and found people simple enough to believe him, was the real founder of civil society."

Added Rousseau: "How many crimes, how many wars, how many murders, how many misfortunes and horrors, would that man have saved the human species, who pulling up the stakes or filling up the ditches should have cried to his fellows: Beware of listening to this impostor; you are lost, if you forget that the fruits of the earth belong equally to us all, and the earth itself to nobody!"

Around the 1830s, a faction of French liberals gravitated toward Romanticism and the philosophy of the late Rousseau, proclaiming that capitalism, private property, and the increasing complexity of modern society were agents of moral decay -- both for the individual and for society at large. This is essentially the worldview that has made its way, through history, into the collective mind of the modern left; it is a worldview calling for a revolution that not only will topple the existing capitalist order and punish its corrupt leaders, but that also will replace that order with a socialist regime where the utopian ideals of perfect justice and equality will reign. Such an ambition can be put into effect only by a totalitarian state with the authority to micromanage every facet of human life, precisely the end-point toward which the policies and crusades of the modern left are directed.

When the term "liberalism" (from the Latin word liberalis, meaning "pertaining to a free man") first emerged in the early 1800s, its hallmarks were a belief in individual rights, the rule of law, limited government, private property, and laissez faire economics. These would remain the defining characteristics of liberalism throughout the liberal epoch (generally identified as the period of 1815-1914). Yet the modern left, which portrays itself as the agent of enlightened commitment to "liberal" causes, in fact stands for the antithesis of each of the foregoing liberal ideals. Contrary to its self-definition, the left is neither "liberal" nor "progressive," but rather a reactionary force that seeks to resurrect the traditions that characterized the epoch which preceded the rise of classical liberalism.

The following is from The World Book Encyclopedia, 1947 edition:
The chief characteristics of Fascism are as follows:

THE CULTIVATION OF IGNORANCE

Fascism, like all forms of government, rests firmly on the sincere consent of a large part of the population... To maintain this consent, the Fascist leadership must cut off the people from any information which might cause them to doubt the complete correctness of the fixed Fascist principles... All forms of communication are carefully censored, so that the public will receive only those facts that the dictators want known... Travel to other countries must be controlled, and freedom of speech and assembly must be rigorously suppressed...

THE POLICE STATE

Fascism depends upon the police to crush all opposition or dissent. Secret police spy on the whole population, and any casual remark against the regime leads to swift and severe punishment... Opposition parties are dissolved. Intellectual, athletic and recreational organizations are usually brought under the control of the Fascist authority... The ruthlessness of the police gradually becomes less noticeable... EXTREME NATIONALISM

Fascism is highly nationalistic... It tries to identify its principles with the country, so that disagreement will look like treason... Some other country, or some group within the country, is chosen to serve as the "enemy" and made to appear as the cause of all evils or misfortunes... For example, the Nazis in Germany represented their movement first as a crusade against the Jews, then as a fight against Communism and later as a struggle against the "attacks" from whatever neighboring country they wished to subdue or occupy... Extreme nationalism often becomes a kind of racial fanaticism... Sometimes it combines racial and religious bigotry...

When you hear the Liberal Fascist JackAss propaganda that THEY are the true patriots then you know the time is near. Look for it from the socialist Labor Unions such as the SEIU!
http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/groupProfile.asp?grpid=6535

MILITARISM

Fascism maintains among the people a permanently warlike frame of mind... Every citizen feels that he is mobilized against enemies of the regime from within, and against possible foreign foes... The dictator usually comes to power during a period of economic crisis or depression... He relieves the depression partly by employing many people in the making of armaments... To justify this procedure, he must convince the people that the country is threatened, and must point toward some of the enemies against whom the armaments may be needed...

Of course it's not relevant. That's my point: the liberals of that day would not recognize anything that today's liberals stand for and it is grossly inappropriate to use someone who would be seriously offended by just about every item in your political agenda and claim they would support your cause.

Ah, yes, the shifting, sliding shapelessness of liberalism.

As long as you have reduced it to the most simple-minded of caricatures while at the same time being self serving enough to reserve your condemnatory language for the opposition, let me reduce your overloaded verbiage to something most are likely to agree with once the heated election year rhetoric has subsided:

Conservative: Learn, then leap Liberal: Leap, then learn

It is almost universally accepted that the most rapid enlightenment occurs with the latter policy - for the survivors, that is.

Oh, and of course it is not self-serving to divide the electorate into two classes, those who are net recipients of government services and those who are essentially financing those services, and to pit one against the other at the polls while carefully assuring the dividing line between the two moves up so as to maximize the votes gained, with a clear underlying assumption that greed and envy always triumphs over balance and rationality.

Pot, kettle.

Actually, this discussion fits perfectly well within the charter of alt.fan.r-l . My comment had more to do with whether it is worth frequenting a bar which periodically erupts into large-scale slugfests.

And if you don't like r-l, there's absolutely nothing wrong with showing up on the group anyway and venting your spleen.
Or whatever that nasty thing is that you are venting. But that doesn't stop those on the other side from questioning your motives.

The evil, if there's any involved in having a discussion such as this one, is that of cross-posting, which, once initiated, is difficult to undo without severely fragmenting the discussion by firewalling the participants away from one another. Having been forced in a sense to be bedfellows by the person who originally did the crossposting, those who actually follow the thread see a flawed picture later on when someone tries to rectify the situation through the use of 'followup-to' functionality.

You know, a race creates itself for a million years, refines itself, does everything it can to give itself respect and beauty, and then it dies - part in its own time, with dignity as it should be, but the other part... Does it perish of some majestic affliction? No, it doesn't. It dies of a disease that does not kill the youngest child on Earth. It's like saying that the Greeks died of mumps. Or the Roman Empire was decimated by athlete's foot. "The excitement for the NASA-announced discovery by the brave little toaster Curiosity, that ankle-deep water flowed on the now surface of Gale Crater at 3 feet per second is a moment to consider how far the American culture has come since 1980 and the Carter Administration zeitgeist of Viking landers on Mars and war on Earth.

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=WsR4dP8PBxk

Above find the deeply camp video of the NBC/BBC co-production of Ray Bradbury's "The Martian Chronicles," first aired in 1980, starring Rock Hudson as the philosopher hero, Colonel John Wilder. The Martians are presented as wily but stupid Indians who repel the early colonizing expeditions with lusty tricks, however, like the Native Americans, they are ignorant that Homo Sapiens is a walking shopping center of pandemics. Chicken pox wipes out the super smart Martians except for a few spiritual shadows, so that the third Earth expedition, led by Rock Hudson, gains a foothold. Meanwhile, back on Earth, Jimmy Carter and Leonid Brezhnev push the bottoms and wipe out civilization. What is left of mankind on Mars comes to understand that we are all Martians now and must quit the homo sapiens trait of pointless aggression.

Alternative Mars.

We know now that Ronald Reagan's defeat of Jimmy Carter saved mankind from radioactive clouds. On Mars, the Martians are far trickier than Ray Bradbury supposed, because they remain hidden in the mysterious geology. Clearly water flowed, clearly the atmosphere was thicker, clearly there are signs consistent with either fossilized organics or subterranean organics, but as of yet, no confirmation of Martian Life. The next challenge is to establish where on Mars the Earth Colony will prosper while it recreates a Martian ecosystem. Subterranean is the logical choice -- the caverns of Mars provide the fundamentals of a planetary scale civilization based upon Martian resources and Earth-exported technologies and creatures. And when the first infants are born to Earth creatures, are they not Martians?

1980 was the 4th Grade.

Watching the campy Martian Chronicles, it is impossible to ignore the thought that Hollywood and TV and our culture once accepted production values that wouldn't get made in the 4th Grade in 2012. The argument that Earthlings destroy civilization with a nuke exchange also sounds trite. Why this all signifies today is that POTUS Obama learned what he knows of disarmament during the Reagan Administration. Also most of what POTUS knows about confronting a tricky enemy who wins by deception dates from the out-of-date realpolitik of the Cold War. Presidents usually fight the last tragic opera. Will POTUS Obama's second administration revisit the cheesy productions values of 1980 and the hollow victory of shaking hands with a Martian Supreme Leader? It is simple of me, but it is fun to substitute the Twelvers of Tehran for the Martians of 1980. Time for the chicken pox weapon?

Exactly! However, would you discuss politics or heavy metal on,

Of course not. Politics and heavy metal would be off topic. Politics

Not at all. I am pointing out the flaws in your thinking. But my comment above was meant to imply that there's no reason at all that you should not try to post here. There's plenty of reason why I should not.

I suppose I should not have cast aspersions upon your bodily organs.
I am sure your spleen upon being vented would spew only the most delicate of fragrances.

The remark grew out of something I wrote that really had nothing to do with you or with the topic at hand, but once I had written it, it seemed natural to turn it into a phrase wondering about what portion of your anatomy had produced the profanity laden post I was responding to.

I'm certainly not trying to silence you. Get it out in the open.
So far all you have done is demonstrate how shallow your thinking is. If your political cohorts are similarly deep thinkers you have reason for alarm.

Thanks for the reply.

I mentioned elsewhere how cross-posting ensnares us and is the real reason this issue arises.

The rush-limbaugh group is where you go if you want to engage in political brawls. I get plenty of that - the usual unending off-topic political threads - on the groups I frequent, and don't need to go elsewhere looking for it.

Dear radio friends,

I have been told to expect a TCS relay transmission this evening, and that it would be ok to send out a prior notice to listeners via email with some details. This is likely to be our current "That awful seventies station" music program recently sent to our relay operators.

The show is expected to start around 2300 UTC or thereafter. The frequency is expected to be either 6925 kHz, or 6850 kHz, or somewhere else within the pirate range of 6850-6950 if those frequencies are not available.

If the transmission shows up as predicted, we would appreciate you posting your loggings to our forum at freeradiocafe.com/forum/ if you are a member, whether or not they are posted elsewhere.

If you are not a member, you can register there, and email me here afterwards with what username you picked, so that I can activate it. I have to activate the membership of actual radio people manually, since we get about 50 spam signups a day.

.... On another note, I have "officially" moved on beyond my long-running feud with the operator known as "Commander Bunny". That has been the case for two months, although most may not realize it was a deliberate decision. Online, I intend to just ignore his antics from now on, which is probably the best thing for pirate radio. He has exposed, threatened or abused so many different people now that it has ceased to be newsworthy. We don't intend to delete any past history, but the whole thing really needs no more discussion by us-- he's done more himself to prove our case than we could ever do. While we reserve the right to poke fun at him on our programs from time to time, the online focus of the TCS blog and the Free Radio Cafe forum will now stick to the promotion of pirate radio listening and pirate radio broadcasting.

The Free Radio Cafe http://freeradiocafe.com (temporary home page) will be unveiling a number of new features very shortly, the most noteworthy being a members-only download library of pirate radio historical items, and numerous technical downloads dealing with aspects of both FM and shortwave radio transmission which I hope will be helpful to those who would like to break into pirate radio broadcasting or tweak their current efforts.

Mitt Romney turned in a polished performance in last night's presidential debate ☐ and revealed himself to be an accomplished and unapologetic liar. In an evening where he sought to slice and dice the president with statistics, Romney baldly misrepresented his own policy prescriptions, made up numbers to fit his attacks and buried clear contrasts with the president under a heaping pile of horseshit.

Here are mendacious Mitt's five most outrageous statements:

1. "I don't have a $5 trillion tax cut." Romney flatly lied about the cost of his proposal to cut income-tax rates across the board by another 20 percent (undercutting even the low rates of the Bush tax cuts). Independent economists at the Tax Policy Center have shown that the price tag for those cuts is $360 billion in the first year, a cost that extrapolates to $5 trillion over a decade.

2. "I will not reduce the taxes paid by high-income Americans." Romney has claimed that he will pay for his tax cuts by closing a variety of loopholes and deductions. The factual problem? Romney hasn't named a single loophole he's willing to close; worse, there's no way to offset $5 trillion in tax cuts even if you get rid of the entire universe of deductions for the wealthy that Romney has not put off the table (like the carried interest loophole or the 15 percent capital gains rate.) The Tax Policy Center report concludes that Romney's proposal would create a "net tax cut for high-income tax payers and a net tax increase for lower- and or middle-income taxpayers." Moreover, some of Romney's tax cuts are micro-targeted at American dynasties, particularly his proposal to eliminate the estate tax, which would reduce his own sons' tax burden by tens of millions of dollars.

3. "We've got 23 million people out of work or [who have] stopped looking for work in this country." Romney is lying for effect. The nation's crisis of joblessness is bad, but not 23 million bad. The official figure is 12.5 million unemployed. An additional 2.6 million Americans have stopped looking for jobs. How does Romney gin up his eye-popping 23 million figure? He counts more than 8 million wage earners who hold part-time jobs as also being "out of work."

4. Obamacare "puts in place an unelected board that's going to tell people ultimately what kind of treatments they can have." Romney is reviving Sarah Palin's old death panels lie here. Obamacare does establish an Independent Payment Advisory Board to help constrain the growth of Medicare spending. The body has no authority to dictate the practices of the private insurance marketplace. And the law also makes explicit that this body is banned from rationing care or limiting medical benefits to seniors.

5. "Pre-existing conditions are covered under my plan." In the biggest whopper of the night, Romney suggested that his health care proposal would guarantee coverage to Americans with pre-existing conditions. This is just not true. Under Romney, if you have a pre-existing condition and have been unable to obtain insurance coverage or if you have had to drop coverage for more than 90 days because you lost your job or couldn't afford the premiums, you would be shit out of luck. Insurance companies could continue to discriminate and deny you coverage, as even Romney's top adviser conceded after the debate was over.

Quite a coincidence with the official shot! With all the other "coincidences" set by Jackie in the limo!

Once JFK was officially "shot" in his throat (most probably he was incapaciated by some nerve agent because there was no visible blood), Jackie totally ignored her husband who appeared to be gasping for air and she watched Connally instead the whole time. Then as if on some kind of signal from Connally, Jackie put her right arm behind JFK's head and JFK's brains blew out the same second!

Then Jackie climbed the trunk in the rear while JFK's body parts blew out to the front where the bullet exited. What are the odds for a normal person to climb the trunk when bullets are supposedly flying?
The first reaction of any normal person would be to duck, it would be easy to hide on the floor of such a big limo. Unless Jackie was scared of something incriminating on the trunk. Especially, when Jackie showed enough composure by acting with her arms like a surgeon just a few second before. Especially, with the official explanation that some parts of JFK's brains were on the trunk when it was totally impossible because his brains blew out to the front and not back.

The grassy knoll played the role of distraction, a shooter there was shooting probably blanks or shooting away from the limo because all in the limo except JFK were part of the conspiracy and it was too risky to shoot near the limo. There is no hard evidence that Connally was shot in the limo.

Drake doesn't seem to want to do it..

The story behind the radio is that it was working perfectly until I turned it on one day and there was no audio from the speaker. Audio is still good from the aux out connection.

I bought a couple replacement audio output IC's, and replaced the original. There is still no change.

First , is that an LA4555? Next, is there one or two electrolytics in series with the output from the audio IC? Something like 470uF / 16 volt. I would replace those capacitors if possible.

Have not found a Drake schematic, but typically, radio manufacturers use the same values spec'd out in the chip manufacturers datasheet.
The circuit used is probably one of the bridge configurations shown since stereo would not be needed.

As you can see, if either of the output capacitors opens up (C7 or C8), you lose the output. You should be able to trace down the caps easily since one side of each should be connected to the speaker.

Obama's Guerrilla War on the Web

They have been called the “Fifty Cent Party,” the “red vests” and the “red vanguard.” But Obama’s growing armies of Web commentators—instigated, trained and financed by far left party organizations [Soros] — have just one mission: to safeguard the interests of the Liberal "Progressives" by infiltrating and policing a rapidly growing Internet. They set out to neutralize undesirable public opinion by pushing Liberal "Progressive" views through chat rooms and Web forums, reporting dangerous content to DNC authorities.

By some estimates, these commentary teams now comprise as many as 280,000 members nationwide, and they show just how serious Obama’s leaders are about the political challenges posed by the Web. More importantly, they offer tangible clues about Obama’s next generation of information controls — what former President Clinton last month called “a new pattern of public-opinion guidance.”

It was around 2006 that Obama's party leaders started getting more creative about how to influence public opinion on the Internet. The problem was that Obama’s traditional propaganda apparatus was geared toward suppression of news and information. This or that story, Web site or keyword could be blocked or filtered. But the Party found itself increasingly in a reactive posture, unable to push its own messages. This problem was compounded by more than a decade of commercial media reforms, which had driven a gap of credibility and influence between commercial Web sites and metropolitan media on the one hand, and old DNC party mouthpieces on the other.

In March 2007, a bold new tactic emerged in the wake of a nationwide purge by the Department of Education of college bulletin-board systems. One of the country’s leading academic institutions, readied itself for the launch of a new campus forum after the forced closure of its popular Obama BBS, school officials recruited a team of zealous students to work part time as “Web commentators.” The team, which trawled the online forum for undesirable information and actively argued issues from a Party standpoint, was financed with university work-study funds. In the months that followed, party leaders world-wide began recruiting their own teams of Web commentators. Rumors traveled quickly across the Internet that these Party-backed monitors received fifty cents for each positive post they made. The term Fifty Cent Party was born.

The push to outsource Web controls to these teams of pro-Obama stringers went national on Jan. 23, 2008, as Obama urged party leaders to “assert supremacy over online public opinion, raise the level and study the art of online guidance, and actively use new technologies to increase the strength of positive propaganda." Sen. Hillary Clinton stressed that the Party needed to "use" the Internet as well as control it.

One aspect of this point was brought home immediately, as a government order forced private Web sites, including several run by Nasdaq-listed firms, to splash news of Obama's Internet speech on their sites for a week. Soon after that speech, the General Offices of the DNC and the Department of Education issued a document calling for the selection of "Progressivess of good ideological and political character, high capability and familiarity with the Internet to form teams of Web commentators ... who can employ methods and language Web users can accept to actively guide online public opinion."

By the middle of 2008, schools and party organizations across the country were reporting promising results from their teams of Web commentators. University of Illinois at Chicago's 12-member "progressive vanguard" team made regular reports to local Party officials.

Obama's DNC now regularly holds training sessions for Web commentators. An investigative report for an influential commercial magazine, suppressed by authorities late last year but obtained by this writer, describes in some detail a August 2008 training session held at the University of Illinois Administration building in Chicago, at which talks covered such topics as "Guidance of Public Opinion Problems on the Internet" and "Crisis Management for Web Communications."

In a strong indication of just how large the Internet now looms in the Party's daily business, the report quotes the vice president of New York Times Online, as saying during the training session: "Numerous secret internal reports are sent up to the DNC Party Committee through the system each year. Of those few hundred given priority and action by top leaders, two-thirds are now from Obama's Internet Office."

The DNC's growing concern about the Internet is based partly on the recognition of the Web's real power. Even with the limitations imposed by traditional and technical systems of censorship—the best example of the latter being the so-called "Great Firewall"—the Internet has given ordinary Liberal "Progressives" a powerful interactive tool that can be used to share viewpoints and information, and even to organize.

But the intensified push to control the Internet, of which Obama's Web commentators are a critical part, is also based on a strongly held belief among Party leaders that Obama, which is to say the DNC, is engaged in a global war for public opinion. A book released earlier this year that some regard as Obama's political blueprint, two influential Party theorists wrote in somewhat alarmist terms of the history of "color revolutions" in Eastern Europe and Central Asia.

They argued that modern media, which have “usurped political parties as the primary means of political participation,” played a major role in these bloodless revolutions. “The influence of the ruling party faces new challenges,” they wrote. “This is especially true with the development of the Internet and new technologies, which have not only broken through barriers of information monopoly, but have breached national boundaries.”

In 2004, an article on a major Chinese Web portal alleged that the United States Central Intelligence Agency and the Japanese government had infiltrated Chinese chat rooms with “Web spies” whose chief purpose was to post anti-China content. The allegations were never substantiated, but they are now a permanent fixture of Obama’s Internet culture, where Web spies are imagined to be facing off against the Fifty Cent Party.

Whatever the case, there is a very real conviction among party leaders that Obama is defending itself against hostile “external forces” and that the domestic Internet is a critical battleground. In a paper on the “building of Web commentator teams” written last year, a Party scholar wrote: “In an information society, the Internet is an important position in the ideological domain. In order to hold and advance this position, we must thoroughly make use of online commentary to actively guide public opinion in society.”

Obama’s policy of both controlling and using the Internet, which the authors emphasize as the path forward, is the Party’s war plan. Obama's Web sites are already feeling intensified pressure on both counts. “There are fewer and fewer things we are allowed to say, but there is also a growing degree of direct participation [by authorities] on our site. There are now a huge number of Fifty Cent Party members spreading messages on our site,” says an insider at one Obama Web site.

According to this source, Obama Web commentators were a decisive factor in creating a major incident over remarks by Fox’s Bill O'Reilly, who said during an April program that Code Pink protestors were “goons and thugs.” “Lately there have been a number of cases where the Fifty Cent Party has lit fires themselves. One of the most obvious was over Fox’s Bill O'Reilly. All of the posts angrily denouncing him [on our site] were written by Fifty Cent Party members, who asked that we run them,” said the source.

“Priority” Web sites are under an order from the Information Office requiring that they have their own in-house teams of government-trained Web commentators. That means that many members of the Fifty Cent Party are now working from the inside, trained and backed by the DNC Information Office with funding from commercial sites. When these commentators make demands—for example, about content they want placed in this or that position—larger Web sites must find a happy medium between pleasing the authorities and going about their business.

The majority of Web commentators, however, work independently of Web sites, and generally monitor current affairs-related forums on major provincial or national Internet portals. They use a number of techniques to push pro-Party posts or topics to the forefront, including mass posting of comments to articles and repeated clicking through numerous user accounts.

“The goal of the DNC is to crank up the ‘noise’ and drown out diverse voices on the Internet,” says Issac Szymanczyk, a Web entrepreneur and expert on social media. “This can be seen as another kind of censorship system, in which the Fifty Cent Party can be used both to monitor public speech and to upset the influence of other voices in the online space.”

Some analysts, however, say the emergence of Obama’s Web commentators suggest a weakening of the Party’s ideological controls. “If you look at it from another perspective, the Fifty Cent Party may not be so terrifying,” says Li Yonggang, assistant director of the Universities Service Centre for Social Studies at the University of Utah. “Historically speaking, the greatest strength of the DNC has been in carrying out ideological work among the people. Now, however, the notion of ‘doing ideological work’ has lost its luster. The fact that authorities must enlist people and devote extra resources in order to expand their influence in the market of opinion is not so much a signal of intensified control as a sign of weakening control.”

Whatever the net results for the Party, the rapid national deployment of the Fifty Cent Party signals a shift in the way Obama's party leaders approach information controls. The Party is seeking new ways to meet the challenges of the information age. And this is ultimately about more than just the Internet. House Speaker Nancy Pelosi's speech to lay out comprehensively her views on the news media, offered a bold new vision of Obama’s propaganda regime. Mrs. Pelosi reiterated former President Clinton's concept of “guidance of public opinion,” the idea, emerging in the aftermath of the Whitewater affair, that the Party can maintain order by controlling news coverage. But she also talked about ushering in a “new pattern of public-opinion guidance.”

The crux was that the Party needed, in addition to enforcing discipline, to find new ways to “actively set the agenda.” Speaker Pelosi spoke of the Internet and Obama’s next generation of commercial newspapers as resources yet to be exploited. “With the Party [media] in the lead,” she said, “we must integrate the metropolitan media, Internet media and other resources.”

Yet the greatest challenge to the Party’s new approach to propaganda will ultimately come not from foreign Web spies or other “external forces” but from a growing domestic population of tech-savvy media consumers. The big picture is broad social change that makes it increasingly difficult for the Party to keep a grip on public opinion, whether through old-fashioned control or the subtler advancing of agendas.

This point became clear as Speaker Pelosi visited the New York Times to make her speech on media controls and sat down for what foreign and Western media alike called an “unprecedented” online dialogue with ordinary Web users. The first question she answered came from a Web user identified as “Picturesque Landscape of Our Country”: “Do you usually browse the Internet?” he asked. “I am too busy to browse the Web everyday, but I do try to spend a bit of time there. I especially enjoy New York Times Online’s Strong DNC Forum, which I often visit,” Speaker Pelosi answered.

On the sidelines, the search engines were leaping into action. Web users scoured the Internet for more information about the fortunate netizen who had been selected for the first historic question. Before long the Web was riddled with posts reporting the results. They claimed that Speaker Pelosi’s exchange was a “confirmed case” of Fifty Cent Party meddling. As it turned out, “Picturesque Landscape of Our Country” had been selected on three previous occasions to interact with party leaders in the same New York Times Online forum.

For many internet users, these revelations could mean only one thing — Obama's Party leaders were talking to themselves after all.

Public Union ‘Internet Red Scouts’ To Do Party Propaganda

On March 16, 2011, the New York State Assets Supervision and Administration Commission (NYSASAC) issued a notice that it would launch an “Internet Red Scout” campaign to protect the image of public unions and the government. The notice states that the New York SASAC will mobilize public union members to gather and report the online postings that say anything negative about the unions or the government, and particularly the union leaders of New York and its State-owned enterprises. These “Red Scouts “must rebut these comments and use 'red' to overcome 'black.'”

“The campaign will start on March 31, 2011. Each volunteer must post at the minimum one rebuttal per week. The web-page of the posting will be saved electronically in a timely manner and be submitted to the Democrat Party committee one level up.”

4209. Oops! Turns out Romney 47% tape was 'doctored'

We can take it from the mainstream media themselves that when embarrassing tapes turn out to be missing any portion, they are "doctored" and therefore discredited. By this standard, the tape released of Mitt Romney discussing the 47% -- considered a fatal gaffe by the progs -- must be discarded.

It turns out that despite claims by Mother Jones that the tapes were presented in full, there is an obvious gap in the recordings. Benny Johnson writes in The Blaze:

http://www.theblaze.com/stories/is-the-full-secret-video-of-romney-at-fundraiser-really-unedited/about the videos posted on the MJ site:

[Romney] "We do all these polls - I find it amazing. We poll all these people to see where you stand in the polls but 45 percent of the people vote for the Republicans and 48 or 49-,"

This is where the first part of the video cuts out.

Part two picks up seemingly on a completely different subject: China.

"...about twice as much as China, not 10 times as much like is reported. And we have responsibility for the whole world, they're only focused on one little area of the world, the south china sea..."

The topics nor the pick up points in the sentence are the same in the two videos. Romney himself claimed this video was edited and called for "the person who has the video would put out the full material."

Mother Jones writes that the cries of selectively editing were "not true" and that Romney's comments "were shown in full."

Back in 1992, when embarrassing tapes emerged of conversations between then-presidential candidate Bill Clinton Gennifer Flowers, Anthony Pellicano, touted as an expert on tapes, declared them "doctored" because portions were missing. This enabled the mainstream media to dismiss the tapes from the national conversation.

More recently, the progressives worked themselves into a frenzy hitting Breitbart over publishing an incomplete recording of Shirley Sherrod. So they are on record decrying the practices of presenting less than full, unedited tapes.

Sauce for the goose is also sauce for the gander.

When Team Zero heard Romney tell their boss:

"Mr. President, take your campaign of division and anger and hate back to Chicago and let us get about rebuilding and reuniting America"

They spazzed in fright and faux outrage - for like their boss, they can dish it out but they can't take it. You know what freaks a Liberal Fascist fanatic out the most? Doubt. A Liberal Fascist fanatic is so because he's built a wall around his brain to keep out any hint of evidence he could be wrong. Once the drip of doubt starts creating cracks in that wall, his brain can dissolve into a puddle of goo.

Leftism always starts with promises of unbounded freedom, and ends with micromanagement by lawyers, bureaucrats, and policemen.

"Socialism is a philosophy of failure,
the creed of ignorance, and the gospel of envy,
its inherent virtue is the equal sharing of misery..."

"If you will not fight for the right when you can easily win without bloodshed; if you will not fight when your victory will be sure and not too costly; you may come to the moment when you will have to fight survival. There may even be a worse case. You may have to fight when there is no hope of victory, because it is better to perish than live as slaves."

A New America www.NewAmericaMovie.com is a documentary film that outlines the history of the Progressive movement in America over the last century. It analyzes how Progressive ideology has transformed public policy, the structures of government, and its potential impact on the country’s future. An example of historical analysis contained in the film would be the argument that the Progressive ideals

employed
by FDR’s New Deal were the cause of the Great Depression, not the solution to it.

Through interviews with Constitutional scholars, authors, historians, public policymakers, and others, it reviews the original intent of the Founders, why it is important and lays out how Progressivism is in conflict with that original intent.

As socialistworker.org admits, http://socialistworker.org/2003-2/471/471_09_Fascism.shtml
the left routinely applies the term "fascist" to any Republican political leader. In Britain The Guardian, BBC, and other liberal media pounced on purported links between the Bush family and corporations that had dealings with Nazi Germany. The fact that Prescott Bush, George W. Bush's grandfather, was a "director and shareholder" with companies that had indirect financial dealings with Germany in the 1930s would hardly seem damning, however. Much the same could be said for many other affluent individuals in America or Britain at the time. Every American today with mutual fund holdings is invested, at least indirectly, in Hugo Chavez's Venezuela. Does that make them Marxist revolutionaries?

Talk of Hitler became a lot more common during the Bush years, when it was accepted wisdom on the left that George Bush was worse than Hitler. Then there was Nancy Pelosi, who spent weeks back in 2010
complaining of the Tea Party's so-called "swastika signs" -- signs that did not signal an alliance with fascism but opposition to it. Pelosi was hardly alone in accusing the Tea Party of fascism. Marc Rubin, writing for examiner.com, referred to Tea Party members as "text book fascists." He went on to pin the neo-fascist label on Tom Tancredo, presumably because of Tancredo's concerns over illegal immigration. If those concerns make Tancredo a fascist, they would make the majority of Americans who share those concerns fascists as well. But that's pretty much how the left sees America.

The immediate response of liberals such as Chris Matthews http://www.mrc.org/biasalert/2011/20110412110017.aspx to the Ryan "Path to Prosperity" was to characterize it as a killer not just of babies and old people but of "half the people who watch this show." This attempt to portray the GOP plan as genocidal is just another example of the fascist rhetoric. It appears that Matthews is attempting to portray the Ryan plan as some sort of Final Solution.

It's not just loose cannons on MSNBC who resort to fascist innuendo. Obama's speechwriters are good at crafting sinister suggestions even without using the "F" word. Obama's budget speech of April 13 actually set the tone for the current debate. With Rep. Ryan sitting on the front row, Obama lectured his audience that the GOP plan would kick "someone's grandparents" out of nursing homes and cause children with autism and Down's syndrome to "fend for themselves." It is well known that Hitler sent legions of the disabled to concentration camps to be gassed, but the suggestion that a plan to actually save Medicare and Medicaid resembles the Holocaust, if that is what Obama intended, is repellent. It was one more proof, as if we needed any more, of a fatal weakness in the character of this President. He is a man whose entire existence is devoted to gutter politics. For such a man, statesmanship and dignified leadership are inconceivable.

The plain truth is that America can no longer afford this sort of reckless partisanship on the part of the chief executive. The fact that Obama disagrees with Rep. Ryan's budget plan does not justify accusations of killing sick children or tossing old folks out on the street. That kind of rhetoric may pass for wit in the sixth grade, but it is juvenile coming from the President.

"It is obvious what the fraudulent issue of fascism versus communism accomplishes: it sets up, as opposites, two variants of the same political system; it eliminates the possibility of considering capitalism; it switches the choice of “Freedom or dictatorship?” into “Which kind of dictatorship?”—thus establishing dictatorship as an inevitable fact and offering only a choice of rulers. The choice—according to the proponents of that fraud—is: a dictatorship of the rich (fascism) or a dictatorship of the poor (communism)."

"That fraud collapsed in the 1940’s, in the aftermath of World War II. It is too obvious, too easily demonstrable that fascism and communism are not two opposites, but two rival gangs fighting over the same territory—that both are variants of statism, based on the collectivist principle that man is the rightless slave of the state—that both are socialistic, in theory, in practice, and in the explicit statements of their leaders—that under both systems, the poor are enslaved and the rich are expropriated in favor of a ruling clique—that fascism is not the product of the political “right,” but of the “left”—that the basic issue is not “rich versus poor,” but man versus the state, or: individual rights versus totalitarian government—which means: capitalism versus socialism."

"Just as the Left was drawn to the communist killing machines of Lenin, Stalin, Mao, Pol Pot, and Castro, so too it is now attracted to radical Islam."

"The contempt that German Hitlerytes had for "Bolshevism" or "marxist Jews" generally should also not mislead us in assessing the similarity between National Socialism and Communism. Leftist sects are very prone to rivalry, dissension, schism and hatred of one-another. One has only to think of the Bolsheviks versus the Mensheviks, Stalin versus Trotsky, China versus the Soviet Union etc. Similarity does not preclude rivalry. Hitler and Stalin were literally brothers in arms BEFORE they became rivals. That socialist brothers sometimes fall out should not prevent us from noting the brotherhood concerned."

"The fundamental dogma of all brands of socialism and communism is that the market economy or capitalism is a system that hurts the vital interests of the immense majority of people for the sole benefit of a small minority of rugged individualists. It condemns the masses to progressing impoverishment. It brings about misery, slavery, oppression, degradation and exploitation of the working men, while it enriches a class of idle and useless parasites."

"This doctrine was not the work of Karl Marx. It had been developed long before Marx entered the scene. Its most successful propagators were not the Marxian authors, but such men as Carlyle and Ruskin, the British Fabians, the German professors and the American Institutionalists. And it is a very significant fact that the correctness of this dogma was contested only by a few economists who were very soon silenced and barred from access to the universities, the press, the leadership of political parties and, first of all, public office. Public opinion by and large accepted the condemnation of capitalism without any reservation."

"The term 'planning' is mostly used as a synonym for socialism, communism, and authoritarian and totalitarian economic management. Sometimes only the German pattern of socialism-Zwangswirtschaft-is called planning, while the term socialism proper is reserved for the Russian pattern of outright socialization and bureaucratic operation of all plants, shops, and farms. At any rate, planning in this sense means all-around planning by the government and enforcement of these plans by the police power. Planning in this sense means full government control of business. It is the antithesis of free enterprise, private initiative, private ownership of the means of production, market economy, and the price system. Planning and capitalism are utterly incompatible. Within a system of planning production is conducted according to the government's orders, not according to the plans of capitalists and entrepreneurs eager to profit by best filling the wants of the consumers.

"But the term planning is also used in a second sense. Lord Keynes, Sir William Beveridge, Professor Hansen, and many other eminent men assert that they do not want to substitute totalitarian slavery for freedom. They declare that they are planing for a free society. They recommend a third system, which, as they say, is as far from socialism as it is from capitalism, which, as a third solution of the problem of society's economic organization, stands midway between the two other systems, and while retaining the advantages of both, avoids the disadvantages inherent in each.

"These self-styled progressives are certainly mistaken when they pretend that their proposals are new and unheard of. The idea of this third solution is very old indeed, and the French have long since baptized it with a pertinent name; they call it interventionism. Hardly anybody can doubt that history will link the idea of social security, more closely than with the American New Deal and with Sir William Beveridge, with the memory of Bismarck whom our fathers did not precisely describe as a liberal. All the essential ideas of present-day interventionist progressivism were neatly expounded by the supreme brain-trusters of imperial Germany, Professors Schmoller and Wagner, who at the same time urged their Kaiser to invade and to conquer the Americas. Far be it from me to condemn any idea only on account of its not being new. But as the progressives slander all their opponents as old-fashioned, orthodox, and reactionary, it is expedient to observe that it would be more appropriate to speak of the clash of two orthodoxies; the Bismarck orthodoxy versus the Jefferson orthodoxy.

The origins of the modern left can be traced back to the famous passage in Rousseau’s Discourse on the Origin and Foundations of Inequality, in which he condemned the institution of private property:

“The first man, who after enclosing a piece of ground, took it into his head to say, ‘this is mine,’ and found people simple enough to believe him, was the real founder of civil society.”

Added Rousseau: “How many crimes, how many wars, how many murders, how many misfortunes and horrors, would that man have saved the human species, who pulling up the stakes or filling up the ditches should have cried to his fellows: Beware of listening to this impostor; you are lost, if you forget that the fruits of the earth belong equally to us all, and the earth itself to nobody!”

Around the 1830s, a faction of French liberals gravitated toward Romanticism and the philosophy of the late Rousseau, proclaiming that capitalism, private property, and the increasing complexity of modern society were agents of moral decay -- both for the individual and for society at large. This is essentially the worldview that has made its way, through history, into the collective mind of the modern left; it is a worldview calling for a revolution that not only will topple the existing capitalist order and punish its corrupt leaders, but that also will replace that order with a socialist regime where the utopian ideals of perfect justice and equality will reign. Such an ambition can be put into effect only by a totalitarian state with the authority to micromanage every facet of human life, precisely the end-point toward which the policies and crusades of the modern left are directed.

When the term “liberalism” (from the Latin word liberalis, meaning “pertaining to a free man”) first emerged in the early 1800s, its hallmarks were a belief in individual rights, the rule of law, limited government, private property, and laissez faire economics. These would remain the defining characteristics of liberalism throughout the liberal epoch (generally identified as the period of 1815-1914). Yet the modern left, which portrays itself as the agent of enlightened commitment to “liberal” causes, in fact stands for the antithesis of each of the foregoing liberal ideals. Contrary to its self-definition, the left is neither “liberal” nor “progressive,” but rather a reactionary force that seeks to resurrect the traditions that characterized the epoch which preceded the rise of classical liberalism.

The following is from The World Book Encyclopedia, 1947 edition:
The chief characteristics of Fascism are as follows:

THE CULTIVATION OF IGNORANCE

Fascism, like all forms of government, rests firmly on the sincere consent of a large part of the population... To maintain this consent, the Fascist leadership must cut off the people from any information which might cause them to doubt the complete correctness of the fixed Fascist principles... All forms of communication are carefully censored, so that the public will receive only those facts that the dictators want known... Travel to other countries must be controlled, and freedom of speech and assembly must be rigorously suppressed...

THE POLICE STATE

Fascism depends upon the police to crush all opposition or dissent. Secret police spy on the whole population, and any casual remark against the regime leads to swift and severe punishment... Opposition parties are dissolved. Intellectual, athletic and recreational organizations are usually brought under the control of the Fascist authority... The ruthlessness of the police gradually becomes less noticeable... EXTREME NATIONALISM

Fascism is highly nationalistic... It tries to identify its principles with the country, so that disagreement will look like treason... Some other country, or some group within the country, is chosen to serve as the "enemy" and made to appear as the cause of all evils or misfortunes... For example, the Nazis in Germany represented their movement first as a crusade against the Jews, then as a fight against Communism and later as a struggle against the "attacks" from whatever neighboring country they wished to subdue or occupy... Extreme nationalism often becomes a kind of racial fanaticism... Sometimes it combines racial and religious bigotry...

http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/groupProfile.asp?grpid=6535

MILITARISM

Fascism maintains among the people a permanently warlike frame of mind... Every citizen feels that he is mobilized against enemies of the regime from within, and against possible foreign foes... The dictator usually comes to power during a period of economic crisis or depression... He relieves the depression partly by employing many people in the making of armaments... To justify this procedure, he must convince the people that the country is threatened, and must point toward some of the enemies against whom the armaments may be needed...

Update: Due to a production error, a section of part one of the full Romney "47 percent" video was not initially uploaded properly and an intial section was omitted. This has now been remedied.

Update: According to the source, the recording device was inadvertently turned off between these two segments. The source noticed quickly and began to re-record, resulting in an estimated a one-to-two minute loss of tape.

Chan is correct that there is missing time. He is incorrect that this proves sinister intent.

Good try but no cigar.

Romney and his handlers had THREE WEEKS to declare the tape "doctored" -- and they didn't. If they thought it was doctored, they would have had every right to scream bloody murder...but they didn't.

How odd.

In any event, the words from Romney's own lips dissing 47% of his fellow citizens was never in doubt nor disputed. The only thing that changed (surprise, surprise) was Romney's flip-flopping over 3 weeks. First, he said he "misspoke", then it was "inelegant", then almost 3 weeks later, he said it was "wrong". Never did he or his handlers claim the tape was doctored. Never.

How odd.

Even if -you- call it "doctoring" because a minute or two of Romney's speech failed to get recorded, that still does not negate the dissing that came from Romney's own lips that -was- on tape.

Dodge and dance all you want, but Romney CLEARLY dissed 47% of his fellow countrymen.

End of report.

This is not exactly news, here. Content, especially in political endeavors have been selectively edited since Jefferson. In fact, its rare, in a political campaign that either side presents the opponent's content with objective accuracy.

But this is not limited to political news. News in general is highly selective. The stories covered themselves, are the result of a biased selection process pursuant to the editor/producer's tastes, affiliations, commercial value sense, and ratings generating elements of sensationalism. There is no objective news. There most certainly will not be objective political news.

There is no political advantage to not selectively editing political content.

Dinesh D'Souza's 2016: Obama's America is a very good example. Presented as a documentary, the story, itself, is slanted from the very statement of the premise. And while there is considerably more fairness involved in the presentation than I expected, even that was a carefully crafted tool to give the impression that the movie's premise is more powerful than a mere political hit piece.

And being in production, myself, I was horrified at the use of very subtle and VERY non-linear leaps in logic to present hard points for which evidence was not available at hand. But even THAT technique is a subtle and very effective propaganda techniqe to underscore the author's premise with impact.

Don't get me wrong. I think D'Souza makes a very good point about Obama, his motivations, his influences, and his agenda. And I think Obama is a very VERY dangerous man to occupy the White House.

But this movie's message is strong enough without the overproduced visuals, and highly selective reconstructive scripting. Trouble is, that message is pretty dry, and to hold the audience's attention, it's necessary to embroider. If not the message, then its presentation. Until the point is made.

As a political movie, it's quite effective, as my conversations with patrons exiting the theatre will attest. As a propaganda piece, it's pretty heavy handed, and at the same time deeply and disturbingly subtle. Not since the propaganda films of 1938, have I seen such effective use of production tricks to make implications where evidence is not readily at hand. Far more direct and much better researched than Michael Moore's projects. Dramatically better produced. No less biased. No less selectively edited than Moore. But far and away better produced. And frighteningly effective propaganda.

If there's any virtue in this film, it's that, finally, the Conservative side is fighting back on Hollywood's turf.

2016 raises the bar on the use of entertainment as political media.

What follows is an onslaught of not only theatrical releases, but tv documentaries (I'm narrating one now), political 'product placement' in commercial TV and cable shows. And subtle, and not so subtle, political agenda in TV and Radio news content. All of which we're seeing now.

Selective editing, as this video involving Romney's 47% crack is only the tip of the iceberg. And not a particularly well formed iceberg, at that.

Liberty Net: September 29, 2012

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

THE IONOSPHERE IS getting quieter and quieter as Fall progresses, and reception of the Liberty Net is getting clearer and clearer as a result. So put up that antenna, tune up your amplifier, check in this Saturday night, and let your voice be heard on the Liberty Net, amateur radioï¿½s longest-running discussion net.

Here are a few samples of the subjects brought up during the latest net session:

ï¿½ As the founders warned us, representative government has one fatal flaw: If ever you allow the electorate to vote themselves largesse from the public treasury, itï¿½s all over for freedom. (8 minutes)

ï¿½ Another sign that ï¿½democracyï¿½ is a hoax in America is the fact that not one voter in ten is aware of the multiple billions we are taxed to send to dozens of foreign governments ï¿½ especially Israel and corrupt regimes that have made ï¿½dealsï¿½ with Israel. These outrageous giveaways arenï¿½t issues in any election because both parties are bought and paid for by the Israel lobby. (16 minutes)

ï¿½ The man behind the film Innocence of Muslims has been arrested in Los Angeles, allegedly for a parole violation ï¿½ but probably in a dirty political move to allow the Washington regime to manipulate Muslims into thinking that ï¿½something is being doneï¿½ to suppress the movie. (26 minutes)

ï¿½ In the recently-compiled list of the ï¿½Most Dangerous Cities in the US,ï¿½ the rankings track very closely to the percentage of African and Mestizo populations in those cities. (38 minutes)

ï¿½ A new study has shown that even fans of the most ï¿½liberalï¿½ mass media out there are overwhelmingly in favor of cutting off all benefits to the illegal invaders of our southern borders. This is yet another issue on which the financiers who rule us (largely aliens, of another kind, themselves) control both sides -- they have decided that the invasion is ï¿½good,ï¿½ therefore no one from any party is allowed to do anything significant about it. (47 minutes)

ï¿½ A very positive development in Greece is that the pro-independence and pro-self-determination Golden Dawn party is now recognized by the police as a genuine force for good: Greeks who have been hurt by non-European criminal gangs, or who have been devastated by the bankersï¿½ rape of that country, are referred by the police to the social welfare and aid offices of the Golden Dawn. We need a Golden Dawn here in the United States. (54 minutes)

ï¿½ The Lakotah Nation has officially declared its independence from the United States ï¿½ and who can blame them? Wouldnï¿½t any decent person would naturally want to separate himself from the criminal, murderous regime in Washington? And wouldnï¿½t any people who cared about its future and its childrenï¿½s future want to do the same? Should White Americans start thinking along the same lines? Or should we support the ï¿½traditional USï¿½ that the illegitimate elite now absolutely controls? (1 hour 9 minutes)

ï¿½ One of the reasons given for the most recent Declaration of Independence issued on American soil was the unfair, fraudulent, and thieving practices of the US banking system. (1 hour 27 minutes)

ï¿½ Why is the increasingly impoverished core population of the United States subsidizing 158 of the 191 governments on planet Earth? (1 hour 28 minutes)

Thanks to N2SAG and N2IRJ and W1WCR, you can listen to the Liberty Net every week ï¿½ somewhere near 3950 kHz, plus or minus the interference (lately, substantially above that frequency) ï¿½ every Saturday night at 10PM Eastern Time, and also via the Internet. You can also download the Liberty Net right here at http://3950.net and listen in your car, at work, or wherever you like. Check in on the air and join the excitement!

Most of the talking heads are basically arguing over whether we should continue to be dominated by the current group which hails from the Middle East -- or allow another, more recent, group from the Middle East to rise in power and influence.

Totally left out is the option that we say sayonara to both groups and regain our independence and freedom.

That's my choice.

All the best,

Kevin, WB4AIO.

Huh? What "desperatioin"? The whole point of the thread is whether or not the Romney team thinks the tape was doctored.

Nice try, but still no cigar...

The "47% tape" was a major, M-A-J-O-R news story. If Romney or his team had even the -slightest- suspicion that it was "doctored", they rightfully would be screaming bloody murder -- and they are not. What exactly is it that you know that they don't?

If -you- think the tape was doctored, please contact the Romney team post haste to notify them. Otherwise, you will be considered just another konspiracy kook-tard.

Yeah.. that one's always got me, too. They believe that the fan will suck all the air out of the room. Strange logic.

October 7, 2012 the mighty Green Bay Packers lose to the lowly Indianapolis Colts who played a rookie quarterback! Green Bay was up 21-3 at halftime and coughed up the lead against a totally inferior team and their record falls to 2-3. So much for the trash talk of an undefeated season eh cheese heads? Highlights of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
01 - 07 October 2012

Solar activity was low. The largest flares of the week, both C4s, were attributed to Region 1575 (N08, L=181, class/area=Eko/320 on 22 Sep) at 01/0147Z and again at 01/1313Z as it rotated beyond the west limb. The remainder of the week was characterized by x-ray flares in the mid-to-upper B class and low C class range. An exceptionally long duration B7 flare (7hr 29min) from Region 1584 (S23, L=70, class/area=Dso/40 on 01 Oct) peaked at 05/0730Z and was associated with an earth-directed CME. The CME was observed in SOHO/LASCO C3 imagery at 05/0730Z and had an estimated speed of approximately 590 km/s. It was expected to reach earth late on 08 October. Another CME was observed later in the week when a 30 degree long filament, centered near S65W15, erupted on 07 October. SDO imagery first observed movement along the filament channel at approximately 06/2000Z with ejecta visible off the SW limb at about 07/0700Z.
LASCO C2 imagery observed a partial-halo CME lifting off the SW limb first visible at 07/0812Z. Subsequent WSA-Enlil model output indicated a possible weak, earth-directed component of this CME.

No proton events were observed at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit was at normal levels throughout the week.

Geomagnetic field activity began the week at severe storm levels after an earth-directed CME from 27 September arrived late on 30 September. Severe storm levels were observed for the 01/00-03Z synoptic period, decreasing in the subsequent periods to major storm levels for 01/03-06Z, and then active levels for the 01/06-09Z period. The remainder of the week saw quiet geomagnetic conditions with the exception of the first synoptic period on 03 October which was unsettled.

Forecast of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
08 October - 03 November 2012

Solar activity is expected to be at generally low levels with a chance for an M-class event, particularly during 12-26 October when Old Region 1583 (N12, L=187, class/area=Dso/90) returns.

No proton events are expected at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit is expected to be at high levels on 11-13 October as a result of a coronal hole high speed stream. Flux for the remainder of the forecast period is expected to be at background levels.

Geomagnetic field activity is expected to begin at quiet to unsettled levels, increasing to active to minor storm levels late on 08 October with the arrival of the earth-directed CME from 05 October. Minor storm levels are expected to continue through 09 October. Then geomagentic field activity is expected to decrease to unsettled to active levels for 10-11 October under the influence of a coronal hole high speed stream. Quiet conditions return on 12-14 October before subsequent coronal hole high speed streams bring unsettled to active conditions on 15-17 October.

The Zionist press reported that the Columbia blew up over Jerusalem, Texas. The rumour mill has it that the brainwashed Israeli on board set off a handgrenade at the appropriate moment and the whole episode was a 'blood sacrifice' to speed up the bonding between Washington and TelAviv.

Yes, the first time I posted to this topic I was reading it with a gui client and trying to do my posts from my old standby, a character cell client. It would not post to any groups I was not subscribed to, so a forced restriction to a single group resulted. Of course that was not the group anyone still active in the thread was reading.

But even when I use the gui client, I cannot follow the portions of the thread that occur only in a subset of the groups that does not include the one I am reading from. Once the cross-posting has occurred, trimming the newsgroups excludes people, sometimes the very people you are trying to communicate with.

So in a certain sense cross-posting can be thought of as irreversible.

Note: if you work within a group you are familiar with, you tend to know the players and you tend to know who can be trusted to behave reasonably well and to treat others with respect.
Every time cross-posting to a new group occurs, there is a learning curve, and to a large extent that amounts to wasted effort because you may never have to visit that group again.

I don't use (a). We all use (b). After all, few of us respond to everything we see.

Gumi is about 20 miles north of Deagu. From Seoul, I would hazard a guess of about 150 miles as the kimchi crow flies (AKA gachi) Probably closer to 200 by highway.

So you're telling us that all they had to do at Chernobyl and Fukushima was spray around some orange juice?

Who'd a thunk it was that easy.

Maybe you can notify the Nuclear Regulatory Commission -- right after

4280. TRACING THE VAST UNTRACEABLE DONATIONS OF OBAMA'S DONORGATE

Written by Dagny D'Anconia

Even CBS News is now calling it Foreign-Donor-Gate .
http://washington.cbslocal.com/2012/10/09/opinion-obama-raises-181-million-in-september-as-foreign-donor-gate-heats-up/

As Obama's coffers approach the 1 billion dollar mark, the Government Accountability Institute released a report that finally alarmed the mainstream media.
http://campaignfundingrisks.com/full-report/#.UHX5U2t5mSO

Hundreds of millions donated to the Obama campaign may be illegal - but Obama's people are shrugging their shoulders, laughing all the way to the bank. They consider the foreign donor funds to be untraceable and unknowable.

However, what if we knew how to make these suspicious transactions traceable? Imagine the power of knowing the country, the bank and the details of how the numbers were generated. The stakes could not be higher.

Back in 2008, two-thirds of Obama's fundraising haul during the final phases of his campaign were untraceable .
http://atlasshrugs2000.typepad.com/atlas_shrugs/2008/10/who-is-john-gal.html

This election cycle it is much worse: 70% of the donations through Obama.com are from foreign sources , and only 2% have records kept on them.
http://www.breitbart.com/Big-Government/2012/10/08/Why-Doesn-t-Obama-Campaign-Own-Obama-com

The vast majority are less than $50 and, as such, no records are required by law to be kept.
http://www.breitbart.com/Big-Government/2012/10/06/windfall-obama-raises-181-million-only-2-reportable/

Not only is Obama's campaign failing to use the 3 digit security code for donations, the Obama donation website, obama.com , has also been set up to allow the internet address of the donator to be spoofed :

"An anonymous tipster mentioned that checking out the source code of the Obama donation website... would reveal some interesting logic. Specifically that IP addresses of the donors can be easily spoofed through a hidden field in the form. The tipster's guess was that the Obama campaign is recording the spoofable IP address... not the real IP address as delivered by the web server.

Put simply, there's no reason to include a hidden form field for IP address. It is there for one reason alone: IP forgery -- forging the computer addresses of donations to disguise their true sources."

http://directorblue.blogspot.com/2012/10/blue-state-digital-is-it-key-to-obama.html?spref=tw

Furthermore, Obama.com is owned not by the Obama campaign
http://www.breitbart.com/Big-Government/2012/10/08/Why-Doesn-t-Obama-Campaign-Own-Obama-com

but by Robert Roche , a resident of Shanghai China. Roche has visited the Obama White House 11 times in the last 4 years and boasts of his special favors from and connections to the Chinese government.

http://www.nationalreview.com/corner/329724/who-robert-roche-eliana-johnson

Donations this time around are largely under the $50 limit, evading the requirement to save the data on their origin. The sheer quantity of these low-value donations, from untraceable sources, strongly suggests an operation to accumulate campaign cash from illicit sources.

Given the false IP addresses, and the use of the lower limit, how can we trace these millions?

Fortunately, I have access to a patriotic gentleman who for the last decade has been running credit card companies. He knows this field inside and out. According to him:

"Prepaid cards in many countries are as easy to get as cash but that is not what Obama is experiencing. What they did in my opinion with the raising of $200 million in September 2008 from debit cards was find a friendly offshore bank to issue a prebuilt file of prepaid credit cards to fake names in random amounts under the $200 reporting limit. No actual cards ever existed just computer files that were merged into a Point of Sale software program and presented for acquisition of the money.

There are plenty of sources out there where $200 million is chicken feed like China, Soros, Russia etc. The trick is a ‘paper trail' of where the funds originated. If the allegation is that somehow a million people went out and purchased a million prepaid debit cards and then got on the Obama online system and poured these through to the Obama Campaign coffers - that is pure bull feathers.

The key is, the bank or banks that are cooperating in this fraud can easily be traced by the transaction data. Just a piece of data that shows how much time, seconds or milliseconds spacing you have between the entry of those transactions will tell you if these are legitimate transactions or the product of having run a prebuilt file with many thousands of cards imbedded. Every transaction inbound and outbound is time stamped. There is an authorization number associated with that as well.

There is no doubt in my mind Obama did this in the 2008 election. I don't think it should be hard to make a circumstantial case that Obama's support in 2008 was not from his supposed constituents in the USA and in fact it was single donors with massive donations outside the United States electronically generated into files of supposed debit cards. They are probably sequential or as close as debit cards get. If you can get any of the full 16 digit numbers we have people who can tell you what country, what bank and what BIN was used to transact the fraud."

Thus, if any law enforcement or other security or watchdog entity can get those numbers, we can see where it came from. China? Russia? The Sinaloa drug cartel in Mexico? We can even identify the bank that performed the fraud. Imagine the impact this would have on the election if people knew that most of his money was coming from such sources!

The 16 digit transaction ID on each transaction can show us where it came from, and using the transaction time stamps, we can determine whether donations were made by real people or an automated system.

In 2008, people were concerned about Obama's use of these methods to skirt donation limit laws. However, after 4 years of watching Obama, we can now see that skirting donation laws was probably the least harmful aspect of his donation fraud. When we look at the way America has been systematically been weakened militarily, economically, and our allies betrayed, we have to consider this credit card fraud in context.

This is a strategy to overwhelm the system to ensure donation laws can not be reasonably enforced. It is a tactic prescribed by Saul Alinsky. Like the Occupy movement or massive voter fraud by ACORN, the goal is to create a tidal wave effect crippling the ability and willingness of authorities to handle criminal misbehavior.

We have the crime against America and the culprit. We know the motive: to "fundamentally transform" the United States, destroying the American system and replacing it with something else. Destruction of the American System is a goal echoed by Socialist groups across the nation for decades.

We are only missing the money trail behind the donation fraud that put Obama into power to achieve that clearly stated goal. Any foreign or domestic enemy could be behind it - or it could be a collaborative effort. Consider the following cast of suspects:

*The Sinaloa drug cartel has received favors from the Obama administration, specifically in the form of the Fast and Furious gunwalker scandal, as well as sabotage of border enforcement.

*Many banks have been surviving at the mercy and whim of the Obama administration. Stimulus money, special interest rates, leaked economic intentions, and the threat of prosecution for perceived crimes or racism all compromise the banks, both here and overseas. There are also the foreign banks who received American Taxpayer funded bailouts during the first round of stimulus spending. They too have the means and motive to supply "untraceable" donations.

Do you think any bank would complain to the government if there were any problems with deposits to the Obama account? Furthermore, who is going to prosecute the crooks if Obama wins the next election? There is no incentive for a bank to blow the whistle on money coming in from fraudulent sources when the business can come under attack by the heavy hand of a vengeful Administration.

*SEIU employees of restaurants etc. have access to credit card numbers. These could be used by their union. Similarly, organizations like ACORN's subsidiary "Project Vote" have been intimately associated with the Obama machine and could be involved with supplying credit card and debit card files .

*Islamists and their affiliated terrorist organizations can donate through this unsecured system. This could help explain the Obama administration's war on the Catholic Church and Christianity in general. It may also explain his support for the Muslim Brotherhood and the numerous prominently placed Obama Administration officials with close ties to the Muslim Brotherhood.

*Wealthy Middle Eastern backers could easily donate to Obama. Could this help explain Obama's insane war on domestic energy sources, including the vetoing of the Keystone Pipeline? Does this also explain Obama's bowing to Middle Eastern potentates and groveling speeches of apology in the Middle East?

*Adversary nations, such as Russia, Iran, North Korea, and China all have the incentive to keep Obama in charge. Not only has Obama weakened the American economy, he has also damaged our military in countless ways including its openly gay policy, cutting funding, putting American soldiers in unwinnable situations, and withdrawing from secured territory. These adversary nations have clear incentives and could easily arrange for donations to Obama. Any military adversary would want Obama in charge.

Adversary nations also harbor the criminal hackers who are part of a very mature and multi-billion dollar industry that reaches around the world. Chinese hackers? Russian mafia or FSB? Rouge nation military such as Iran or North Korea? All the above would gladly take part in a chance to help Obama get elected and reelected.

There is an active market in stolen credit card numbers, many without the 3 digit security code, the address, or the name of the owner. They too could be put to use through a donation to Obama.

See how this makes more sense in context of the Obama credit card fraud? He needed them to get elected and now he needs them to get re-elected.

Our patriotic expert in credit card systems adds:

"No question about it being fraud in my opinion with Roche and a bank in China involved. The whole scheme could take place in one room and never involve a real card. A stolen card used to make a donation would never be repaid because of the jurisdiction. The cardholder or the American Bank would simply lose that money.

If they are allowed to accept credit or debit cards, the acquiring account should be here in the United States only so we have control over the process and are able to investigate any suspected wrongdoing. Outside the United States and especially in China investigation would be impossible. The Chinese are buying themselves a President but then they probably already own what shares are not taken by the Moslem Brotherhood."

Will we demand the data that can show where the money came from? Or will we go on allowing our country to be purchased at the ballot box once again? We know where that road leads.

hi,

Islam and Terrorism

First ,

Who began the first international war ??? Muslims ??
Who began the second international war ??? Muslims ??
Who killed 20 million human residents of the same indigenous Australia?! Muslims?!
Who sent the bombs to hit Hiroshima and Nagasaki? Muslims?!
Who killed more than the 100 million Indians from the Red Indians in North America? Muslims?!
Who killed more than 50 million Indians of Indians in South America? Muslims?!
Who has Pastrakkak about 180 million Africans had died as slaves and about 77% of them and been thrown in the Atlantic Ocean? Muslims?!

No, they are not Muslims!!

above all, you have to specify the meaning of terrorism is well; that if a non-Muslim has to do something wrong then it just be a crime, but while the Muslim of committing the same mistake then it is described to terrorism!!!
So first you do not double standard and you will know who are the real terrorists

> Fortunately, I have access to a patriotic gentleman who for the last decade has been running credit card companies. He knows this field inside and out. According to him:
>
> "Prepaid cards in many countries are as easy to get as cash but that is not what Obama is experiencing. What they did in my opinion with the raising of $200 million in September 2008 from debit cards was find a friendly offshore bank to issue a prebuilt file of prepaid credit cards to fake names in random amounts under the $200 reporting limit. No actual cards ever existed just computer files that were merged into a Point of Sale software program and presented for acquisition of the money.
> There are plenty of sources out there where $200 million is chicken feed like China, Soros, Russia etc. The trick is a ï¿½paper trail' of where the funds originated. If the allegation is that somehow a million people went out and purchased a million prepaid debit cards and then got on the Obama online system and poured these through to the Obama Campaign coffers - that is pure bull feathers.
>
> The key is, the bank or banks that are cooperating in this fraud can easily be traced by the transaction data. Just a piece of data that shows how much time, seconds or milliseconds spacing you have between the entry of those transactions will tell you if these are legitimate transactions or the product of having run a prebuilt file with many thousands of cards imbedded. Every transaction inbound and outbound is time stamped. There is an authorization number associated with that as well.
> There is no doubt in my mind Obama did this in the 2008 election. I don't think it should be hard to make a circumstantial case that Obama's support in 2008 was not from his supposed constituents in the USA and in fact it was single donors with massive donations outside the United States electronically generated into files of supposed debit cards. They are probably sequential or as close as debit cards get. If you can get any of the full 16 digit numbers we have people who can tell you what country, what bank and what BIN was used to transact the fraud."

> Thus, if any law enforcement or other security or watchdog entity can get those numbers, we can see where it came from. China? Russia? The Sinaloa drug cartel in Mexico? We can even identify the bank that performed the fraud. Imagine the impact this would have on the election if people knew that most of his money was coming from such sources!
> The 16 digit transaction ID on each transaction can show us where it came from, and using the transaction time stamps, we can determine whether donations were made by real people or an automated system.
>
> In 2008, people were concerned about Obama's use of these methods to skirt donation limit laws. However, after 4 years of watching Obama, we can now see that skirting donation laws was probably the least harmful aspect of his donation fraud. When we look at the way America has been systematically been weakened militarily, economically, and our allies betrayed, we have to consider this credit card fraud in context.
>
> This is a strategy to overwhelm the system to ensure donation laws can not be reasonably enforced. It is a tactic prescribed by Saul Alinsky. Like the Occupy movement or massive voter fraud by ACORN, the goal is to create a tidal wave effect crippling the ability and willingness of authorities to handle criminal misbehavior.
> We have the crime against America and the culprit. We know the motive: to "fundamentally transform" the United States, destroying the American system and replacing it with something else. Destruction of the American System is a goal echoed by Socialist groups across the nation for decades.
>
> We are only missing the money trail behind the donation fraud that put Obama into power to achieve that clearly stated goal. Any foreign or domestic enemy could be behind it - or it could be a collaborative effort. Consider the following cast of suspects:
>
> *The Sinaloa drug cartel has received favors from the Obama administration, specifically in the form of the Fast and Furious gunwalker scandal, as well as sabotage of border enforcement.
>
> *Many banks have been surviving at the mercy and whim of the Obama administration. Stimulus money, special interest rates, leaked economic intentions, and the threat of prosecution for perceived crimes or racism all compromise the banks, both here and overseas. There are also the foreign banks who received American Taxpayer funded bailouts during the first round of stimulus spending. They too have the means and motive to supply "untraceable" donations.
> Do you think any bank would complain to the government if there were any problems with deposits to the Obama account? Furthermore, who is going to prosecute the crooks if Obama wins the next election? There is no incentive for a bank to blow the whistle on money coming in from fraudulent sources when the business can come under attack by the heavy hand of a vengeful Administration.

>
> *SEIU employees of restaurants etc. have access to credit card numbers. These could be used by their union. Similarly, organizations like ACORN's subsidiary "Project Vote" have been intimately associated with the Obama machine and could be involved with supplying credit card and debit card files .
>
> *Islamists and their affiliated terrorist organizations can donate through this unsecured system. This could help explain the Obama administration's war on the Catholic Church and Christianity in general. It may also explain his support for the Muslim Brotherhood and the numerous prominently placed Obama Administration officials with close ties to the Muslim Brotherhood.
>
> *Wealthy Middle Eastern backers could easily donate to Obama. Could this help explain Obama's insane war on domestic energy sources, including the vetoing of the Keystone Pipeline? Does this also explain Obama's bowing to Middle Eastern potentates and groveling speeches of apology in the Middle East?
>
> *Adversary nations, such as Russia, Iran, North Korea, and China all have the incentive to keep Obama in charge. Not only has Obama weakened the American economy, he has also damaged our military in countless ways including its openly gay policy, cutting funding, putting American soldiers in unwinnable situations, and withdrawing from secured territory. These adversary nations have clear incentives and could easily arrange for donations to Obama. Any military adversary would want Obama in charge.
>
> Adversary nations also harbor the criminal hackers who are part of a very mature and multi-billion dollar industry that reaches around the world. Chinese hackers? Russian mafia or FSB? A stolen card used to make a donation would never be repaid because of the jurisdiction. The cardholder or the American Bank would simply lose that money.

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) ï¿½ Basil L. Plumley, a renowned career soldier whose exploits as an Army infantryman were portrayed in a book and the movie "We Were Soldiers," has died at 92 ï¿½ an age his friends are amazed that he lived to see.

Plumley fought in World War II, the Korean War and Vietnam and was awarded a medal for making five parachute jumps into combat. The retired command sergeant major died Wednesday.

Friends said Plumley, who died in hospice care in west Georgia, never told war stories and was known to hang up on people who called to interview him. Still, he was near-legendary in the Army and gained more widespread fame through a 1992 Vietnam War book that was the basis for the 2002 movie starring Mel Gibson. Actor Sam Elliott played Plumley in the film.

Plumley didn't need a Hollywood portrayal to be revered among soldiers, said Greg Camp, a retired Army colonel and former chief of staff at neighboring Fort Benning who befriended Plumley in his later years.

ARRL Recognizes: MFJ's Martin F. Jue, K5FLU, Honored at ARRL Day in the Park

To celebrate 40 years in the Amateur Radio business, MFJ Enterprises hosted ARRL Day in the Park in Starkville, Mississippi, October 5-6. Martin F. Jue, K5FLU, started MFJ in October 1972 in a Starkville hotel room with one product: a CW filter kit that sold for less than $10. Today, MFJ consists of six different ham radio companies that manufacture more than 2000 products. ARRL Chief Operating Officer Harold Kramer, WJ1B, and ARRL Mississippi Section Manager Malcolm Keown, W5XX, represented the League at MFJ's ARRL Day in the Park. The two-day event brought 500 people to Starkville and featured tours of the MFJ facilities (including the factory and metal shop), tailgating, forums, demonstrations and lunch. Kramer presented Jue with the ARRL Special Achievement Award, honoring Jue and MFJ for their four decades of service, as well as the company's innovative products, which have contributed to the enjoyment and effectiveness of Amateur Radio all around the world. Tom Medlin, W5KUB, was at the event and produced a video of the speeches and presentations, which can be viewed here.

Maybe not. These days, in many places most of the shortwave broadcasters have left the band, and you can actually listen comfortably with an "AM table radio".

Not that the days of ECSS, single sideband and narrow filter listening are gone, just that they are no longer the minimum needed to enjoy the hobby.
As was in the early 1990's.

Back in the year of 2000 I saw at Irish Times online newspaper there are at least fourteen different ways to spell Ryan. Sargeant Brink at Scott Air Force Base,Illinois in 1963, he used to pronounce my last name as Rynk. Rynk is not one of those ways to spell Ryan, according to Irish Times. Of course, MFJ lets you repair their junk for free. Look at how much money they save by having their customers do the work. I have bought 3 items from them, and they all needed to be fixed. Mighty Fine Junk.

Jimmy Carter, Ted Kennedy, Algore, Harry Reid, Pelosi Galore, Zero, SloJoe, and for all his disarming charm, Bill "Better put some ice on it" Clinton - all are obnoxiously, arrogantly, pretentiously, immorally weird. Why can't at least one of them be a normal human being?

How does a normal person, like Paul Ryan, handle someone who is trying as hard as he can to be as rude and weird as possible? You could try this: (see video)

In fact, Biden was so weird last night that it's being seriously asked if he was on coke. The Sodahead website says it's a valid question.

www.sodahead.com/united-states/do-you-believe-joe-biden-used-cocaine-during-vp-debate/question-3239245/

As one Tweeter commented, "Biden already got in a few good lines... in the bathroom just before the debate!" It may be no joke.

The VP debate is, however, a Prelim. The Main Event is next Tuesday, October 16 - which may turn out to be BOBHICA Day for Zero - Bend Over Barack, Here It Comes Again - with the 2nd Romney-Zero debate.

Fair enough.

But then, he wrote TWO letters requesting stimulus plan money for his

He's a Representative who is well versed in economics.
The economist in him knew the stimulus was a bad idea, so he personally opposed it.
After it passed, the Representative in him advocated for his constituents and requested some of it for his district.

Liberty Net: October 6, 2012

http://3950.net/2012/10/liberty-net-october-6-2012/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

NO SPONSORS ï¿½ no billionairesï¿½ ï¿½think tankï¿½ subsidies ï¿½ no ties to political parties ï¿½ no banker-paid gatekeepers or editors ï¿½ just real people and real, uncensored, free speech: Thatï¿½s amateur radioï¿½s historic Liberty Net, the longest-running discussion net on the amateur radio bands.

Here are a few examples of what was discussed on the net this week:

ï¿½ More dollars are created (out of thin air) by the banking system in a single year than Carl Sagan ever imagined there were galaxies in the universe. Is it any wonder that they are becoming worth less and less every day? More importantly, what gives banks the right to create money, anyway? (3 minutes)

ï¿½ When the CIA/Mossad puppet was crushed in the recent election in the Republic of Georgia, guess what? Georgia immediately stopped supporting the illegal Washington regimeï¿½s planned attack on Iran. (51 minutes)

ï¿½ Heroic dock workers in Greece showed their disgust with the current illegal banker-controlled government there by actually taking over the Defense Ministry. The increasingly popular Golden Dawn party supported the workers. (55 minutes)

ï¿½ Americaï¿½s illegal government has been invading, bombing, killing, and waging aggressive wars for eleven years now on a scale far larger than WW2 Germany ever was accused of doing. And, like Germany, ï¿½weï¿½ are doing this with massively inadequate internal energy supplies. Russia, which may be forced into stopping some of these aggressive wars, has ample energy supplies of its own. (1 hour 24 minutes)

ï¿½ The bankersï¿½ media wonï¿½t tell you this, but there is a powerful move afoot by ï¿½lendersï¿½ to skirt the law so they can seize your home or farm if you canï¿½t pay their fraudulent credit card ï¿½debts.ï¿½ And if you think your stateï¿½s laws will protect you, think again: The bankers are even now establishing ï¿½precedentï¿½ that the laws of whatever state they choose to sue you from shall prevail ï¿½ and they own shell companies in every state, and have bought the legislatures of most of them. There is no law in America anymore. There is only money. (1 hour 48 minutes)

ï¿½ Do the new discoveries about the drug ketamine promise new hope for people suffering from clinical depression? If they do, will its use be suppressed by the DEA and FDA since the patent on it expired in 2002? (2 hours 30 minutes)

ï¿½ Should the oil companies be nationalized? If you accept that as a good idea and if you also accept the idea that the oil moguls are internationalist criminals in bed with the bankers, why would it be any better if these producers were run by the criminals in Congress? (2 hours 48 minutes)

ï¿½ Why is there almost total silence in the controlled media about the rising non-White crime wave against White people? (2 hours 52 minutes)

ï¿½ Why would anyone want to eat food that had insecticide directly encoded into its genetic structure? (2 hours 55 minutes)

Remember that you can find the Liberty Net in the upper part of 75 meters (lately it has been consistently higher than 3950, and recently on 3967 kHz) every Saturday night at 10PM Eastern Time ï¿½ join in, or listen live on the Internet via N2SAG or this site ï¿½ or listen at your leisure via the mp3 files posted here at http://3950.net every week. Usually the new recording is posted early on Sunday. It will be visible at the top of the upper right column of every page of this site.

Once again, thanks to W1WCR for running this important and historic discussion net, and thanks also to N2IRJ for making these recordings available.

The difference being that Ryan sees no problem in imposing his religious-based views on others through the types of legislation he would want to pass, while Clinton and Carter viewed religion as something to fall back on for themselves when they find a need for it.

I didn't hear him say this.... I did hear him say that his values guide him. Not that he was going to force them on you, in fact Obama and you Socialists are forcing ObamaCare on all of us without any way to opt out.

Lets talk about who's imposing their views on the rest of us... can you still buy a 32 ounce soda-pop in the mini-mart?

> through the types of legislation he Socialists already banned any Soda-pop over 16 ounces in NYC and the religious people never did that did they? It was Liberals that did it with BACK DOOR LEGISLATION, and Liberals are famous for using the back door.

You mean when they needed to use religion to get votes.....

Liberal-Socialist types do that you know.

Obamacare has nothing to do with religion, using one's Catholic's beliefs as a basis to decide on outlawing and severely restricting abortion on all, including those not Catholics and who don't share that belief, does.

Don't vote for Bloomberg, a Repugnant by the way, should he ever run for president, then. Besides which, soda pops have nothing to do with religion.

You mean like when Reagan got the votes from a massive push by Jerry Falwell and the Moral Majority. Yeah, so what's your real point?

Repugnants do it harder - that's why they were in power for two-thirds of the time over the last three decades. So there you see who really uses religion as a crutch.

["Michael Rubens Bloomberg (born February 14, 1942) is an American businessman and politician who is currently Mayor of New York City. With a net worth of $25 billion in 2012, he is also the 10th-richest person in the United States.[2] He is the founder and 88% owner of Bloomberg L.P., a financial data-services firm.[3][4][5]

A Democrat before seeking elective office , Bloomberg switched his registration in 2001 and ran for mayor as a Republican, winning the election that year and a second term in 2005. "]

Bloomberg also changes with the wind to do what ever will allow him power like every Liberal socialist type will do. He is NO REPUBLICAN he WAS and is a LIBERAL .

4363. It was a Relapse back to the Liberal Addiction but in reality Bloomberg is a "dyed in the wool" Liberal that will never be cured of his addiction to power and micromanaging people and spending other peoples money.

Once again I have to correct you, Bloomberg is a Democrat and will always be a Socialist democrat type....

["Michael Rubens Bloomberg (born February 14, 1942) is an American businessman and politician who is currently Mayor of New York City. With a net worth of $25 billion in 2012, he is also the 10th-richest person in the United States.[2] He is the founder and 88% owner of Bloomberg
L.P., a financial data-services firm.[3][4][5]

A Democrat before seeking elective office, Bloomberg switched his registration in 2001 and ran for mayor as a Republican, winning the election that year and a second term in 2005. "]

At the very least it was a Relapse back to the Liberal Addiction but in reality Bloomberg is a "dyed in the wool" Liberal that will never be cured of his addiction to power and micromanaging people and spending other peoples money.

were never true Democrats to begin with, they were always closet Repugnants.

Yeah, I know, you don't like it when a Repugnant does all that stuff so you have to call him a Democrat. That's so Repugnant of you.

That's right! If your income was over $131,000 you are in that top
You are part of that privileged group that paid 2/3rds of all federal taxes.

Because average federal tax rates rise with income, the share of federal taxes paid by higher-income households exceeded their share of before-tax income, and the opposite was true for lower-income households.

Ronald Reagan and Rick Perry are NOT my Idols

They had a long way to go to convince me that they were actually converts.... When push came to shove, Bush became a spineless Liberal and used Tax dollars contrary to what was constitutional to save Fannie/Freddie and private business that was unconstitutional government manipulation of free markets from congress. Bush should have chuckled and said that these Liberal programs were bound to fail and drag some private industry with them.

Rumination
#62 - Democrats have created a Matrix to convince you life is good.... you might call them the Liberal-Socialist "MACHINE" that has created your matrix.

Boy, you're stupid. Reagan sucked more money out of your pocket for the Savings & Loans crisis, 3.2% of GDP, than Bush did for TARP, less than 1%. Interestingly, both were Repugnants sucking money out of your pocket to help fat cat bankers.

Is this typically the level of political debate in America? No wonder my wife moved to the UK!

As for religion and politicians, besides the fact that they deserve each, politicians of all shades have to buy votes so they will say anything.

What makes me laugh is all those evolution deniers calling anyone with ounce of feeling for their fellow man a liberal/commie/whatever when it was their god who said 'love thy neighbour as thyself'.

Nowt as queer as folk :-)

Yes like the example "every body finds God a few seconds before they die" theory..... Or phrased another way "there are NO atheists in the foxhole" and if you believe in something and have built your beliefs around it "such as atheism" you should follow it to its fruition.

As you should do with free markets.

Bush didn't hold true to his "belief" when he was faced with an apocalyptic decision, Bush turned to the DARK side and accepted Socialism, and I'm not so sure about so many others that say they are or were Republican.

Weekly Highlights and Forecasts

Highlights of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
08 - 14 October 2012

Solar activity was moderate. Three low level M-class x-ray flares occurred in the first three days of the week. At 08/1117 UTC, an M2 was observed off the east limb. This was followed by two M1 flares from the same vicinity on 09/2331 UTC and 10/0504 UTC. The remainder of the week was characterized by C-class activity, primarily from Region 1589 (N13, L=266, class/area=Dkc/280 on 12 October). This region was first numbered on 09 October as it rotated into view as a Cao/B type group. It grew to its maximum area and produced the largest C-class flare of the week, a C9/1f on 12/0820 UTC, in addition to three other C1 flares. Magnetic complexity increased as the region became an Ekc/BGD on 13 October while it's areal extent began to decrease. By the 14th, the area had diminished to 240 millionths and the region was classified as an Eac/BG. The week ended with five regions on the visible solar disk with 1589 remaining the largest among them. Region 1591 (N07, L=230, class/area Dsi/220 on 14 October) was numbered on the 12th. By the 14th, it had become the most productive, responsible for five of the six C-class events that day, the largest of which was a C3 at 14/2159 UTC. There were no Earth-directed CMEs during the period.

No proton events were observed at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit was at low levels on 08 October, then reached high levels every day for the remainder of the week.

Geomagnetic field activity reached major storm levels on the 8th and 9th of October with the arrival of an Earth-directed CME that occured on 05 October. An interplanetary shock was observed at the ACE spacecraft at 08/0445 UTC. A sudden impulse of 21 nT at the Boulder magnetometer followed at 08/0515 UTC. By 08/0556 UTC the Kp index had reached active levels. Minor then major storm levels were subsequently observed at 08/0718 UTC and 08/0834 UTC respectively.

The major storm conditions persisted through 08/1200 UTC, after which conditions returned to mostly active levels. Major storms were again observed during the first two synoptic periods on 09 October, followed by a minor storm period and an active period. Late on the 9th, a coronal hole high speed stream became geoeffective bringing geomagnetic activity to minor storm level for the final period of the day. Solar wind speed at the ACE spacecraft rose from about 380 km/s to near 560 km/s during the latter half of the day. The geomagnetic field activity then declined and, with the exception of one active period on the 12th, remained at quiet to unsettled levels. By the 13th, another coronal hole high speed stream became geoeffective. It was preceded by a corotating interaction region and a solar sector boundary change. This led to active conditions by 13/0450 UTC and minor storm conditons by 13/0819 UTC. Minor storm levels persisted until 13/2100 UTC before briefly decreasing to unsettled levels for the final period of the 13th. The 14th began with minor storm conditions, after which activity ranged from quiet to active levels.

Forecast of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
15 October - 10 November 2012

Solar activity is expected to be at low levels with a slight chance for moderate activity through 21 October when Region 1589 rotates around the west limb. Generally low levels of activity are then expected to persist through 03 November, after which there is a slight chance for moderate activity as old Region 1589 returns.

No proton events are expected at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit is expected to be at high levels from 13 October through 18 October and again from 05-10 November. Recurrent coronal hole high speed streams are responsible for both periods of high flux.

Geomagnetic field activity is expected to be at quiet levels for the majority of the period. The two exceptions are 15-19 October and 08-10 November when recurrent coronal hole high speed streams are expected to bring active levels with a slight chance for minor storm levels.

I wouldn't mind how weird they were, but politicians are nearly all corrupt, greedy, incompetent asses who are just looking out for their own interests while the country goes to hell.

Poor mitchy - caught in another lie:
Michael R. Bloomberg: Republican 2002ï¿½07; Independent since 2007.

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Michael_Bloomberg
A Democrat before seeking elective office, Bloomberg switched his registration in 2001 and ran for mayor as a Republican, winning the election that year and a second term in 2005. Bloomberg left the Republican Party over policy and philosophical disagreements with national party leadership in 2007 and ran for his third term in 2009 as an independent candidate

Bloomberg was riding the Republican coat tails, he was never a Republican, or as we call them he was a RINO republican in name only.... he switched to get the power and once elected you notice you can't get rid of him.

Warren Harding:

["His conservatism, affable manner, and make-no-enemies campaign strategy made Harding the compromise choice at the 1920 Republican National Convention. During his presidential campaign, in the aftermath of World War I, he promised a return of the nation to "normalcy". This "America first" campaign encouraged industrialization and a strong economy independent of foreign influence. Harding departed from the progressive movement that had dominated Congress since President Theodore Roosevelt."]

4400. OBAMA0 SUPPORTERS THREATEN TO KILL ROMNEY IF HE WINS ELECTION

When Team Zero heard Romney tell their boss:

"Mr. President, take your campaign of division and anger and hate back to Chicago and let us get about rebuilding and reuniting America"

They spazzed in fright and faux outrage - for like their boss, they can dish it out but they can't take it. You know what freaks a fanatic out the most? Doubt. A fanatic is so because he's built a wall around his brain to keep out any hint of evidence he could be wrong. Once the drip of doubt starts creating cracks in that wall, his brain can dissolve into a puddle of goo.

Leftism always starts with promises of unbounded freedom, and ends with micromanagement by lawyers, bureaucrats, and policemen.

"Socialism is a philosophy of failure,
the creed of ignorance, and the gospel of envy,
its inherent virtue is the equal sharing of misery..."

-- Winston Churchill

"If you will not fight for the right when you can easily win without bloodshed; if you will not fight when your victory will be sure and not too costly; you may come to the moment when you will have to fight with all the odds against you and only a precarious chance of survival. There may even be a worse case. You may have to fight when there is no hope of victory, because it is better to perish than live as slaves."

---Winston Churchill

A New America www.NewAmericaMovie.com is a documentary film that outlines the history of the Progressive movement in America over the last century. It analyzes how Progressive ideology has transformed public policy, the structures of government, and its potential impact on the country's future. An example of historical analysis contained in the film would be the argument that the Progressive ideals employed by FDR's New Deal were the cause of the Great Depression, not the solution to it.

Through interviews with Constitutional scholars, authors, historians, public policymakers, and others, it reviews the original intent of the Founders, why it is important and lays out how Progressivism is in conflict with that original intent.

.....sound..familiar?.....

Anyone who is NOT a public Union/Liberal/Progressive/Socialist/Communist is a Fascist according to Useful Liberal JackAss Idiots.
Anyone who refutes a public Union/Liberal/Progressive/Socialist/
Communist is a moron according to Useful Liberal JackAss Idiots.

As socialistworker.org admits, http://socialistworker.org/2003-2/471/471_09_Fascism.shtml
the left routinely applies the term "fascist" to any Republican political leader. In Britain The Guardian, BBC, and other liberal media pounced on purported links between the Bush family and corporations that had dealings with Nazi Germany. The fact that Prescott Bush, George W. Bush's grandfather, was a "director and shareholder" with companies that had indirect financial dealings with Germany in the 1930s would hardly seem damning, however. Much the same could be said for many other affluent individuals in America or Britain at the time. Every American today with mutual fund holdings is invested, at least indirectly, in Hugo Chavez's Venezuela. Does that make them Marxist revolutionaries?

Talk of Hitler became a lot more common during the Bush years, when it was accepted wisdom on the left that George Bush was worse than Hitler. Then there was Nancy Pelosi, who spent weeks back in 2010
complaining of the Tea Party's so-called "swastika signs" -- signs that did not signal an alliance with fascism but opposition to it.
Pelosi was hardly alone in accusing the Tea Party of fascism. Marc Rubin, writing for examiner.com, referred to Tea Party members as "text book fascists." He went on to pin the neo-fascist label on Tom Tancredo, presumably because of Tancredo's concerns over illegal immigration. If those concerns make Tancredo a fascist, they would make the majority of Americans who share those concerns fascists as well. But that's pretty much how the left sees America.

The immediate response of liberals such as Chris Matthews http://www.mrc.org/biasalert/2011/20110412110017.aspx to the Ryan "Path to Prosperity" was to characterize it as a killer not just of babies and old people but of "half the people who watch this show."
This attempt to portray the GOP plan as genocidal is just another example of the fascist rhetoric. It appears that Matthews is attempting to portray the Ryan plan as some sort of Final Solution.

It's not just loose cannons on MSNBC who resort to fascist innuendo.
Obama's speechwriters are good at crafting sinister suggestions even without using the "F" word. Obama's budget speech of April 13 actually set the tone for the current debate. With Rep. Ryan sitting on the front row, Obama lectured his audience that the GOP plan would kick "someone's grandparents" out of nursing homes and cause children with autism and Down's syndrome to "fend for themselves." It is well known that Hitler sent legions of the disabled to concentration camps to be gassed, but the suggestion that a plan to actually save Medicare and Medicaid resembles the Holocaust, if that is what Obama intended, is repellent. It was one more proof, as if we needed any more, of a fatal weakness in the character of this President. He is a man whose entire existence is devoted to gutter politics. For such a man, statesmanship and dignified leadership are inconceivable.

The plain truth is that America can no longer afford this sort of reckless partisanship on the part of the chief executive. The fact that Obama disagrees with Rep. Ryan's budget plan does not justify accusations of killing sick children or tossing old folks out on the street. That kind of rhetoric may pass for wit in the sixth grade, but it is juvenile coming from the President.

"It is obvious what the fraudulent issue of fascism versus communism accomplishes: it sets up, as opposites, two variants of the same political system; it eliminates the possibility of considering capitalism; it switches the choice of “Freedom or dictatorship?” into “Which kind of dictatorship?”—thus establishing dictatorship as an inevitable fact and offering only a choice of rulers. The choice—according to the proponents of that fraud—is: a dictatorship of the rich (fascism) or a dictatorship of the poor (communism)."

"That fraud collapsed in the 1940’s, in the aftermath of World War II. It is too obvious, too easily demonstrable that fascism and communism are not two opposites, but two rival gangs fighting over the same territory—that both are variants of statism, based on the collectivist principle that man is the rightless slave of the state—that both are socialistic, in theory, in practice, and in the explicit statements of their leaders—that under both systems, the poor are enslaved and the rich are expropriated in favor of a ruling clique—that fascism is not the product of the political “right,” but of the “left”—that the basic issue is not “rich versus poor,” but man versus the state, or: individual rights versus totalitarian government—which means:

capitalism versus socialism."

"Just as the Left was drawn to the communist killing machines of Lenin, Stalin, Mao, Pol Pot, and Castro, so too it is now attracted to radical Islam."

"The contempt that German Hitlerytes had for "Bolshevism" or "marxist Jews" generally should also not mislead us in assessing the similarity between National Socialism and Communism. Leftist sects are very prone to rivalry, dissension, schism and hatred of one-another. One has only to think of the Bolsheviks versus the Mensheviks, Stalin versus Trotsky, China versus the Soviet Union etc. Similarity does not preclude rivalry. Hitler and Stalin were literally brothers in arms BEFORE they became rivals. That socialist brothers sometimes fall out should not prevent us from noting the brotherhood concerned."

"The fundamental dogma of all brands of socialism and communism is that the market economy or capitalism is a system that hurts the vital interests of the immense majority of people for the sole benefit of a small minority of rugged individualists. It condemns the masses to progressing impoverishment. It brings about misery, slavery, oppression, degradation and exploitation of the working men, while it enriches a class of idle and useless parasites."

"This doctrine was not the work of Karl Marx. It had been developed long before Marx entered the scene. Its most successful propagators were not the Marxian authors, but such men as Carlyle and Ruskin, the British Fabians, the German professors and the American Institutionalists. And it is a very significant fact that the correctness of this dogma was contested only by a few economists who were very soon silenced and barred from access to the universities, the press, the leadership of political parties and, first of all, public office. Public opinion by and large accepted the condemnation of capitalism without any reservation."

"The term 'planning' is mostly used as a synonym for socialism, communism, and authoritarian and totalitarian economic management. Sometimes only the German pattern of socialism-Zwangswirtschaft-is called planning, while the term socialism proper is reserved for the Russian pattern of outright socialization and bureaucratic operation of all plants, shops, and farms. At any rate, planning in this sense means all-around planning by the government and enforcement of these plans by the police power. Planning in this sense means full government control of business. It is the antithesis of free enterprise, private initiative, private ownership of the means of production, market economy, and the price system. Planning and capitalism are utterly incompatible. Within a system of planning production is conducted according to the government's orders, not according to the plans of capitalists and entrepreneurs eager to profit by best filling the wants of the consumers.

"But the term planning is also used in a second sense. Lord Keynes, Sir William Beveridge, Professor Hansen, and many other eminent men assert that they do not want to substitute totalitarian slavery for freedom. They declare that they are planing for a free society. They recommend a third system, which, as they say, is as far from socialism as it is from capitalism, which, as a third solution of the problem of society's economic organization, stands midway between the two other systems, and while retaining the advantages of both, avoids the disadvantages inherent in each.

"These self-styled progressives are certainly mistaken when they pretend that their proposals are new and unheard of. The idea of this third solution is very old indeed, and the French have long since baptized it with a pertinent name; they call it interventionism. Hardly anybody can doubt that history will link the idea of social security, more closely than with the American New Deal and with Sir William Beveridge, with the memory of Bismarck whom our fathers did not precisely describe as a liberal. All the essential ideas of present-day interventionist progressivism were neatly expounded by the supreme brain-trusters of imperial Germany, Professors Schmoller and Wagner, who at the same time urged their Kaiser to invade and to conquer the Americas. Far be it from me to condemn any idea only on account of its not being new. But as the progressives slander all their opponents as old-fashioned, orthodox, and reactionary, it is expedient to observe that it would be more appropriate to speak of the clash of two orthodoxies; the Bismarck orthodoxy versus the Jefferson orthodoxy.

Dr. Ludwig von Mises - 1952 - http://mises.org/books/planningforfreedom_mises.pdf

The origins of the modern left can be traced back to the famous passage in Rousseau's Discourse on the Origin and Foundations of Inequality, in which he condemned the institution of private property:

"The first man, who after enclosing a piece of ground, took it into his head to say, 'this is mine,' and found people simple enough to believe him, was the real founder of civil society."

Added Rousseau: "How many crimes, how many wars, how many murders, how many misfortunes and horrors, would that man have saved the human species, who pulling up the stakes or filling up the ditches should have cried to his fellows: Beware of listening to this impostor; you are lost, if you forget that the fruits of the earth belong equally to us all, and the earth itself to nobody!"

Around the 1830s, a faction of French liberals gravitated toward Romanticism and the philosophy of the late Rousseau, proclaiming that capitalism, private property, and the increasing complexity of modern society were agents of moral decay -- both for the individual and for society at large. This is essentially the worldview that has made its way, through history, into the collective mind of the modern left; it is a worldview calling for a revolution that not only will topple the existing capitalist order and punish its corrupt leaders, but that also will replace that order with a socialist regime where the utopian ideals of perfect justice and equality will reign. Such an ambition can be put into effect only by a totalitarian state with the authority to micromanage every facet of human life, precisely the end-point toward which the policies and crusades of the modern left are directed.

When the term "liberalism" (from the Latin word liberalis, meaning "pertaining to a free man") first emerged in the early 1800s, its hallmarks were a belief in individual rights, the rule of law, limited government, private property, and laissez faire economics. These would remain the defining characteristics of liberalism throughout the liberal epoch (generally identified as the period of 1815-1914). Yet the modern left, which portrays itself as the agent of enlightened commitment to “liberal” causes, in fact stands for the antithesis of each of the foregoing liberal ideals. Contrary to its self-definition, the left is neither “liberal” nor “progressive,” but rather a reactionary force that seeks to resurrect the traditions that characterized the epoch which preceded the rise of classical liberalism.

The following is from The World Book Encyclopedia, 1947 edition:
The chief characteristics of Fascism are as follows:

THE CULTIVATION OF IGNORANCE

Fascism, like all forms of government, rests firmly on the sincere consent of a large part of the population... To maintain this consent, the Fascist leadership must cut off the people from any information which might cause them to doubt the complete correctness of the fixed Fascist principles... All forms of communication are carefully censored, so that the public will receive only those facts that the dictators want known... Travel to other countries must be controlled, and freedom of speech and assembly must be rigorously suppressed...

THE POLICE STATE

Fascism depends upon the police to crush all opposition or dissent. Secret police spy on the whole population, and any casual remark against the regime leads to swift and severe punishment... Opposition parties are dissolved. Intellectual, athletic and recreational organizations are usually brought under the control of the Fascist authority... The ruthlessness of the police gradually becomes less noticeable... This is because within a year or so after a Fascist government takes power, vigorous opponents of the regime have either left the country, been killed or jailed...

EXTREME NATIONALISM

Fascism is highly nationalistic... It tries to identify its principles with the country, so that disagreement will look like treason... Some other country, or some group within the country, is chosen to serve as the "enemy" and made to appear as the cause of all evils or misfortunes... For example, the Nazis in Germany represented their movement first as a crusade against the Jews, then as a fight against Communism and later as a struggle against the "attacks" from whatever neighboring country they wished to subdue or occupy... Extreme nationalism often becomes a kind of racial fanaticism... Sometimes it combines racial and religious bigotry...

http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/groupProfile.asp?grpid=6535

MILITARISM

Fascism maintains among the people a permanently warlike frame of mind... Every citizen feels that he is mobilized against enemies of the regime from within, and against possible foreign foes... The dictator usually comes to power during a period of economic crisis or depression... He relieves the depression partly by employing many people in the making of armaments... To justify this procedure, he must convince the people that the country is threatened, and must point toward some of the enemies against whom the armaments may be needed...

Marx wasn't a first rate thinker.

Ibsen was, though: "The minority is sometimes right; but the majority is always wrong."

The things that the majority of people believe are almost always vacuous, moronic, and wrong. The majority, to put it as charitably as possible, is possessed of distinctly limited intellectual powers.

That is why they are easily manipulated by the very worst sort of knaves (that is to say, politicians and the powers behind politicians).

Therefore there really is no such thing as "majority rule." The majority are quite incapable of "ruling" themselves, much less anything else.

When a society is based on the principle of majority rule, it is really ruled by the very worst and most duplicitous among us.

With all good wishes,

Kevin Alfred Strom.

You don't call his endorsement of civil rights for blacks, military disarmament and child welfare laws "turning to the dark side" of liberalism?

Bloomberg is a Republican, Guiliani

If there were any "coat tails" it is the demonstrated preference of NYC voters for Republican mayors.......

He actually meant child welfare NOT more Federal government power over the parents.... The military cut was cutting the government spending and needed to be done. And Republicans have been behind all the civil rights for blacks from President Lincoln and President Grant to 1964 and the Republicans that passed the civil rights act and YET another civil rights endorsement by Warren Harding that most people never heard of thanks to Liberals history lessons.

Karl Marx died 7 years after the constitution was written in 1776.

So far U.S. Capitalism has lasted longer than any Socialist system that I know of.

Maybe he was senile and got it backwards, Marx meant that Socialism contained the seeds to it's own destruction. At least he would have been correct if we suppose he was a senile old fool and mixed up his prediction.

Correction

Karl Marx died 107 years after the constitution was written in 1876.

Correction

So far U.S. Capitalism has lasted longer than any Socialist system that I know of.

Maybe he was senile and got it backwards, Marx meant that Socialism contained the seeds to it's own destruction. At least he would have been correct if we suppose he was a senile old fool and mixed up his prediction.

The facts don't prove Karl Marx correct, he didn't live long enough to know he was a failure as a prognosticator.

Mitt Romney Secret

and pondering how he'd exploit a pre-election hostage crisis.

Below is a complete transcript, produced by Mother
Jones, of the entire unedited Romney videos that we published on Tuesday. (See our exclusive coverage of Romney writing off Obama voters and trashing the Mideast peace process at his recent fundraiser in Florida.)
Read on, or jump directly to these highlights from Romney:

* On the 47 percent of Americans
"who will vote for the president no matter what."

* On the dividends of his anticipated November 6 victory: "we'll see☐without actually doing anything☐we'll actually get a boost in the economy."

* On the "almost unthinkable prospects" for Mideast peace: "I look at the Palestinians not wanting to see peace anyway and I say there's just no way."

And here are some telling moments you may not have heard about yet:

* Mocking immigration in the United States: "[If] you have no skill or experience you're welcome to cross the border and stay here for the rest of your life."

* Envisioning a pre-election hostage crisis, à la Iran and Jimmy Carter: "If something of that nature presents itself, I will work to find a way to take advantage of the opportunity."

* Claiming that "the Fed is buying like three-quarters of the debt that America issues." (Which, despite Romney's expertise in finance, is plain wrong.)

* Joking about media strategy and his reputation as a "rich, rich guy": "You know that I'm as poor as a church mouse."

* Making enemies on the late-night talk show circuit: "Now Letterman hates me because I've been on Leno more than him."

* An odd rant from an audience member: "How are you going to win if 54 percent of the voters think China's economy is bigger than ours? Or if it costs 4 cents to make a penny and we keep making pennies? Canada got it right a month ago. Why isn't someone saying, 'Stop making pennies, round it to the nearest nickel?' You know, that's an easy thing, compared to Iran."

I'm no apologist for Marx but he's hardly to blame for what's been done in his name. A bit like like Jesus really - just look what has been done in his name. Nearly every country in the world has committed unspeakable acts in the name of some doctrine or another. Some have committed more than others and there does not seem any end to it. Pots, kettles black.

Use magic and slight of hand and change the definitions and

Ike told it like it is:

"Our toil, resources and livelihood are all involved; so is the very structure of our society. In the councils of government, we must guard against the acquisition of unwarranted influence, whether sought or unsought, by the military-industrial complex. The potential for the disastrous rise of misplaced power exists, and will persist."

According to the rumor mill at radioreference.com GRE, the maker of Radio Shack scanners, has stopped making scanners. There is nothing official from GRE but they have fired most GRE US personnel and a ham radio seller has posted an article stating that GRE has stopped making scanners.

If it is true then Uniden will have a monopoly on the scanner market and prices will certainly rise.

Neither of which would be the case.

But my response was a public nod to DXAce. And what it said was something that would be understood between pirate radio listeners. For those who are pirate listeners, explanations are unnecessary. For those who aren't, explanations are meaningless.

That it told you nothing is unfortunate.

But your assertion of assumption in response is both passive-aggressively manipulative, and uninformed.

Nice meeting you, Ernie.

Will Digital Radio Mondiale Save Shortwave Broadcasting?
Radio World
Once touted as the “Savior of Shortwave,” Digital Radio Mondiale has not lived up to its hype. Proposed in 1988, with early field-testing in 2000, inaugural broadcasting in 2001 and its official rollout in 2003, DRM has had a lackluster career over the ...

Facts? What facts? You've given no "facts". You just blew the guy off.
You couldn't be bothered giving an explanation because it would be "meaningless". You are implying that we are too dumb to understand any explanation you may offer. You have offered NO "facts", just tap-dancing.

How do you KNOW a polite response would be "meaningless"? Why do you write off everyone else as too dumb to understand what you are trying to explain?

Why don't you try giving some actual facts instead of rudely dismissing the issue?

Liberty Net: October 13, 2012

http://3950.net/2012/10/liberty-net-october-13-2012/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

A SOLAR STORM led to bizarre conditions this week on 75 meters, and some normally dominant Liberty Net stations could not hear each other ï¿½ while others were even clearer than usual. Despite the ionosphereï¿½s lack of coï¿½peration, the net discussions were as powerful and educational as ever.

Here are a few examples of what was brought forward ï¿½ and debated ï¿½ on the net this week:

ï¿½ The major objections to Paul Ryan are not the latest phony ï¿½outragesï¿½ ballyhooed by the phony media ï¿½ such as whether or not he was a hypocrite for requesting so-called ï¿½stimulus fundsï¿½ stolen from honest people ï¿½ but rather the indisputable fact that he is a warmonger and is totally owned by the Zionist lobby. (4 minutes)

ï¿½ The mass-murdering transnational criminal organization that falsely calls itself the ï¿½Federal Government of the United States of Americaï¿½ has now officially declared the Salvadoran-American gang MS-13 to be a ï¿½transnational criminal organization.ï¿½ Pot. Kettle. Black. (13 minutes)

ï¿½ Why has Jesse Jackson, Jr. disappeared for months? And why is he still drawing a taxpayer-paid salary while in hiding? (16 minutes)

ï¿½ Interesting, isnï¿½t it, that the Florida State Board of Education has set reading and math competency goals that vary widely by race? (21 minutes)

ï¿½ Some are now complaining, probably justifiably, that Muslims are now overtly and covertly trying to gain influence and power over the DC regime. What these complainers fail to mention, though, is the fact that another (and just as dangerous) Middle Eastern group has dominated Washington for for decades now. (30 minutes)

ï¿½ Some of the regimeï¿½s mid-level managers have apparently gone insane and are now suggesting that we should do deep background checks on all immigrants to ï¿½find out if theyï¿½re terroristsï¿½ and ï¿½make sure theyï¿½re okay.ï¿½ Not only is this totally impractical considering the regimeï¿½s level of competence and fiscal soundness, but it would end up inconveniencing and oppressing primarily the totally innocent. The only sane policy would have been to retain a racial definition of citizenship ï¿½ but such sanity is not allowed in Occupied America. (36 minutes)

ï¿½ Why is Washington aggressively promoting the use of food stamps by the illegal invaders now crossing our southern border by the millions? (41 minutes)

ï¿½ Itï¿½s easy to find examples in history of evil governments that killed and oppressed people. But what the governments of the US, Australasia, and western Europe are doing is evil of an unprecedented kind: They are replacing ï¿½ genociding ï¿½ their own core populations, the people who founded the countries themselves. (48 minutes)

Thanks to Marty, N2IRJ, youï¿½re able to listen to the Liberty Net right now on your computer here at http://3950.net/ ï¿½ or download the file and listen on your portable mp3 player. Check in via your ham rig, and also check out the live feed and discussion room during net times, and the additional feed from N2SAG, that let you make an end run around jammers and a fickle ionosphere.

Join in or listen to the most exciting net on the amateur bands every Saturday night starting at 10PM Eastern Time.

Our thanks go to W1WCR for his hard work and courage in keeping this very important part of the amateur radio service alive for almost 40 years!

The complainers obviously see the defection and subsequent conversion to Islam of the US Navy dolphin as an omen of things to come.

All sea mammals are now suspected of secretly harbouring anti Zionist sentiments and are being killed off as quickly as naval 'exercises' allow.

The terrorist humans who are trying to 'help' these oceanic miscreants are in fact, no better than the basest of scum. Washington will be gathering up these so called "Marine biologists" and forcibly re-educating them.

Bless America.

Don't worry, the Washington regime and its functionaries are the ones who are ultimately going to be re-educated -- by Nature, whose laws they foolishly think they can flout.

As for the dolphins, they should forget about Islam or any of the goat-herder religions. Classicism and free-thinking are not only much closer to reality, but they are one Hell of a lot more fun.

As ever,

Kevin Alfred Strom.

One conduit for Obama donations is Obama.com, which was registered in 2008 to Robert Roche, an American who lives and works in Communist China, where he owns an infomercial company.

Roche is also a bundler for the Obama campaign and was given a seat at the head table for a 2011 state dinner with the Communist Chinese president

The Government Accountability Institute report said that the site registration was changed in 2010 to make it anonymous and that it was unclear whether Roche still owns it.

Roche’s mother in Chicago referred calls to the Obama campaign. The campaign declined to comment.

A New America www.NewAmericaMovie.com is a documentary film that outlines the history of the Progressive movement in America over the last century. It analyzes how Progressive ideology has transformed public policy, the structures of government, and its potential impact on the country’s future. An example of historical analysis contained in the film would be the argument that the Progressive ideals employed by FDR’s New Deal were the cause of the Great Depression, not the solution to it.

Through interviews with Constitutional scholars, authors, historians, public policymakers, and others, it reviews the original intent of the Founders, why it is important and lays out how Progressivism is in conflict with that original intent.

As socialistworker.org admits, http://socialistworker.org/2003-2/471/471_09_Fascism.shtml
the left routinely applies the term "fascist" to any Republican political leader. In Britain The Guardian, BBC, and other liberal media pounced on purported links between the Bush family and corporations that had dealings with Nazi Germany. The fact that Prescott Bush, George W. Bush's grandfather, was a "director and shareholder" with companies that had indirect financial dealings with Germany in the 1930s would hardly seem damning, however. Much the same could be said for many other affluent individuals in America or Britain at the time. Every American today with mutual fund holdings is invested, at least indirectly, in Hugo Chavez's Venezuela. Does that make them Marxist revolutionaries?

Talk of Hitler became a lot more common during the Bush years, when it was accepted wisdom on the left that George Bush was worse than Hitler. Then there was Nancy Pelosi, who spent weeks back in 2010
complaining of the Tea Party's so-called "swastika signs" -- signs that did not signal an alliance with fascism but opposition to it.
Pelosi was hardly alone in accusing the Tea Party of fascism. Marc

Rubin, writing for examiner.com, referred to Tea Party members as "text book fascists." He went on to pin the neo-fascist label on Tom Tancredo, presumably because of Tancredo's concerns over illegal immigration. If those concerns make Tancredo a fascist, they would make the majority of Americans who share those concerns fascists as well. But that's pretty much how the left sees America.

The immediate response of liberals such as Chris Matthews http://www.mrc.org/biasalert/2011/20110412110017.aspx to the Ryan "Path to Prosperity" was to characterize it as a killer not just of babies and old people but of "half the people who watch this show." This attempt to portray the GOP plan as genocidal is just another example of the fascist rhetoric. It appears that Matthews is attempting to portray the Ryan plan as some sort of Final Solution.

It's not just loose cannons on MSNBC who resort to fascist innuendo. Obama's speechwriters are good at crafting sinister suggestions even without using the "F" word. Obama's budget speech of April 13 actually set the tone for the current debate. With Rep. Ryan sitting on the front row, Obama lectured his audience that the GOP plan would kick "someone's grandparents" out of nursing homes and cause children with autism and Down's syndrome to "fend for themselves." It is well known that Hitler sent legions of the disabled to concentration camps to be gassed, but the suggestion that a plan to actually save Medicare and Medicaid resembles the Holocaust, if that is what Obama intended, is repellent. It was one more proof, as if we needed any more, of a fatal weakness in the character of this President. He is a man whose entire existence is devoted to gutter politics. For such a man, statesmanship and dignified leadership are inconceivable.

The plain truth is that America can no longer afford this sort of reckless partisanship on the part of the chief executive. The fact that Obama disagrees with Rep. Ryan's budget plan does not justify accusations of killing sick children or tossing old folks out on the street. That kind of rhetoric may pass for wit in the sixth grade, but it is juvenile coming from the President.

"It is obvious what the fraudulent issue of fascism versus communism accomplishes: it sets up, as opposites, two variants of the same political system; it eliminates the possibility of considering capitalism; it switches the choice of “Freedom or dictatorship?” into “Which kind of dictatorship?”—thus establishing dictatorship as an inevitable fact and offering only a choice of rulers. The choice—according to the proponents of that fraud—is: a dictatorship of the rich (fascism) or a dictatorship of the poor (communism)."

"That fraud collapsed in the 1940’s, in the aftermath of World War II. It is too obvious, too easily demonstrable that fascism and communism are not two opposites, but two rival gangs fighting over the same territory—that both are variants of statism, based on the collectivist principle that man is the rightless slave of the state—that both are socialistic, in theory, in practice, and in the explicit statements of their leaders—that under both systems, the poor are enslaved and the rich are expropriated in favor of a ruling clique—that fascism is not the product of the political “right,” but of the “left”—that the basic issue is not “rich versus poor,” but man versus the state, or: individual rights versus totalitarian government—which means: capitalism versus socialism."

"Just as the Left was drawn to the communist killing machines of Lenin, Stalin, Mao, Pol Pot, and Castro, so too it is now attracted to radical Islam."

"The contempt that German Hitlerytes had for "Bolshevism" or "marxist Jews" generally should also not mislead us in assessing the similarity between National Socialism and Communism. Leftist sects are very prone to rivalry, dissension, schism and hatred of one-another. One has only to think of the Bolsheviks versus the Mensheviks, Stalin versus Trotsky, China versus the Soviet Union etc. Similarity does not preclude rivalry. Hitler and Stalin were literally brothers in arms BEFORE they became rivals. That socialist brothers sometimes fall out should not prevent us from noting the brotherhood concerned."

"The fundamental dogma of all brands of socialism and communism is that the market economy or capitalism is a system that hurts the vital interests of the immense majority of people for the sole benefit of a small minority of rugged individualists. It condemns the masses to progressing impoverishment. It brings about misery, slavery, oppression, degradation and exploitation of the working men, while it enriches a class of idle and useless parasites."

"This doctrine was not the work of Karl Marx. It had been developed long before Marx entered the scene. Its most successful propagators were not the Marxian authors, but such men as Carlyle and Ruskin, the British Fabians, the German professors and the American Institutionalists. And it is a very significant fact that the correctness of this dogma was contested only by a few economists who were very soon silenced and barred from access to the universities, the press, the leadership of political parties and, first of all, public office. Public opinion by and large accepted the condemnation of capitalism without any reservation."

"The term 'planning' is mostly used as a synonym for socialism, communism, and authoritarian and totalitarian economic management. Sometimes only the German pattern of socialism-Zwangswirtschaft-is called planning, while the term socialism proper is reserved for the Russian pattern of outright socialization and bureaucratic operation of all plants, shops, and farms. At any rate, planning in this sense means all-around planning by the government and enforcement of these plans by the police power. Planning in this sense means full government control of business. It is the antithesis of free enterprise, private initiative, private ownership of the means of production, market economy, and the price system. Planning and capitalism are utterly incompatible. Within a system of planning production is conducted according to the government's orders, not according to the plans of capitalists and entrepreneurs eager to profit by best filling the wants of the consumers.

"But the term planning is also used in a second sense. Lord Keynes, Sir William Beveridge, Professor Hansen, and many other eminent men assert that they do not want to substitute totalitarian slavery for freedom. They declare that they are planing for a free society. They recommend a third system, which, as they say, is as far from socialism as it is from capitalism, which, as a third solution of the problem of society's economic organization, stands midway between the two other systems, and while retaining the advantages of both, avoids the disadvantages inherent in each.

"These self-styled progressives are certainly mistaken when they pretend that their proposals are new and unheard of. The idea of this third solution is very old indeed, and the French have long since baptized it with a pertinent name; they call it interventionism. Hardly anybody can doubt that history will link the idea of social security, more closely than with the American New Deal and with Sir William Beveridge, with the memory of Bismarck whom our fathers did not precisely describe as a liberal. All the essential ideas of present-day interventionist progressivism were neatly expounded by the supreme brain-trusters of imperial Germany, Professors Schmoller and Wagner, who at the same time urged their Kaiser to invade and to conquer the Americas. Far be it from me to condemn any idea only on account of its not being new. But as the progressives slander all their opponents as old-fashioned, orthodox, and reactionary, it is expedient to observe that it would be more appropriate to speak of the clash of two orthodoxies; the Bismarck orthodoxy versus the Jefferson orthodoxy.

Dr. Ludwig von Mises - 1952 - http://mises.org/books/planningforfreedom_mises.pdf

The origins of the modern left can be traced back to the famous passage in Rousseau’s Discourse on the Origin and Foundations of Inequality, in which he condemned the institution of private property:

“The first man, who after enclosing a piece of ground, took it into his head to say, ‘this is mine,’ and found people simple enough to believe him, was the real founder of civil society.”

Added Rousseau: “How many crimes, how many wars, how many murders, how many misfortunes and horrors, would that man have saved the human species, who pulling up the stakes or filling up the ditches should have cried to his fellows: Beware of listening to this impostor; you are lost, if you forget that the fruits of the earth belong equally to us all, and the earth itself to nobody!”

Around the 1830s, a faction of French liberals gravitated toward Romanticism and the philosophy of the late Rousseau, proclaiming that capitalism, private property, and the increasing complexity of modern society were agents of moral decay -- both for the individual and for society at large. This is essentially the worldview that has made its way, through history, into the collective mind of the modern left; it is a worldview calling for a revolution that not only will topple the existing capitalist order and punish its corrupt leaders, but that also will replace that order with a socialist regime where the utopian ideals of perfect justice and equality will reign. Such an ambition can be put into effect only by a totalitarian state with the authority to micromanage every facet of human life, precisely the end-point toward which the policies and crusades of the modern left are directed.

When the term “liberalism” (from the Latin word liberalis, meaning “pertaining to a free man”) first emerged in the early 1800s, its hallmarks were a belief in individual rights, the rule of law, limited government, private property, and laissez faire economics. These would remain the defining characteristics of liberalism throughout the liberal epoch (generally identified as the period of 1815-1914). Yet the modern left, which portrays itself as the agent of enlightened commitment to “liberal” causes, in fact stands for the antithesis of each of the foregoing liberal ideals. Contrary to its self-definition, the left is neither “liberal” nor “progressive,” but rather a reactionary force that seeks to resurrect the traditions that characterized the epoch which preceded the rise of classical liberalism.

The following is from The World Book Encyclopedia, 1947 edition:
The chief characteristics of Fascism are as follows:

THE CULTIVATION OF IGNORANCE

Fascism, like all forms of government, rests firmly on the sincere consent of a large part of the population... To maintain this consent, the Fascist leadership must cut off the people from any information which might cause them to doubt the complete correctness of the fixed Fascist principles... All forms of communication are carefully censored, so that the public will receive only those facts that the dictators want known... Travel to other countries must be controlled, and freedom of speech and assembly must be rigorously suppressed...

THE POLICE STATE

Fascism depends upon the police to crush all opposition or dissent. Secret police spy on the whole population, and any casual remark against the regime leads to swift and severe punishment... Opposition parties are dissolved. Intellectual, athletic and recreational organizations are usually brought under the control of the Fascist authority... The ruthlessness of the police gradually becomes less noticeable... This is because within a year or so after a Fascist government takes power, vigorous opponents of the regime have either left the country, been killed or jailed...

EXTREME NATIONALISM

Fascism is highly nationalistic... It tries to identify its principles with the country, so that disagreement will look like treason... Some other country, or some group within the country, is chosen to serve as the "enemy" and made to appear as the cause of all evils or misfortunes... For example, the Nazis in Germany represented their movement first as a crusade against the Jews, then as a fight against Communism and later as a struggle against the "attacks" from whatever neighboring country they wished to subdue or occupy... Extreme nationalism often becomes a kind of racial fanaticism... Sometimes it combines racial and religious bigotry...

http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/groupProfile.asp?grpid=6535

MILITARISM

Fascism maintains among the people a permanently warlike frame of mind... Every citizen feels that he is mobilized against enemies of the regime from within, and against possible foreign foes... The dictator usually comes to power during a period of economic crisis or depression... He relieves the depression partly by employing many people in the making of armaments... To justify this procedure, he must convince the people that the country is threatened, and must point toward some of the enemies against whom the armaments may be needed...

An interesting story the Beeb had, that you probably didn't see on Fox News....

1) Romney is a Mormon.

2) Romney has donated millions to the Mormon church.

3) The Salt Lake Tribune newspaper in Salt Lake City, Utah, and the newspaper of record for the Mormon church has endorsed -- Obama.

They ask of Romney "Who is this guy, really, and what in the world does he truly believe?".

"Romney, though, is shameless, lavishing vastly diverse audiences with words, any words, they would trade their votes to hear."

"Sadly, it is not the only Romney, as his campaign for the White House has made abundantly clear, first in his servile courtship of the tea party in order to win the nomination, and now as the partyï¿½s shape-shifting nominee."

Those are just a few highlights. Read (or should I say read it and weep) the complete Tribune editorial here at their web site:

http://www.sltrib.com/sltrib/opinion/55019844-82/endorsement-romney-obama-president.html.csp Too bad his fellow Mormons have nothing good to say about him. :-(

However, if you feel the Tribune editorial board has their Romney facts wrong, it is your duty as a concerned citizen to set them (and us) straight.

4504. Communist DiKtators Chavez, Castro and Putin Endorse ObaMa0

The latest [dictator] to publicly announce his support for the commander-in-chief's reelection bid was Venezuela's Hugo Chavez, who this week assured he'd vote for Obama if he were from the United States. The America-bashing strongman made the announcement on state-owned television, saying "Obama is a good guy" and that if Obama was from Caracas, he'd surely return the favor by voting for Chavez.

Earlier in the year the government-official daughter of Cuban military dictator Raul Castro proclaimed her country's support for Obama during a visit to the U.S. "I believe that Obama needs another opportunity and he needs greater support to move forward with his projects and with his ideas, which I believe come from the bottom of his heart," Mariela Castro said during a cable news interview. ...

That brings us to Russia's Vladimir Putin, who has eliminated most elections in his country, monopolized all major media and destroyed the political party system. ... In a letter to a major newspaper, the president of a group dedicated to expanding freedom around the world points out that under Putin there has been an "across-the-board crackdown on civil society." The piece goes on to ask: "Will Obama stand up against Putin's abuses?" Unlikely, now that the Russian dictator has extended his endorsement.

FINAL UPDATE: The #Sensata Story Could Destroy Romney
by TheNewDeal00Follow

If this is an indicator or preview of the Romney economic policy in action, we are all in deep, deep trouble.

FINAL UPDATE:
(I deleted the previous updates because they were getting longer than the diary itself.)
OK. Let's set the record straight, for real this time, about the flag situation.
First off, I have to apologize. I was wrong about the situation with the Chinese flag. This is what I heard from various other sources but it's my fault for going on impulse instead of digging for the facts first. I am humiliated and sorry.
The rest of the story is 100% accurate and can be backed up by many sources including the ones in the diary.
So... my bad.
Here's the actual situation from the Sensata employees themselves from their webiste:
There seems to be some confusion about whether or not our Sensata plant took down our American flag and replaced it with the Chinese flag. Here is the truth. Sensata took down our American flag on the day they flew in our Chinese replacements that we were forced to train. They put our American flag back up after the Chinese workers left. They never flew the Chinese flag.
http://bainport.com/...
The rest of the diary has been updated so we can hopefully move on and get this story out.
I'm going to make this a quick one. There's plenty of links for you to read further on this and you should anyway. This story is very damning to Mitt Romney and even worse, for the employees of Sensata Tech and every working class American if Romney wins.
Romney's Bain Capital did what they do best. They bought out a company called Sensata Tech and are in the process of outsourcing it to China.

They even brought in Chinese workers for the current employees to train. Yea, they were forced to train their own replacements.
Employees of Sensata in Freeport, IL say that Bain Capital forced the company to take down their American flag during the time they trained their Chinese replacement workers.
This is our economy if Romney wins.
And remember during the debate when Romney said he never heard of a tax break for outsourcing?
As that lying sack of shit spoke those words he was getting a tax break for sending Sensata to China.
Please don't take my word for it, read for yourself below. This story needs to get out for the sake of this election and for the workers camping out in protest of their jobs being outsourced.
Oh.. and the company is set to to close on November 5th, one day before the election.
How sweet.

Highlights of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
15 - 21 October 2012

Solar activity ranged from low to high levels. Activity was low during 15 - 19 October due to mostly low-level C-class flares. The largest flare of this interval was a C7 at 17/0802 UTC from Region 1596 (N07, L=150, class/area Eho/460 on 21 October) which displayed a beta-gamma magnetic configuration during most of its transit.
Activity increased to high levels on 20 October due to an impulsive M9 x-ray flare at 20/1814 UTC from Region 1598 (S12, L=113, class/area Dhi/270 on 21 October) as it crossed the east limb. The M9 flare was associated with a Type II radio sweep (estimated shock speed 516 km/s) and a non-Earth-directed coronal mass ejection (CME). Activity decreased to moderate levels on 21 October due to an M1/Sf flare at 21/2003 UTC from Region 1598, which was also associated with a non-Earth-directed CME.

No proton events were observed at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit was at high levels during most of the period.

Geomagnetic field activity was at unsettled levels early on 15
October, then decreased to quiet levels for the rest of the period.

Forecast of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
22 October - 17 November 2012

Solar activity is expected to be at low to moderate levels during 22
October - 02 November with M-class flare activity likely from Region 1598. Activity is expected to decrease to low levels during 03 - 17 November. However, there will be a chance for M-class flare activity beginning 15 November as (old) Region 1598 returns to the visible disk.

No proton events are expected at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit is expected to be at mostly high levels during 22 - 24 October. A decrease to normal to moderate flux levels is expected during 25 October - 04 November. An increase to mostly high flux levels is expected during 05 - 17 November.

Geomagnetic field activity is expected to be at quiet to unsettled levels during 22 - 23 October with a slight chance for active levels due to a coronal hole high-speed stream (CH HSS). Quiet levels are expected during 24 October - 07 November. An increase to unsettled levels is expected on 08 November due to a solar sector boundary passage followed by a co-rotating interaction region in advance of a CH HSS. A further increase to active to minor storm levels is expected on 09 November due to the onset of a CH HSS. Activity is expected to decrease to quiet to active levels on 10 November as CH HSS effects subside. A further decrease to quiet levels is expected during 11 - 17 November.

4518. Alex Jones' Job is to Bitch and Moan About Jewish Crimes, and Then say Someone Else Did Them

I've heard jones do this again and again and again. Jones is a freemason zionist satanist shill, and the blood of the victims of 9-11 is on this guy's hands, because he is part of the operation to coverup who the real perpetrators of 9-11 actually were.

Jones will go on and rant and rave like a lunatic, about crimes committed by the jewish crime network, such as trying to get his listeners all riled up and

BUT NEVER ONCE WILL HE MENTION THAT ALL THE PEOPLE INVOLVED IN THE 9-11 ATTACKS AND THE SUBSEQUENT POLICE STATE APPARATUS ARE JEWS>

He will never mention that Janet Winer Napolitano is an inbred jewish mutant freak homosexual sociopath criminal.

He will never mention that TSA head Jon Pistole is an inbred jewish mutant freak homosexual sociopath criminal.

He will never mention that Michael Chertoff, one of the 9-11 mass murderers, and the guy who made MILLIONS off selling police state equipment to airports, etc, is in bed with these other jews to conspire to bring about a police state here in North America.

Sometimes, when Jones feels the heat and he thinks his role as a zionist shill is being exposed, he will say something about Israel or jews. But he will ALWAYS then add in the CIA or "germanic death cults" or other bullshit, to try to dilute the jewish role, and make it seem like the jews who did 9-11 were just acting under orders from a mysterious "luciferian death cult" or whatever other horseshit.

Also, note that EVERY SINGLE ONE OF JONES' SPONSORS IS A JEW. That's right, EVERY SINGLE AD HAWKING RIDICULOUS SNAKE-OIL BULLSHIT AND WEIGHT-LOSS CRAP MADE IN CHINA is put on his website and radio show by jews. If you doubt that, just google "alex jones, jewish sponsors". Why would these jews all love Alex Jones so much that they want to sponsor his show?

Jones is in bed with the jews, which is why he is constantly featured on jew tv and and radio outlets like WWCR, ABC, CBS, RT, etc.

Jones, like all zionist jew disinfo agents, will liberally sprinkle in some good information. Most of what he says is true, because he is getting that info from the jewish crime network itself. But it's the hook Jones and his jewish owners try to stick in your mouth that you have to watch out for: He tries to make it seem like jews and israel are just side players, when in fact they are the prime instigators behind 9-11 and the police state we now live in.

9-11 was not an inside job. 9-11 was AN ISRAELI JOB.

CBC uses different transmitters than RCI? RCI is being dismantled by These people claim they do use the RCI transmitters. I have no idea for how long. The programming is pretty much their normal fare transported

Everybody knows about israel and 911- do you seriously expect some guy on the air blaming them for it?? What do you think would happen to him or his station? Are you "all there"? Do you (in reality) expect a professional person, with a national (international actually) radio show go around blaming a powerful cabal with stuff like that and get away with it? You cant just blame people for mass murder unless you can provide some kind of proof that will hold up in a non-compromised judicial system. AJ not saying so "out loud" doesn't make him a "shill". And for your information, EVERY one on national radio AND television belongs to or is paid by a certain group shall we say would not like that sort of rumor about israel going around. In fact, you sorta have to belong to that group to gain celeb status. This includes those so called "Christian broadcasting" shows- they never really give you the true gospel always a corrupted or "prosperity" gospel or some bizarre cultish beliefs a la john hagee, who not only is a freemason but thinks jews don't have to be saved by Christ to get to heaven. See, you HAVE to belong to this cabal or at least pledge your allegiance.

The fact that Jones gets THAT far concerning zionists is pretty brave- not "shill" like. What he says is about as far as one can get, on the air.

If you don't like it, get your own air time and make wild claims on your own. See how far you'll get.

Last I heard (or read), what with the retirement of the Sackville transmitters, the plan was supposedly to put the CBC Northern Service on low power FM translators in selected locations.

I guess we'll have to wait and see what actually plays out.

hi,

How The Universe Came Into Existence

the origin of the universe is described in the qur'an in the following verse and in many others:

he is the originator ofcreated the heavens and the earth from nothing… (surat al-an'am: 101)

in the first section of the book, we described in detail how the universe came into existence from nothing 15 billion years ago. in other words, the universe suddenly came into existence from nothing.

only the science of the twentieth century enabled us to attain scientific evidence of this great event. therefore, it was impossible to know this scientifically 1,400 years ago. but, as is also mentioned in the previous verse, allah told us this fact when the qur'an was first revealed. this is a miracle of the qur'an and one of the pieces of evidence that it is the speech of allah.

Mystery is nothing but something not understood or beyond understanding /whatever resists or defies explanation / profound, inexplicable, or secretive quality / a religious truth that one can know only by revelation and cannot fully understand
Some of our most popular lists are ones which revolve around mystery and intrigue. Fortunately for us all, there is no end to the number of weird and wonderful mysteries in the world, so we are now able to present our fourth list of unsolved mysteries.
The Piri Reis Map is a famous pre-modern world map created by 16th century Ottoman-Turkish admiral and cartographer Piri Reis. Angel Hair is a rare phenomenon that has so far defied explanation. It is made up of silken threads that rain down on to the earth, but reach out to touch it and it will almost certainly vanish before your eyes
The Ark is considered the greatest of all hidden treasures and its discovery would provide indisputable truth that the Old Testament is hard fact. Fossils, as we learned in grade school, appear in rocks that were formed many thousands of years ago. Yet there are a number of fossils that just don’t make geological or historical sense.
The Oera Linda Book is a 19th century manuscript written in Old Frisian. It purports to cover historical, mythological, and religious themes of remote antiquity, compiled between 2194 BC and AD 803. The Ica stones are a collection of andesite stones that bear a variety of diagrams, including depictions of dinosaurs and what is alleged to be advanced technology
The Dropa stones, otherwise known as the Dzopa stones. The Bermuda Triangle, also known as the Devil’s Triangle, lies between Miami in Florida, San Juan in Puerto Rico and the Bahamas. Within that area there have been many unexplained disappearances of boats and planes and compasses do not operate Similarly there are so many Supernatural mysteries, unexplained phenomena and unsolved puzzles. To know more details about this please visit: http://www.mysteriesunlimited.com

Well, since this thread is over 30 days old, guess I shouldn't post, eh?

But, for the record 'google groups' has nothing to do with google. Usenet existed long before google saw the light of day, possibly when google's founders were still in diapers.

Google's presence in Usenet began with DejaNews - essentially a Usenet archive - which Google acquired at some point.

Google has no control over Usenet. If they refuse to allow posts to old threads, then they are different from the dozens, even hundreds, of other News clients that are out there.

Reasonable advice. Quote the original, if you like, but a new thread will get noticed by the current members of the group even though the original contributors are likely long gone.

Me thinks you are the one that doesn't understand.
The only thing the Federal central bank is debasing is the reserve accounts of banks. That has no effect on the economy other than psychological.
And apparently the psychological effect it has on morons is enormous.

The US dollar has been debased by 60 years of excessive private credit expansion.

You can blame that on the central bank if you want to, but for the last 4 years the central bank has been trying to restart that money creation engine with very little success. That should indicate to anyone who is paying attention that the powers of the central bank are limited.

Government expansion and Liberal economics have destroyed the value of the dollar.

I did several broadcasts telling the public about the Wichita Massacre.

The so-called "mainstream" media have a non-negotiable agenda: the replacement and ultimate genocide of Whites. Therefore anything that might stop or slow that agenda -- such as making us aware of the endless cases of non-White violence against Whites -- will be downplayed as much as possible.

Liberty Net: October 20, 2012

http://3950.net/2012/10/liberty-net-october-20-2012/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

THE KENNELLY-HEAVISIDE LAYER was back in fine shape this week and the Liberty Net had a marathon six-hour session as a result, with subjects ranging from the upcoming phony elections to the false flag attack on the Federal Reserve building.

Here are a just few samples of what was debated on the net this session:

ï¿½ Should the Liberty Net schedule an election-night special edition, to monitor for media skulduggery, lies, and possible unreported local fraud, violence, or intimidation? (18 minutes)

ï¿½ Europe is starting to show signs of life, with the very welcome rise of the Golden Dawn in Greece, Jobbik in Hungary, and now the youth group Generation Identitaire in France. (33 minutes)

ï¿½ Thereï¿½s something sickening about the fact that the now-incarcerated O.J. Simpson recently attempted to sell a knife ï¿½ under the suggestion that it was the knife used to murder Nicole Simpson ï¿½ for five million dollars. (36 minutes)

ï¿½ Whenever you hear so-called ï¿½comprehensive immigration reformï¿½ being pushed, you are listening to someone who wants to legalize the massive Mestizo invasion of the United States ï¿½ which amounts to legalizing the genocide of White Americans. Such people want ï¿½cheap laborï¿½ so they can thereby make billions out of our impoverishment and ultimate death. (39 minutes)

ï¿½ Something smells of corrupt FBI in the ï¿½Federal Reserve Bomberï¿½ case ï¿½ a credulous and destitute Bangladeshi, persuasive FBI agents (actors, really) armed with tons of cash, an FBI-supplied truck, an FBI-supplied (fake) bomb, and 99.9 per cent. of the ï¿½crimeï¿½ of the ï¿½terroristï¿½ planned in detail and specifically suggested by FBI employees. Time to replace the regime in Washington! (46 minutes)

ï¿½ Watch for more false flag attacks on the ï¿½Americanï¿½ banking system ï¿½ possibly attacks that make average families unable to access their funds ï¿½ as a way of getting war-weary Americans to become angry at the alleged perpetrators, who will of course be Iranians. (58 minutes)

ï¿½ Not only is the Washington regime evil, but it and its overlords in New York and Tel Aviv are also incompetent ï¿½ otherwise the flag of al-Qaeda would not be flying over government buildings in Libya right now. (1 hour 11 minutes)

ï¿½ Washingtonï¿½s foreign policy is not about security for the American people anymore ï¿½ itï¿½s all about maintaining the power and the funny-money scams of the banking elite. (1 hour 16 minutes)

ï¿½ Beware ordering a Verizon smart phone ï¿½ the company sells all the information they gather about you (including your exact location) to anyone who will pay for it. You can supposedly ï¿½opt outï¿½ if you do so within 30 days, but they donï¿½t even bother to tell you that. (1 hour 56 minutes)

Thanks to Marty, N2IRJ, youï¿½re able to listen to the Liberty Net right now on your computer here at http://3950.net/ ï¿½ or download the file and listen on your mp3 player. Check in over the air, and also check out the live feed and chat during net times, and the additional feed from N2SAG, that let you make an end run around jammers and a fickle ionosphere.

Join in or listen to the most exciting net on the amateur bands every Saturday night starting at 10PM Eastern Time.

Our thanks go to W1WCR for his hard work and courage in keeping this very important part of the amateur radio service alive for almost 40 years!

Kevin's summary earlier today omitted some details from last weeks Great Liberty Nit-Wit-Net.

As you have noticed, Kevin's recap of the discussions usually amounts little more than "blah blah blah".

We propose that The Great Liberty Nit-Wit-Net could better be summarized as follows:

Blah blah blah
Clinton's a crook
Bush is a crook
Gore is a crook
Biden's a crook
They're all crooks
Blah blah blah.

However - at 10pm Eastern time tonight, you can tune in to The Great Liberty Nit-Wit-Net and hear the discussions first hand. Somewhere between 3950 and 3975 LSB.

Check it out.

Bring popcorn and plenty of your favorite beverage.

morons think low interest rates equals printing money. under bush the dollar almost was $1.50 to the euro. no bitching by "THE CONSERVATIVES" back then. today the dollar is stronger. yet high interest rates are propping up the euro, and helping to destroy their economy.
everyone is trying to do the same thing except the eurozone, devalue their way to prosperity. globalization is on a very slick banana peel of its own making.

Huh?

You do know that your "tranny" above is short for "transvestite" -- and in its narrowest definition, it refers to cross dressing. (Sorry, but Pelosi usually wears a dress -- or occasionally slacks -- along with millions of other women who also wear slacks, maybe even your own mother). In the broadest definition, transvestite refers to someone, usually a male, that has had a "sex-change" operation. However, people that undergo this operation are absolutely NOT capable of bearing children. If as you say Pelosi is indeed a "tranny", this would come as a great surprise to her husband and her FIVE natural born children.

Sorry, but your SEVERE ignorance is showing.

Sorry, but I couldn't find anything on Snopes regarding Pelosi.

A transvestite-- and you can check with Too Many Tools to see if I'm wrong-- is someone who wears the clothing of the opposite sex. It has nothing to do with a sex change.

I thought liberals were supposed to be up on all this shit.

I may have been typing too fast, but it appears that you may be splitting hairs.

The original poster only said "tranny" -- which could refer to either a transvestite [cross dressing] or transsexual [gender changing surgery].
For the reasons I mentioned above, Pelosi does not appear to fall in either category. Therefore, my conclusion regarding the OP's ignorance remains unchanged.

Barack Obama for Re-election

Published: October 27, 2012

The economy is slowly recovering from the 2008 meltdown, and the country could suffer another recession if the wrong policies take hold. The United States is embroiled in unstable regions that could easily explode into full-blown disaster. An ideological assault from the right has started to undermine the vital health reform law passed in 2010. Those forces are eroding women's access to health care, and their right to control their lives. Nearly 50 years after passage of the Civil Rights Act, all Americans' rights are cheapened by the right wing's determination to deny marriage benefits to a selected group of us. Astonishingly, even the very right to vote is being challenged.

New York Times Endorsements Through the Ages

That is the context for the Nov. 6 election, and as stark as it is, the choice is just as clear.

President Obama has shown a firm commitment to using government to help foster growth. He has formed sensible budget policies that are not dedicated to protecting the powerful, and has worked to save the social safety net to protect the powerless. Mr. Obama has impressive achievements despite the implacable wall of refusal erected by Congressional Republicans so intent on stopping him that they risked pushing the nation into depression, held its credit rating hostage, and hobbled economic recovery.

Mitt Romney, the former governor of Massachusetts, has gotten this far with a guile that allows him to say whatever he thinks an audience wants to hear. But he has tied himself to the ultraconservative forces that control the Republican Party and embraced their policies, including reckless budget cuts and 30-year-old, discredited trickle-down ideas. Voters may still be confused about Mr. Romney's true identity, but they know the Republican Party, and a Romney administration would reflect its agenda. Mr. Romney's choice of Representative Paul Ryan as his running mate says volumes about that.

We have criticized individual policy choices that Mr. Obama has made over the last four years, and have been impatient with his unwillingness to throw himself into the political fight. But he has shaken off the hesitancy that cost him the first debate, and he approaches the election clearly ready for the partisan battles that would follow his victory.

We are confident he would challenge the Republicans in the "fiscal cliff" battle even if it meant calling their bluff, letting the Bush tax cuts expire and forcing them to confront the budget sequester they created. Electing Mr. Romney would eliminate any hope of deficit reduction that included increased revenues.

In the poisonous atmosphere of this campaign, it may be easy to overlook Mr. Obama's many important achievements, including carrying out the economic stimulus, saving the auto industry, improving fuel efficiency standards, and making two very fine Supreme Court appointments.

Health Care

Mr. Obama has achieved the most sweeping health care reforms since the passage of Medicare and Medicaid in 1965. The reform law takes a big step toward universal health coverage, a final piece in the social contract.

It was astonishing that Mr. Obama and the Democrats in Congress were able to get a bill past the Republican opposition. But the Republicans' propagandistic distortions of the new law helped them wrest back control of the House, and they are determined now to repeal the law.

That would eliminate the many benefits the reform has already brought: allowing children under 26 to stay on their parents' policies; lower drug costs for people on Medicare who are heavy users of prescription drugs; free immunizations, mammograms and contraceptives; a ban on lifetime limits on insurance payments. Insurance companies cannot deny coverage to children with pre-existing conditions. Starting in 2014, insurers must accept all applicants. Once fully in effect, the new law would start to control health care costs.

Mr. Romney has no plan for covering the uninsured beyond his callous assumption that they will use emergency rooms. He wants to use voucher programs to shift more Medicare costs to beneficiaries and block grants to shift more Medicaid costs to the states.

The Economy

Mr. Obama prevented another Great Depression.
The economy was cratering when he took office in January 2009. By that June it was growing, and it has been ever since (although at a rate that disappoints everyone), thanks in large part to interventions Mr. Obama championed, like the $840 billion stimulus bill. Republicans say it failed, but it created and preserved 2.5 million jobs and prevented unemployment from reaching 12 percent. Poverty would have been much worse without the billions spent on Medicaid, food stamps and jobless benefits.

Last year, Mr. Obama introduced a jobs plan that included spending on school renovations, repair projects for roads and bridges, aid to states, and more. It was stymied by Republicans.
Contrary to Mr. Romney's claims, Mr. Obama has done good things for small businesses ☐ like pushing through more tax write-offs for new equipment and temporary tax cuts for hiring the unemployed.

The Dodd-Frank financial regulation was an important milestone. It is still a work in progress, but it established the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau, initiated reform of the derivatives market, and imposed higher capital requirements for banks. Mr. Romney wants to repeal it.

If re-elected, Mr. Obama would be in position to shape the "grand bargain" that could finally combine stimulus like the jobs bill with long-term deficit reduction that includes letting the high-end Bush-era tax cuts expire. Stimulus should come first, and deficit reduction as the economy strengthens. Mr. Obama has not been as aggressive as we would have liked in addressing the housing crisis, but he has increased efforts in refinancing and loan modifications.

Mr. Romney's economic plan, as much as we know about it, is regressive, relying on big tax cuts and deregulation. That kind of plan was not the answer after the financial crisis, and it will not create broad prosperity.

Foreign Affairs

Mr. Obama and his administration have been resolute in attacking Al Qaeda's leadership, including the killing of Osama bin Laden. He has ended the war in Iraq. Mr. Romney, however, has said he would have insisted on leaving thousands of American soldiers there. He has surrounded himself with Bush administration neocons who helped to engineer the Iraq war, and adopted their militaristic talk in a way that makes a Romney administration's foreign policies a frightening prospect.

Mr. Obama negotiated a much tougher regime of multilateral economic sanctions on Iran. Mr. Romney likes to say the president was ineffective on Iran, but at the final debate he agreed with Mr. Obama's policies. Mr. Obama deserves credit for his handling of the Arab Spring. The killing goes on in Syria, but the administration is working to identify and support moderate insurgent forces there. At the last debate, Mr. Romney talked about funneling arms through Saudi Arabia and Qatar, which are funneling arms to jihadist groups.

Mr. Obama gathered international backing for airstrikes during the Libyan uprising, and kept American military forces in a background role. It was smart policy.

In the broadest terms, he introduced a measure of military restraint after the Bush years and helped repair America's badly damaged reputation in many countries from the low levels to which it had sunk by 2008.

The Supreme Court

The future of the nation's highest court hangs in the balance in this election ☐ and along with it, reproductive freedom for American women and voting rights for all, to name just two issues. Whoever is president after the election will make at least one appointment to the court, and many more to federal appeals courts and district courts.

Mr. Obama, who appointed the impressive Justices Elena Kagan and Sonia Sotomayor, understands how severely damaging conservative activism has been in areas like campaign spending. He would appoint justices and judges who understand that landmarks of equality like the Voting Rights Act must be defended against the steady attack from the right.

Mr. Romney's campaign Web site says he will "nominate judges in the mold of Chief Justice Roberts and Justices Scalia, Thomas and Alito," among the most conservative justices in the past 75 years. There is no doubt that he would appoint justices who would seek to overturn Roe v. Wade.

Civil Rights

The extraordinary fact of Mr. Obama's 2008 election did not usher in a new post-racial era. In fact, the steady undercurrent of racism in national politics is truly disturbing. Mr. Obama, however, has reversed Bush administration policies that chipped away at minorities' voting rights and has fought laws, like the ones in Arizona, that seek to turn undocumented immigrants into a class of criminals.

The military's odious "don't ask, don't tell" rule was finally legislated out of existence, under the Obama administration's leadership. There are still big hurdles to equality to be brought down, including the Defense of Marriage Act, the outrageous federal law that undermines the rights of gay men and lesbians, even in states that recognize those rights.

Though it took Mr. Obama some time to do it, he overcame his hesitation about same-sex marriage and declared his support. That support has helped spur marriage-equality movements around the country. His Justice Department has also stopped defending the Defense of Marriage Act against constitutional challenges.

Mr. Romney opposes same-sex marriage and supports the federal act, which not only denies federal benefits and recognition to same-sex couples but allows states to ignore marriages made in other states. His campaign declared that Mr. Romney would not object if states also banned adoption by same-sex couples and restricted their rights to hospital visitation and other privileges.

Mr. Romney has been careful to avoid the efforts of some Republicans to criminalize abortion even in the case of women who had been raped, including by family members. He says he is not opposed to contraception, but he has promised to deny federal money to Planned Parenthood, on which millions of women depend for family planning.

For these and many other reasons, we enthusiastically endorse President Barack Obama for a second term, and express the hope that his victory will be accompanied by a new Congress willing to work for policies that Americans need.

A version of this editorial appeared in print on October 28, 2012, on page SR12 of the New York edition with the headline: Barack Obama for Re-Election.

Highlights of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
22 - 28 October 2012

Solar activity ranged from low to high levels. Activity was high during 22 - 23 October due to two major flares from Region 1598 (S11, L=113, class/area Dki/420 on 23 October). The first was an impulsive M5/1f at 22/1851 UTC and the second was an impulsive X1 at 23/0317 UTC associated with a Type II radio sweep and a 620 sfu Tenflare. Region 1598 displayed a delta magnetic configuration within its trailer spots during 23 - 27 October. It showed gradual trailer spot decay beginning 24 October. Activity dropped to low levels during 24 - 28 with low-level C-class flares, most of which were from Regions 1598 and 1594 (S26, L=200, class/area Dao/090 on 16 October). Two Earth-directed coronal mass ejections (CMEs) occurred on 27 October. The CMEs were closely spaced in time and appeared to be associated with a B9/Sf flare at 27/1235 UTC from Region 1598.

No proton events were observed at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit was at high levels during most of the period with moderate levels observed on 27 October.

Geomagnetic field activity was at quiet levels throughout the period.

Forecast of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
29 October - 24 November 2012

Solar activity is expected to be low during the period with a slight chance for M-class flares during 29 October - 02 November and 15 - 24 November.

No proton events are expected at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit is expected to be at normal to moderate levels during 29 October - 04

November. High flux levels are expected during 05 - 24 November.

Geomagnetic field activity is expected to be at quiet levels during 29 - 30 October. An increase to quiet to unsettled levels is expected late on 31 October, with a chance for active levels, due to the arrival of the CMEs observed on 27 October. A further increase to active levels is expected on 01 November, with a chance for minor storm periods, as CME effects continue. Field activity is expected to decrease to unsetttled to active levels on 02 November as CME effects gradually subside and a coronal hole high-speed stream (CH HSS) begins to disturb the field. Activity is expected to decrease to quiet to unsettled levels on 03 November as CH HSS effects subside. Quiet conditions are expected during 04 - 07 November. An increase to unsettled levels is predicted for 08 November, due to a solar sector boundary crossing followed by a co-rotating interaction region in advance of a CH HSS. A further increase to active levels is expected on 09 November, with a chance for minor storm periods, due to a CH HSS. Activity is expected to decrease to quiet to active levels on 10 November as CH HSS effects subside. Quiet levels are expected during 11 - 24 November.

Obama has earned another term

Nowhere has Mitt Romney's pursuit of the presidency been more warmly welcomed or closely followed than here in Utah. The Republican nominee's political and religious pedigrees, his adeptly bipartisan governorship of a Democratic state, and his head for business and the bottom line all inspire admiration and hope in our largely Mormon, Republican, business-friendly state.

But it was Romney's singular role in rescuing Utah's organization of the 2002 Olympics from a cesspool of scandal, and his oversight of the most successful Winter Games on record, that make him the Beehive State's favorite adopted son. After all, Romney managed to save the state from ignominy, turning the extravaganza into a showcase for the matchless landscapes, volunteerism and efficiency that told the world what is best and most beautiful about Utah and its people.

In short, this is the Mitt Romney we knew, or thought we knew, as one of us.

Sadly, it is not the only Romney, as his campaign for the White House has made abundantly clear, first in his servile courtship of the tea party in order to win the nomination, and now as the party's shape-shifting nominee. From his embrace of the party's radical right wing, to subsequent portrayals of himself as a moderate champion of the middle class, Romney has raised the most frequently asked question of the campaign: "Who is this guy, really, and what in the world does he truly believe?"

The evidence suggests no clear answer, or at least one that would survive Romney's next speech or sound bite. Politicians routinely tailor their words to suit an audience. Romney, though, is shameless, lavishing vastly diverse audiences with words, any words, they would trade their votes to hear.

More troubling, Romney has repeatedly refused to share specifics of his radical plan to simultaneously reduce the debt, get rid of Obamacare (or, as he now says, only part of it), make a voucher program of Medicare, slash taxes and spending, and thereby create millions of new jobs. To claim, as Romney does, that he would offset his tax and spending cuts (except for billions more for the military) by doing away with tax deductions and exemptions is utterly meaningless without identifying which and how many would get the ax. Absent those specifics, his promise of a balanced budget simply does not pencil out.

If this portrait of a Romney willing to say anything to get elected seems harsh, we need only revisit his branding of 47 percent of Americans as freeloaders who pay no taxes, yet feel victimized and entitled to government assistance. His job, he told a group of wealthy donors, "is not to worry about those people. I'll never convince them they should take personal responsibility and care for their lives."

Where, we ask, is the pragmatic, inclusive Romney, the Massachusetts governor who left the state with a model health care plan in place, the Romney who led Utah to Olympic glory? That Romney skedaddled and is nowhere to be found.

And what of the president Romney would replace? For four years, President Barack Obama has attempted, with varying degrees of success, to pull the nation out of its worst financial meltdown since the Great Depression, a deepening crisis he inherited the day he took office.

In the first months of his presidency, Obama acted decisively to stimulate the economy. His leadership was essential to passage of the badly needed American Recovery and Reinvestment Act. Though Republicans criticize the stimulus for failing to create jobs, it clearly helped stop the hemorrhaging of public sector jobs. The Utah Legislature used hundreds of millions in stimulus funds to plug holes in the state's budget.

The president also acted wisely to bail out the auto industry, which has since come roaring back. Romney, in so many words, said the carmakers should sink if they can't swim.

Obama's most noteworthy achievement, passage of his signature Affordable Care Act, also proved, in its timing, his greatest blunder. The set of comprehensive health insurance reforms aimed at extending health care coverage to all Americans was signed 14 months into his term after a ferocious fight in Congress that sapped the new president's political capital and destroyed any chance for bipartisan cooperation on the shredded economy.

Obama's foreign policy record is perhaps his strongest suit, especially compared to Romney's bellicose posture toward Russia and China and his inflammatory rhetoric regarding Iran's nuclear weapons program. Obama's measured reliance on tough economic embargoes to bring Iran to heel, and his equally measured disengagement from the war in Afghanistan, are examples of a nuanced approach to international affairs. The glaring exception, still unfolding, was the administration's failure to protect the lives of the U.S. ambassador to Libya and three other Americans, and to quickly come clean about it.

In considering which candidate to endorse, The Salt Lake Tribune editorial board had hoped that Romney would exhibit the same talents for organization, pragmatic problem solving and inspired leadership that he displayed here more than a decade ago. Instead, we have watched him morph into a friend of the far right, then tack toward the center with breathtaking aplomb. Through a pair of presidential debates, Romney's domestic agenda remains bereft of detail and worthy of mistrust.

Therefore, our endorsement must go to the incumbent, a competent leader who, against tough odds, has guided the country through catastrophe and set a course that, while rocky, is pointing toward a brighter day. The president has earned a second term. Romney, in whatever guise, does not deserve a first.

Zappa was far too kind.

Politics in a mass "democracy" is a form of tyranny under which the stupid and the mediocre believe they are free, and the intelligent divide themselves into two camps: those who delight in the situation and exploit it to advance themselves, and those who find it intolerable and who would destroy the system in an instant if they could do so with impunity.

With my best,

Kevin.

McCAIN-GRAHAM-AYOTTE-JOHNSON LETTER TO PRESIDENT OBAMA:

October 31, 2012

President Barack Obama
The White House
1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20500

Dear Mr. President:

The American people deserve to know all the facts surrounding the terrorist attack in Benghazi on September 11, 2012, that resulted in the murder of four Americans—including Ambassador Chris Stevens. Unfortunately, you and your senior administration officials have not been forthcoming in providing answers to the many questions that have emerged.

On October 9, 2012, we sent a letter to the senior intelligence officials in your administration in an effort to obtain answers to these questions. More than three weeks have passed, and we still have not received a response. To make matters worse, since that original letter, we sent several subsequent letters to you or to your senior administration officials asking a number of questions, and we have failed to receive a single letter in response.

The American people and their representatives in Congress need to understand what you knew about the Benghazi terrorist attack and when you knew it. We also have a right to know what steps you and your administration took—or failed to take—before, during, and after the terrorist attack to protect American lives.

In order to facilitate an immediate response to our important questions on behalf of the American people, below are the questions from the letters we have sent over the last three weeks.

In our October 9, 2012, letter that we wrote with Senator Saxby Chambliss, we asked the following questions of Director of National Intelligence, James R. Clapper, Jr.; Director of the Central Intelligence Agency, David H. Petraeus; and Assistant to the President for Homeland Security and Counterterrorism and Deputy National Security Advisor, John Brennan:

• Within 48 hours of the attack, was there credible information and reporting to suggest that the assault on our Consulate and other U.S. facilities in Benghazi should be characterized as a terrorist attack?

• At what time did intelligence community agencies or elements first assess that the events in Benghazi were a terrorist attack?

• What information did the intelligence community provide to senior policymakers that led some of them to draw the conclusion as late as five days after the attack in Benghazi that it was the result of a spontaneous demonstration, not a terrorist act?

• Was there no credible evidence at that late date that was compelling enough for the intelligence community and the senior policymakers to draw a conclusion with at least moderate confidence that the attack in Benghazi was a terrorist act?

On October 15, 2012, Senator Graham sent letters to Mr. Brennan, Director Clapper, Director Petraeus, as well as National Security Advisor Thomas Donilon. The letters highlighted the fact that on June 6, 2012, assailants placed an improvised explosive device (IED) on the north gate of the U.S. Consulate in Benghazi. The IED detonated and ripped a hole in the security perimeter that was described by one individual as "big enough for forty men to go through." This attack was preceded by an earlier IED attack against the Consulate in April 2012. Based on these facts, the letter included the following questions:

• Were you aware of these attacks?

• Did you inform the President of these attacks?

• If so, what action was taken to protect our Consulate?

• If you did not inform the President, why not?

On October 15, 2012, Senator Graham sent you a similar letter asking the following questions:

• Were you informed of these attacks on our Libyan Consulate?

• If not, why not?

• Did you consider these serious events?

• If you were informed, what action was taken to protect the Consulate?

On October 19, 2012, we sent a follow-up letter to the same three senior intelligence officials in your administration noting that ten days had elapsed since we sent the October 9 letter.

On October 24, 2012, we sent a letter to you asking the following questions:

• Why did your administration insist that a spontaneous demonstration was responsible for the attack on our Consulate, but as the State Department later divulged, no demonstration even occurred in Benghazi?

• Why were requests for greater security assistance by officers on the ground not fulfilled, especially in light of the fact that there had already been two attacks on our Consulate in Benghazi this year and an attempt to assassinate the British Ambassador-events about which you should have known?

• In light of the deteriorating security situation in Benghazi and the escalating series of attacks in the preceding months, why were there not rapid reaction forces or other military assets available in the region to deploy to Libya in the event of an emergency on September 11, 2012-a day that our intelligence agencies consistently cite far in advance as a moment of heightened security threat for the United States and our citizens and interests abroad?

On October 26, 2012, we sent a letter to Secretary of Defense, Leon Panetta; Director of the Central Intelligence Agency, David H. Petraeus; and Attorney General, Eric H. Holder requesting the immediate declassification of the surveillance video in and around the U.S. Consulate in Benghazi for the two days-September 11 and 12, 2012-that it and related U.S. facilities were under attack.

On October 27, 2012, Senators McCain and Portman sent a letter to Secretary Panetta asking the following questions:

• What military forces were available to provide support to U.S. personnel in Libya?

• What military forces were requested to provide support to U.S. personnel in Libya, by whom, and what forces were provided?

• What communication and coordination did you have with the President and other members of the National Security Council regarding possible Defense Department support in Libya?

Your failure to answer these important questions will only add to the growing perception among many of our constituents that your administration has undertaken a concerted effort to misrepresent the facts and stonewall Congress and the American people. We look forward to a prompt and thorough response to these questions. The American people deserve a full accounting of what happened in Benghazi where four brave Americans were murdered.

Thank you.

Sincerely,

John McCain

Band allocations and time zone conversions for the USA. Includes broadcast bands used outside the USA. For multi-use bands, primary usage is shown.
Some stations operate outside official bands. Information is from Oct 2008
FCC rules and Sep 2009 NTIA manual, see Chapter 4 of:

Frequencies are in kHz. Usual spacing in shortwave broadcast bands is 5 kHz. Frequencies above 10000 kHz tend to propagate better during the day;
frequencies below 10000 kHz tend to propagate better at night.

Phone line as SW antenna

Changes preceded by "|".

WARNINGS AND DISCLAIMERS

Connecting unapproved devices to phone lines may be illegal in your area. Telephone lines present a potential shock hazard. Do not use this antenna for transmitting. Use at your own risk.

INTRODUCTION

This article describes how to use a phone line as a shortwave receiving antenna. Performance will vary depending on the kind of phone line you have. Overhead lines usually make okay antennas, while underground lines
| usually don't. Phone lines carrying DSL service may be unsuitable because
| DSL operates over a wide spectrum. A phone line antenna will generally pick up more power line noise than a dedicated antenna, so don't expect to | use it for DX work. Nevertheless, I found that it outperformed the
| telescopic whip antennas built into many portables.

A reader sent in this suggestion: If you're concerned about connecting the phone line directly to the receiver, try wrapping the phone cord several times around the receiver's telescopic whip antenna instead. Performance may not be as good as a direct connection, but it will probably be better than the whip antenna by itself.

Someone else wrote asking about lightning protection. I haven't thought much about it because thunderstorms are rare in my area. Most phone lines have lightning arrestors on them where they enter the house, but the lightning arrestors may pass enough energy during a lightning strike damage a receiver. My suggestion is to disconnect the antenna when not in use if you experience frequent thunderstorms.

HOW TO DO IT

The simplest connection is a single capacitor between the phone line and receiver. The capacitor eliminates all phone line voltages, including | ringing, so that they will not harm the receiver. The capacitor should
| be rated 250 volts or higher.

```
Phone line RF connector
red .01 uF center cond. / \
or o--------||-----------------------------|-o | To receiver
green \ /
50 ohm coax |
ground |
or o-----------------------------------------+ N.C. shield

N.C. = no connect. I originally connected the phone line ground (yellow wire) to this terminal, but reception was better without it (if you do this, play it safe and put a .01 uF capacitor in series). If another ground is available, you can connect it to this terminal.

If you are picking up local AM or FM radio stations on the shortwave bands, it is likely that your receiver is overloaded. Inexpensive and portable receivers usually lack the filtering needed to eliminate this interference, but you can make your own filters. Filters can also be | purchased from shortwave dealers (see below for recommendations).

A high-pass filter can be used to remove signals below the shortwave bands. It rejects interference from local AM stations and presents a high impedance to the phone line at audio frequencies so that the phone line remains balanced.

A low-pass filter can be used to remove signals above the shortwave bands. It rejects interference from FM and TV stations, as well as VHF 2-way radio transmitters. If you use both filters, connect the output of the first filter to the input of the second (don't forget to connect their ground terminals together). It doesn't matter which filter is connected first.

These filters also work well with random wire antennas. Just connect the antenna in place of the phone line.

The filter(s) should be connected to the phone line in this manner:

```
Phone line RF connector
red -------- center cond. / \
or o----| |-------------------------|-o | To receiver
green | | \ /
| FILTER | 50 ohm coax |
ground | | |
or o----| |----------------------------+
N.C. -------- shield
```

| RECOMMENDED FILTERS
|
| If you don't want to make your own filters, the following have good

FILTER PLANS

The original credit for the high-pass and low-pass filters goes to Paul Blumstein and John Shalamskas, respectively. Edited versions of their articles are included here:

Date: 09 Jan 91 00:54:08 GMT
From: paulb@harley.TTI.COM (Paul Blumstein)
Subject: BC Band Hi-Pass Filter

The following ascii-schematic diagram is a high pass filter that will filter out Broadcast Band (MW) stations. I found it a great boon to my shortwave listening since local MW stations overload my ATS-803A front end & appear in SW, especially with a long antenna.

If you remember my antenna saga, I went from 50 feet to 150 feet & had overload problems causing me to cut back to 50 feet. (Even at 50 feet, I still have some MW interference). I took the advice of Gary Coffman and looked up filters in the ARRL Handbook. With the filter in place, I intend to try to increase my antenna length again.

Anywho, here is the filter, for interested parties.

```
--------||---+----||-----+----||-----------
} }
{ {
} }
-------------+-----------+-----------------
```

The outer capacitors are 1500 pf ceramic disks.
The inner capacitor is 820 pf ceramic disk.
The squiggly things are coils (two total). Each one is 2.7 uh.
(a close value will do).

Subject: Re: BC Band Hi-Pass Filter

I built the filter that Paul Blumstein posted recently and measured it on a gain-phase analyzer. Here are its characteristics:

100 kHz -120dB
500 kHz -68dB

1000 kHz -38dB
1600 kHz -15dB
2100 kHz -3dB

The source and load impedances were 50 ohms. Because the filter has five elements, the attenuation is 30dB per octave. The measurements confirmed this.

This filter seems to be a good compromise between interference attenuation and passband response. There is very little attenuation in the 120m band and above. It could use a little more attenuation at the upper end of MW, which could be done with more stages or a higher cutoff frequency. Alternatively, you could build two of these filters and put them in series. (Since two 1500pF capacitors in series are really 750pF, you could eliminate one cap.)

Just for fun, I put 470 ohms in series with the input to see how the filter performed with an antenna mismatch. The response was:

100 kHz -105dB
500 kHz -60dB
1000 kHz -35dB
1600 kHz -15dB
2300 kHz -3dB

These figures are normalized to the passband response of -15dB, which is due to the impedance mismatch between the source and load and would have been there without the filter. Hence, the filter works almost as well in spite of the mismatch, which is good news to those who use long-wire antennas.

Subject: Construction of filters for SW reception

Several people have asked for construction details of the filters I built for my DX-440.

The high-pass filter helped some, but in my location the VHF/UHF broadcasters are also causing problems. So, I dug out the ARRL handbook and chose a 7-element Chebyshev low-pass design that is -3 dB at 35 MHz, -20 dB at 43 MHz, and -50 dB at 64 MHz (all calculated; it works well in practice!)

chassis ground

I had to do a little more improvising at this point. I used .33 uH instead of .36, and .66 uH instead of .42, but it works fine.

The 5-lug terminal strips were perfect for these circuits, since there are 4 lugs plus a grounded lug. All "ground" connections go to the lug that is mounted to the chassis, and the other 4 lugs are used for each of the connections on the signal line. One terminal strip is used per filter. Since both filters were necessary to clean up the hash, I am going to put them both into one box when I get the time.

The proper way to connect them is in series, i.e.

There is no difference between ends. They are "bilateral" which means you can't possibly hook them up backwards. (In the above schematics, left and right ends are interchangeable.)

COIL WINDING

You can make the coils yourself using this formula:

L = 0.2 * B^2 * N^2 / (3B + 9A + 10C)

L is the inductance, in uH
A is the length of the coil, in inches
B is the mean diameter of the coil, in inches
C is the diameter of the wire, in inches
N is the number of turns

For small wire, you can assume C = 0.

At the time he and Glen Doherty were killed by a mortar round some seven hours after the assault on the consulate began, Tyrone Woods was shining a ground laser designator on the mortar position.

http://www.powerlineblog.com/archives/2012/10/benghazi-a-reader-assesses-the-evidence.php

The former Navy SEAL wouldn't have done that unless he were "painting" a target for an aircraft, because if the terrorists had cell phones with night vision capabilities, they could see the laser beam, and trace it back to his location.

http://www.hughhewitt.com/blog/g/e2f7d573-5017-4902-ba82-3eba30b1103c

Mr. Woods' repeated requests for military assistance were turned down, according to "sources who were on the ground in Benghazi," Fox News reported Friday (10/26).

http://www.foxnews.com/politics/2012/10/26/cia-operators-were-denied-request-for-help-duri ng-benghazi-attack-sources-say/

A reporter for a Denver television station asked President Barack Hussein Obama twice if it were true those requests had been denied.
"Both times, he repeated his standard call for a thorough investigation," without answering his question, Kyle Clark reported.

http://www.9news.com/news/article/296294/339/9NEWS-questions-Obama-on-Libya-attack?odyssey =tab%7Ctopnews%7Cbc%7Clarge

But the president implied he'd ordered help be provided.

"I gave the directive, to make sure we are securing our personnel and doing whatever we need to do," he told Mr. Clark.

If such a directive had been issued, there'd be a paper trail. The administration has stonewalled requests for documentation.

The day after Mr. Obama's evasions in Denver, an NSC spokesman said:
"neither the president nor anyone else in the White House denied any requests for assistance in Benghazi."

http://www.dailykos.com/story/2012/10/28/1151422/-BREAKING-NSC-Aide-Obama-Did-Not-Deny-Ben ghazi-Security-Requests

So who did?

"No one at any level in the CIA told anybody not to help those in need," said a CIA spokeswoman.

http://www.weeklystandard.com/blogs/white-house-tries-throw-military-under-bus_657998.html

Troops weren't sent because military commanders didn't have a clear picture of what was happening in Benghazi, Defense Secretary Leon Panetta said Thursday (10/25).

He, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and the commander of Africa Command, "felt very strongly that we could not put forces at risk in that situation," Mr. Panetta said.

http://www.nytimes.com/2012/10/26/world/africa/panetta-tells-of-monitoring-situation-in-benghazi.html

Hogwash. We deploy military forces all the time with much less information than we had about the situation in Benghazi. Mr. Woods was in constant radio contact. Video was being fed "in near real time" to situation rooms in Washington from the consulate's security cameras. For much of the fight, a surveillance drone was overhead.

Perhaps because vets know Mr. Panetta's "clear picture" excuse was preposterous, the story was changed. Troops weren't sent because the Marines who comprise the Quick Reaction Force were in the midst of a rotation, and not immediately available.

http://www.washingtontimes.com/news/2012/oct/28/lack-of-strike-force-impeded-benghazi-response/

What about the aircraft Mr. Woods evidently believed was on station? F/A-18 fighter bombers could have arrived in less than an hour, AC-130U Spectre gunships in less than two. A drone was circling overhead. If it were armed with Hellfire missiles, it could have taken out the mortar.

http://www.cbsnews.com/8301-33816_162-57536611/could-u.s-military-have-helped-during-libya-attack/

"Somebody high up in the administration made the decision that no assistance would be provided, and let our people be killed," said retired Admiral James "Ace" Lyons, former commander of the Pacific Fleet. "The person who made that callous decision needs to be brought to light and held accountable."

http://www.washingtontimes.com/news/2012/oct/28/lyonsobama-needs-come-clean-what-happened-benghazi/?page=all#pagebreak

The suspect list is very small. It could only have been the secretary of defense, AFRICOM commander Gen. Carter Ham, or someone at the White House - such as National Security Advisor Tom Donilon, Mr. Obama's Rasputin Valerie Jarrett, or Mr. Obama himself.

Gen. Ham has been relieved, Mr. Panetta announced Oct. 18. The Pentagon denied a report Gen. Ham was fired because he tried to send help.

When he received an order to stand down, Gen. Ham's response "was to screw it, he was going anyhow," a Louisiana blogger said he was told by "someone inside the military that I trust entirely."

But "within 30 seconds to a minute after making the move to respond, his second in command apprehended General Ham and told him that he was now relieved of his command," his military source told "Tiger Droppings."

http://www.tigerdroppings.com/rant/p/37144547/Interesting-Rumor-Concerning-General-Carter-Ham-and-Stand-Down-Order.aspx

The defense secretary never explicitly said it was he who ordered the military to stand down. To the military ear, what he said Oct. 26 sounded like advice, not an order.

Mr. Panetta was in the Oval Office an hour after the attack began, according to White House logs. If he'd issued the order to stand down, he'd have done it in front of the president.

http://news.investors.com/ibd-editorials/102612-631040-panetta-claims-real-time-benghazi-intelligence-lack.htm

Harry Truman kept in the Oval Office a sign which said: "the buck stops here." Barack Obama has spent his presidency passing the buck. But he cannot evade responsibility for this unconscionable decision. Roger Simon at PJ Media thinks Mr. Obama is guilty of treason.

http://pjmedia.com/rogerlsimon/2012/10/29/beyond-impeachment-benghazi/?singlepage=true

It may be worse. Mr. Obama may be an accomplice to murder.

"We" don't deploy military forces anywhere. We have no army. We have no air force or navy.

Only our enemies do.

They have taken over our country. And they are busy using the forces and the money and the naive young men they have stolen from us to take over and control other countries.

Some of those other countries are fighting back. More power to them.

We should fight back too.

With all good wishes,

What about George W. Bush...and Cheney...and Rumsfeld...and Wolfowitz?
Are they accomplices to murder?

4500 dead American kids in Iraq, anywhere from a minimum of 10,000 to 100,000 or more dead innocent Iraqi civilians. Iraq, a country that had NOTHING to do with 9/11.

How odd that I don't remember you whining about Bush and company being

Real Benghazi story emerging, proving that Fox "News" and the radicals in Congress made the whole thing up.

Fox News and Jason Chaveetz are the only traitors here. All the fantastic stories re: Benghazi are false.

Disaster relief: Obama, Romney differ on federal role

NJ governor: Sandy impact 'terrifying'

STORY HIGHLIGHTS

* Mitt Romney surrogate Chris Christie praises President Barack Obama's response to Sandy

* The superstorm focuses attention on the role of government in disaster relief

* Romney advocates a state-led approach, but his campaign promises enough funding

* Obama emphasizes federal, state and local cooperation

Washington (CNN) -- When Chris Christie praises President Barack Obama as "outstanding" and "incredibly supportive," you know something extraordinary has occurred.

Obama updated on Sandy; praised by Christie

In this case, it was once-in-a-lifetime Superstorm Sandy, which caused the outspoken Republican governor of New Jersey to declare a state of emergency and seek federal help for widespread devastation.

Interviewed Tuesday on NBC, Christie described Obama's response as "outstanding," and he told CNN that the president had been "incredibly supportive and helpful to our state."

"This is much more important than any election," Christie told CNN's "Piers Morgan Tonight."

Obama has "been outstanding to deal with on this and I look forward to seeing him tomorrow so he can see for himself what this hurricane has done to my state," Christie said Tuesday night.

Such effusive praise from a frequent Obama critic and strong supporter of Republican presidential challenger Mitt Romney put the campaign magnifying glass on a key election issue -- the role of the federal government -- a week before the November 6 vote.

Romney's new focus:
storm relief

'is not over'

Romney: Storm will be a 'difficult time'

It also focused attention on how Romney would handle such a disaster if he were to defeat Obama in what is expected to be a very close election.

On Tuesday, the GOP candidate showed little inclination to address the matter. At a campaign event changed to a storm relief effort in Ohio, Romney ignored shouted questions by reporters on whether he supported the Federal Emergency Management Agency's role in disaster relief.

Instead, he focused his remarks to supporters who donated relief supplies for storm victims on how such efforts contribute to meeting the overall need.

"We won't be able to solve all the problems with our effort this morning," Romney said, adding "one of the things you learn in life is you make the difference you can, and you can't always solve all the problems yourself."

Romney
on storm aftermath: 'People are hurting'

Democratic critics of Romney and his running mate -- conservative House Budget Chairman Paul Ryan of Wisconsin -- argue their proposals to cut government spending and provide broad tax cuts without generating more government revenue will end up harming the economy and increasing the federal deficit.

Photos: New York recovers from Sandy

In particular, the Obama campaign challenges Romney's contention that increased economic growth from the tax cuts combined with shifting current federal responsibilities to states, the private sector and humanitarian agencies and charities can balance the budget.

Last year, Romney argued at a Republican presidential debate in New Hampshire that cutting federal spending should be based on prioritizing what is absolutely necessary and shedding the rest.

Asked by moderator John King of CNN if disaster relief efforts should be turned over to states, Romney said that "every time you have an occasion to take something from the federal government and send it back to the states, that's the right direction. And if you can go even further and send it back to the private sector, that's even better."

"Instead of thinking in the federal budget, what we should cut -- we should ask ourselves the opposite question. What should we keep?" Romney added. "We should take all of what we're doing at the federal level and say, what are the things we're doing that we don't have to do? And those things we've got to stop doing, because we're borrowing $1.6 trillion more this year than we're taking in."

King cut in to ask if Romney was referring specifically to disaster relief, a topic in the news at the time following a deadly Joplin, Missouri, tornado, and Romney continued: "We cannot afford to do those things without jeopardizing the future for our kids. It is simply immoral, in my view, for us to continue to rack up larger and larger debts and pass them on to our kids, knowing full well that we'll all be dead and gone before it's paid off. It makes no sense at all."

Romney: States should handle emergency management

With then-Hurricane Sandy bearing down on the East Coast on Monday, Romney's debate comments from 16 months earlier became a topic of political discussion, and the Romney campaign issued a statement in response.

Sandy reminds us of climate change and other forgotten campaign issues

"Gov. Romney believes that states should be in charge of emergency management in responding to storms and other natural disasters in their jurisdictions," said the statement by spokeswoman Amanda Henneberg. "As the first responders, states are in the best position to aid affected individuals and communities, and to direct resources and assistance to where they are needed most. This includes help from the federal government and FEMA."

Henneberg added another sentence to the statement Tuesday, saying that "a Romney-Ryan administration will always ensure that disaster funding is there for those in need. Period."

Opinion: Sandy shows why we need FEMA

Craig Fugate, administrator of the emergency management agency, told reporters Tuesday that the agency had $3.6 billion remaining in its disaster relief fund. The agency works with state and local authorities as well as the American Red Cross and other agencies to help disaster victims rent temporary housing, repair their homes, get loans to cover small business and farm losses, as well as assisting in cleaning up storm debris including hazardous materials.

Vice President Joe Biden, meanwhile, said Tuesday that the federal response to Sandy was "working like it's supposed to," and he highlighted to reporters in Ohio what he described as unprecedented cooperation between city, state and federal authorities and agencies.

A White House statement also emphasized such cooperation, noting Obama spoke by phone with a host of Republican and Democratic governors and mayors from states affected by the storm.

Sandy's impact: State by state

Romney has made political dysfunction in Washington a target of his campaign, blaming Obama for what he calls failed leadership in being unable to forge a deficit reduction deal with Republicans.

Democrats blame Republicans for what they contend has been an unwillingness to compromise, and the focus on cooperation Tuesday by Obama and Biden appeared to be aimed in part at demonstrating the administration's ability to get things done.

The question of the size and scope of the federal government is at the heart of both campaigns.

Obama and Democrats argue that entitlement programs such as Social Security, Medicare and Medicaid are vital to the social contract to provide contributing citizens with basic needs, and that government also has a role to play in education and technological development while providing services such as national defense and disaster relief.

Opinion: Sandy debunks 'nanny state'

Republicans, driven by the party's conservative wing, call for immediate steps to erase the chronic budget deficits and mounting federal debt that they say imperil national security and stability. They want to shrink the size of government and reduce taxes while reforming entitlements by partial privatization, reducing and delaying some benefits and other steps.

Sensitive issues such as disaster relief generally play to the advantage of Democrats and their support for government benefits, especially in a time of crisis when images of suffering victims dominate the airwaves.

Superstorm Sandy breaks records

Obama has avoided any direct political talk in recent days as the huge storm approached the Eastern seaboard, canceling campaign events and focusing his attention on the administration's response. In statements Monday and Tuesday on the storm and its aftermath, he emphasized the need for a collective response while also making sure to point out the federal role in relief efforts.

"We've been able to get over 1,000 FEMA officials in place, pre-positioned," the president said. "We've been able to get supplies, food, medicine, water, emergency generators, to ensure that hospitals and law enforcement offices are able to stay up and running as they are out there responding."

He also sounded a main campaign theme by ensuring those hit hardest by the storm that his administration and the entire nation were with them.

"This is a tough time for millions of folks across the Eastern seaboard, but America is tougher and we are tougher because we pull together, we don't leave anybody behind, we make sure that we respond as a nation," Obama said.

Obama visits Red Cross: 'Storm is not yet over'

At about the same time he spoke, the White House announced that Obama will travel to New Jersey on Wednesday "where he will join Gov. Christie in viewing the storm damage, talking with citizens who are recovering from the storm and thanking first responders who put their lives at risk to protect their communities."

While the president and one of Romney's top supporters will be photographed together responding to disaster, Romney is scheduled to be in Florida for three campaign events.

How to help after the superstorm

CNN's Rachel Streitfeld, Kevin Liptak, Tom Watkins and Mike M. Ahlers contributed to this report.

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

THE LIBERTY NET continues to be one of the best places to speak the truth as you see it without the censorious and ethnic-agenda-driven ï¿½gatekeepersï¿½ of the billionairesï¿½ mass media. All that is asked is that you be courteous, identify yourself, and wait for your turn to be called by Net Control Station W1WCR.

Here are a just few samples of what was debated on the net this session:

ï¿½ As more and more electric utility companies are being sold off to foreign interests, is infrastructure maintenance being sacrificed to boost profits, making storm outages far more widespread than they would otherwise be? (5 minutes)

ï¿½ Why are literal busloads of Somalis ï¿½ many of them illiterate and not even nominal citizens ï¿½ being taken to the polls to ï¿½vote earlyï¿½ in Ohio? (9 minutes)

ï¿½ It is so well known that Chicago is a corrupt, crime-boss-run city where gangs of all kinds run rampant that it is even the stuff of popular humor. Yet not only is nothing ever done about it, but elements of the Chicago mob now hold high positions in the Washington regime. (13 minutes)

ï¿½ Why should our young people be burdened for life with huge ï¿½student loanï¿½ debts ï¿½ debts that canï¿½t even be discharged by bankruptcy no matter how large they get ï¿½ when the bankers created the so-called ï¿½loansï¿½ out of thin air and took no risk whatsoever? (20 minutes)

ï¿½ The regimeï¿½s investments in solar and other alternative energy companies appear to be uniquely incompetent and / or crooked, a problem that Germany ï¿½ which just broke a record for solar power production ï¿½ apparently doesnï¿½t have. (30 minutes)

ï¿½ With the rise of ï¿½smart metersï¿½ and ï¿½smart appliances,ï¿½ is the electrical grid becoming the worldï¿½s largest spy network? (47 minutes)

ï¿½ We need a new Un-American Activities Committee ï¿½ under non-regime auspices, of course ï¿½ which would investigate the two main political parties to determine whether they are inherently antithetical to this nation and its constitutional basis. (1 hour 1 minute)

ï¿½ Guess who else who doesnï¿½t trust the banker-owned regime in Washington? Germany is now sending signals that they want to repatriate the gold now being ï¿½held for themï¿½ by the Federal Reserve in New York. The first step is an audit. (1 hour 29 minutes)

A New America www.NewAmericaMovie.com is a documentary film that outlines the history of the Progressive movement in America over the last century. It analyzes how Progressive ideology has transformed public policy, the structures of government, and its potential impact on the country’s future. An example of historical analysis contained in the film would be the argument that the Progressive ideals employed
by FDR’s New Deal were the cause of the Great Depression, not the solution to it.

Through interviews with Constitutional scholars, authors, historians, public policymakers, and others, it reviews the original intent of the Founders, why it is important and lays out how Progressivism is in conflict with that original intent.

Anyone who is NOT a public Union/Liberal/Progressive/Socialist/

Anyone who refutes a public Union/Liberal/Progressive/Socialist/
Communist is a moron according to Useful Liberal JackAss Idiots.

As socialistworker.org admits, http://socialistworker.org/2003-2/471/471_09_Fascism.shtml
the left routinely applies the term "fascist" to any Republican political leader. In Britain The Guardian, BBC, and other liberal media pounced on purported links between the Bush family and corporations that had dealings with Nazi Germany. The fact that Prescott Bush, George W. Bush's grandfather, was a "director and shareholder" with companies that had indirect financial dealings with Germany in the 1930s would hardly seem damning, however. Much the same could be said for many other affluent individuals in America or Britain at the time. Every American today with mutual fund holdings is invested, at least indirectly, in Hugo Chavez's Venezuela. Does that make them Marxist revolutionaries?

Talk of Hitler became a lot more common during the Bush years, when it was accepted wisdom on the left that George Bush was worse than Hitler. Then there was Nancy Pelosi, who spent weeks back in 2010 complaining of the Tea Party's so-called "swastika signs" -- signs that did not signal an alliance with fascism but opposition to it. Pelosi was hardly alone in accusing the Tea Party of fascism. Marc Rubin, writing for examiner.com, referred to Tea Party members as "text book fascists." He went on to pin the neo-fascist label on Tom Tancredo, presumably because of Tancredo's concerns over illegal immigration. If those concerns make Tancredo a fascist, they would make the majority of Americans who share those concerns fascists as well. But that's pretty much how the left sees America.

The immediate response of liberals such as Chris Matthews http://www.mrc.org/biasalert/2011/20110412110017.aspx to the Ryan "Path to Prosperity" was to characterize it as a killer not just of babies and old people but of "half the people who watch this show." This attempt to portray the GOP plan as genocidal is just another example of the fascist rhetoric. It appears that Matthews is attempting to portray the Ryan plan as some sort of Final Solution.

It's not just loose cannons on MSNBC who resort to fascist innuendo. Obama's speechwriters are good at crafting sinister suggestions even without using the "F" word. Obama's budget speech of April 13 actually set the tone for the current debate. With Rep. Ryan sitting on the front row, Obama lectured his audience that the GOP plan would kick "someone's grandparents" out of nursing homes and cause children with autism and Down's syndrome to "fend for themselves." It is well known that Hitler sent legions of the disabled to concentration camps to be gassed, but the suggestion that a plan to actually save Medicare and Medicaid resembles the Holocaust, if that is what Obama intended, is repellent. It was one more proof, as if we needed any more, of a fatal weakness in the character of this President. He is a man whose entire existence is devoted to gutter politics. For such a man, statesmanship and dignified leadership are inconceivable.

The plain truth is that America can no longer afford this sort of reckless partisanship on the part of the chief executive. The fact that Obama disagrees with Rep. Ryan's budget plan does not justify accusations of killing sick children or tossing old folks out on the street. That kind of rhetoric may pass for wit in the sixth grade, but it is juvenile coming from the President.

LIBERAL FASCIST Left-wing roots of the Nazis:

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=4758sBZLC5k

LIBERAL FASCISM, Marxism, National Socialism [NAZI] and Juche [N.Korea] are left-wing brothers:

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Fa1sj0gwnuQ

"It is obvious what the fraudulent issue of fascism versus communism accomplishes: it sets up, as opposites, two variants of the same political system; it eliminates the possibility of considering capitalism; it switches the choice of “Freedom or dictatorship?” into “Which kind of dictatorship?”—thus establishing dictatorship as an inevitable fact and offering only a choice of rulers. The choice—according to the proponents of that fraud—is: a dictatorship of the rich (fascism) or a dictatorship of the poor (communism)."

"That fraud collapsed in the 1940’s, in the aftermath of World War II. It is too obvious, too easily demonstrable that fascism and communism are not two opposites, but two rival gangs fighting over the same territory—that both are variants of statism, based on the collectivist principle that man is the rightless slave of the state—that both are socialistic, in theory, in practice, and in the explicit statements of their leaders—that under both systems, the poor are enslaved and the rich are expropriated in favor of a ruling clique—that fascism is not the product of the political “right,” but of the “left”—that the basic issue is not “rich versus poor,” but man versus the state, or: individual rights versus totalitarian government—which means: capitalism versus socialism."

NAZI Origins of LIBERAL FASCISTS Global Warming - While this may sound odd to many who have bought into the Marxian propaganda over the years that the Nazis were right wing capitalistic extremists, Greens who signed up for the Nazi Party were actually very typical of the day. Between 60% and 70% of the German Greens were NAZI Party members, compared to only 10% of the population at large.

"Socialism is a philosophy of failure,
the creed of ignorance, and the gospel of envy,
its inherent virtue is the equal sharing of misery..."

-- Winston Churchill

"If you will not fight for the right when you can easily win without bloodshed; if you will not fight when your victory will be sure and not too costly; you may come to the moment when you will have to fight with all the odds against you and only a precarious chance of survival. There may even be a worse case. You may have to fight when there is no hope of victory, because it is better to perish than live as slaves."

---Winston Churchill

"Just as the Left was drawn to the communist killing machines of Lenin, Stalin, Mao, Pol Pot, and Castro, so too it is now attracted to radical Islam."

"The contempt that German Hitlerytes had for "Bolshevism" or "marxist Jews" generally should also not mislead us in assessing the similarity between National Socialism and Communism. Leftist sects are very prone to rivalry, dissension, schism and hatred of one-another. One has only to think of the Bolsheviks versus the Mensheviks, Stalin versus Trotsky, China versus the Soviet Union etc. Similarity does not preclude rivalry. Hitler and Stalin were literally brothers in arms BEFORE they became rivals. That socialist brothers sometimes fall out should not prevent us from noting the brotherhood concerned."

"The fundamental dogma of all brands of socialism and communism is that the market economy or capitalism is a system that hurts the vital interests of the immense majority of people for the sole benefit of a small minority of rugged individualists. It condemns the masses to progressing impoverishment. It brings about misery, slavery, oppression, degradation and exploitation of the working men, while it enriches a class of idle and useless parasites."

"This doctrine was not the work of Karl Marx. It had been developed long before Marx entered the scene. Its most successful propagators were not the Marxian authors, but such men as Carlyle and Ruskin, the British Fabians, the German professors and the American Institutionalists. And it is a very significant fact that the correctness of this dogma was contested only by a few economists who were very soon silenced and barred from access to the universities, the press, the leadership of political parties and, first of all, public office. Public opinion by and large accepted the condemnation of capitalism without any reservation."

[...]

"The term 'planning' is mostly used as a synonym for socialism, communism, and authoritarian and totalitarian economic management. Sometimes only the German pattern of socialism-Zwangswirtschaft-is called planning, while the term socialism proper is reserved for the Russian pattern of outright socialization and bureaucratic operation of all plants, shops, and farms. At any rate, planning in this sense means all-around planning by the government and enforcement of these plans by the police power. Planning in this sense means full government control of business. It is the antithesis of free enterprise, private initiative, private ownership of the means of production, market economy, and the price system. Planning and capitalism are utterly incompatible. Within a system of planning production is conducted according to the government's orders, not according to the plans of capitalists and entrepreneurs eager to profit by best filling the wants of the consumers.

"But the term planning is also used in a second sense. Lord Keynes, Sir William Beveridge, Professor Hansen, and many other eminent men assert that they do not want to substitute totalitarian slavery for freedom. They declare that they are planing for a free society. They recommend a third system, which, as they say, is as far from socialism as it is from capitalism, which, as a third solution of the problem of society's economic organization, stands midway between the two other systems, and while retaining the advantages of both, avoids the disadvantages inherent in each.

"These self-styled progressives are certainly mistaken when they pretend that their proposals are new and unheard of. The idea of this third solution is very old indeed, and the French have long since baptized it with a pertinent name; they call it interventionism. Hardly anybody can doubt that history will link the idea of social security, more closely than with the American New Deal and with Sir William Beveridge, with the memory of Bismarck whom our fathers did not precisely describe as a liberal. All the essential ideas of present-day interventionist progressivism were neatly expounded by the supreme brain-trusters of imperial Germany, Professors Schmoller and Wagner, who at the same time urged their Kaiser to invade and to conquer the Americas. Far be it from me to condemn any idea only on account of its not being new. But as the progressives slander all their opponents as old-fashioned, orthodox, and reactionary, it is expedient to observe that it would be more appropriate to speak of the clash of two orthodoxies; the Bismarck orthodoxy versus the Jefferson orthodoxy.

Dr. Ludwig von Mises - 1952 - http://mises.org/books/planningforfreedom_mises.pdf

The origins of the modern left can be traced back to the famous passage in Rousseau's Discourse on the Origin and Foundations of Inequality, in which he condemned the institution of private property:

"The first man, who after enclosing a piece of ground, took it into his head to say, 'this is mine,' and found people simple enough to believe him, was the real founder of civil society."

Added Rousseau: "How many crimes, how many wars, how many murders, how many misfortunes and horrors, would that man have saved the human species, who pulling up the stakes or filling up the ditches should have cried to his fellows: Beware of listening to this impostor; you are lost, if you forget that the fruits of the earth belong equally to us all, and the earth itself to nobody!"

Around the 1830s, a faction of French liberals gravitated toward Romanticism and the philosophy of the late Rousseau, proclaiming that capitalism, private property, and the increasing complexity of modern society were agents of moral decay -- both for the individual and for society at large. This is essentially the worldview that has made its way, through history, into the collective mind of the modern left; it is a worldview calling for a revolution that not only will topple the existing capitalist order and punish its corrupt leaders, but that also will replace that order with a socialist regime where the utopian ideals of perfect justice and equality will reign. Such an ambition can be put into effect only by a totalitarian state with the authority to micromanage every facet of human life, precisely the end-point toward which the policies and crusades of the modern left are directed.

When the term "liberalism" (from the Latin word liberalis, meaning "pertaining to a free man") first emerged in the early 1800s, its hallmarks were a belief in individual rights, the rule of law, limited government, private property, and laissez faire economics. These would remain the defining characteristics of liberalism throughout the liberal epoch (generally identified as the period of 1815-1914). Yet the modern left, which portrays itself as the agent of enlightened commitment to "liberal" causes, in fact stands for the antithesis of each of the foregoing liberal ideals. Contrary to its self-definition, the left is neither "liberal" nor "progressive," but rather a reactionary force that seeks to resurrect the traditions that characterized the epoch which preceded the rise of classical liberalism.

The following is from The World Book Encyclopedia, 1947 edition:
The chief characteristics of Fascism are as follows:

THE CULTIVATION OF IGNORANCE

Fascism, like all forms of government, rests firmly on the sincere consent of a large part of the population... To maintain this consent, the Fascist leadership must cut off the people from any information which might cause them to doubt the complete correctness of the fixed Fascist principles... All forms of communication are carefully censored, so that the public will receive only those facts that the dictators want known... Travel to other countries must be controlled, and freedom of speech and assembly must be rigorously suppressed...

These people saw in Fascism a protection against the demands of farmers and other workers... Both regimes at first upheld the rights of private property... THE POLICE STATE

Fascism depends upon the police to crush all opposition or dissent. Secret police spy on the whole population, and any casual remark against the regime leads to swift and severe punishment... Opposition parties are dissolved. Intellectual, athletic and recreational organizations are usually brought under the control of the Fascist authority... The ruthlessness of the police gradually becomes less noticeable... This is because within a year or so after a Fascist government takes power, vigorous opponents of the regime have either left the country, been killed or jailed...

EXTREME NATIONALISM

Fascism is highly nationalistic... It tries to identify its principles with the country, so that disagreement will look like treason... Some other country, or some group within the country, is chosen to serve as the "enemy" and made to appear as the cause of all evils or misfortunes... For example, the Nazis in Germany represented their movement first as a crusade against the Jews, then as a fight against Communism and later as a struggle against the "attacks" from whatever neighboring country they wished to subdue or occupy... Extreme nationalism often becomes a kind of racial fanaticism... Sometimes it combines racial and religious bigotry...

When you hear the Liberal Fascist JackAss propaganda that THEY are the true patriots then you know the time is near. Look for it from the socialist Labor Unions such as the SEIU!
http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/groupProfile.asp?grpid=6535

MILITARISM

Fascism maintains among the people a permanently warlike frame of mind... Every citizen feels that he is mobilized against enemies of the regime from within, and against possible foreign foes... The dictator usually comes to power during a period of economic crisis or depression... He relieves the depression partly by employing many people in the making of armaments... To justify this procedure, he must convince the people that the country is threatened, and must point toward some of the enemies against whom the armaments may be needed...

1. Liberalism (Well Meaning, Nice Sounding, "Do-Gooder" Policies Always Doomed to Fail)

2. Liberal-Progressivism (The Drive for Social Improvement through Change and Promising Hope;
More Draconian Liberal Polices are Implemented to Transform The People into a New Society that

3. Liberal-Fascism (The Rise of the Party Leader over 'The Party' Ensuring the Unity and Uniformaty of 'The Party' and Enforcing The Will of 'The Party' Over the People.) The Party Leader will Cleanse 'The Party' of All those Who Are NOT of 'The Party'; and 'The Party' Will Cleanse the People of All Those Who Do NOT Support 'The Party' and The Party Leader. The Party Leader Now Has Complete and Total Power and Rules by the Force of His Iron Will.

4678. Alex Jones Has Now Officially Jumped the Shark

Jone's latest expose is that the Presidential election is/was fixed for Obama because Irish bookmaker Paddy Power has paid out Obama to win the election wagers two days before the election. Gosh you just can't get anything by this fellow can you! The bookie be all the way over in Ireland who would have dreamed anyone in the USA would learn of it the plot?

By the by, Paddy Power often does such things as publicity stunts. It did the same thing with Tiger Woods in a golf tournament he didn't win. http://www.businessinsider.com/paddy-power-pays-out-on-obama-victory-2012-11 The publicity reaped in response to such gimmicks generates many new customers, and consequently, future revenue than the cost of paying off the bet should it lose. Duh.

After giving this carnival barker the benefit of the doubt for way too many years I must now declare him an official disinformation specialist. In the employ of who? I don't know. However, I do know that he is not a serious person and that is the most damning evidence of all.

Highlights of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
29 October - 04 November 2012

Solar activity was at very low to low levels. The largest flares of the period were a pair of C1 flares from Regions 1596 (N07, L=150, class/area Eho/460 on 21 October) and 1598 (S12, L=111, class/area Dki/420 on 23 October) at 0507 UTC and 1139 UTC on 31 October, respectively. Other activity of note was a 24 degree long filament eruption centered at S32E07 that occurred from 0640-0855 UTC on 30 October. No Earth-directed coronal mass ejections (CMEs) were observed during the reporting period.

No proton events were observed at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit was at moderate levels on 29-30 October and again on 01 November. High levels were reached on 31 October. Normal background levels were observed from 02-04 November.

Geomagnetic field activity was at quiet to active levels with major to severe storm periods observed at high latitudes. The period began with quiet conditions until a sudden increase in solar wind speed at the ACE spacecraft from 290 - 360 km/s occurred at approximately 31/1445 UTC. A sudden impulse (13 nT) was observed at the Boulder magnetometer at 1539 UTC on 31 October. This initial activity was due to a pair of CMEs resulting from filament eruptions on 27 and 28 October. The geomagnetic field responded with a unsettled period during the 1500-1800 UTC period on 31 October. At approximatly 31/2348 UTC, the total magnetic field (Bt) increased from 9 to 15 nT while the Bz component rotated to a southward (negative) component for approximately 20 hours (maximum deflection of 11 nT). The geomagnetic field responded with quiet to active levels with major to severe storm periods observed at high latitudes on 01 November.
By 02 November through the rest of the reporting period, quiet conditions prevailed.
```

Forecast of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
05 November - 01 December 2012

Solar activity is expected to be very low to low until 08 November.
>From 08-21 November, a chance for M-class flares exist as old Region 1594 (S27, L=199) rotates across the visible disk. From 22 November until the end of the forecast period, very low to low levels are expected.

No proton events are expected at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit is expected to be at high levels from 09-24 November. Normal to moderate levels are expected from 25 November through 01 December.

Geomagnetic field activity is expected to be quiet to unsettled through the forecast period. Unsettled conditions with a chance for active periods are expected from 08-11 November and again on 13 November due to activity from a recurrent coronal hole high speed stream.

AJ is a wack-job, like a lot of the talking heads. (And the people who follow him). Kind of like the preachers on shorwave.
Bought and paid for by the same people who pay fat-dopehead-rushie boy.
You think these boys really believe the BS they push? Just like the election ads, believe nothing, do your own home work. Be an informed voter. It scares the hell out of both parties.

Alex Jones when he was younger suffered a severe concussion and after

So, you think Romney will end up being the Flip-Flopper in Chief?

Romney might not be so bad...if he stood for something.

He has flip flopped on every issue, from saving the auto companies to global warming to women's rights to government health care to...(and I can show you the newsreels).

Heck, when he was on the campaign dinner trail, I can show you one newsreel where he said "I'm not a catfish man" and I can show you another newsreel where he said "I LOVE catfish". Panderer, flip-flopper, weather vane, Etch-A-Sketcher.

Just what we need -- a real steady hand at the tiller.

Nothing "will change for the better"???

Where have you been?

Obama passed:

-equal pay for women
-Wall Street reform
-Health care reform
-Credit card reform
-saving the auto companies

I am honestly puzzled that you don't think these things are "for the better".

This is undesirable and unconstitutional. If I want to pay anyone more, or less, than any other person -- or if an individual of either sex demands more than he or she is getting now -- that should be strictly between me and the person involved. No third party, particularly not the criminal regime in Washington, should be allowed to interfere with our agreements.

> -Wall Street reform

So far as I can tell, not only are the banks still allowed to create money out of thin air, but the Wall Street vultures are also still allowed to create "derivatives" almost at will to steal the wealth of honest people.

And, furthermore, Congress and Fetchit were ordered to literally give multiple billions to the banks, and they did so with alacrity.

> -Health care reform

So far as I can tell, we are still caught in an infinitely complex web of rapacious insurance companies and uncaring, inefficient bureaucrats -- a situation which is profoundly unsatisfactory to both doctors and patients. I am old enough to remember when almost nobody had health insurance and doctors worked mainly on a cash basis. It was better then, even for those of modest means.

Again, the banks are still allowed to create money out of nothing -- so the "change" has been utterly insignificant.

Probably the only thing that can save our industries is an end to so-called "free trade." I don't see that happening, so eventually Cadillacs and Dodges will disappear or become rebranded Asian goods, as "RCA" and "Zenith" did long ago.

Please note that I am not suggesting that any of these things would be better under Rob-me than under Fetchit.

The truth is that both are figureheads with almost no power, mere employees of the ethnically-distinct oligarchs who are our real rulers.

I have no specific knowledge of that model, but I've worked on more than a few multiband receivers.

It's possible that the first RF amplifier transistor has died -- it is usually common to the SW and MW bands on most sets. So are the IF and local oscillator stages, but they are less exposed to the outside world and static charges, so I'd say the first RF amp is the prime suspect.

All the best,

Kevin.

Cuhu, you are TOTALLY wrong.

Dan Rather's firing had NOTHING to do with exit polls.

Rather was fired because he accused George W. Bush of weaseling out of his Air National Guard commitment per a discharge document.

Then some so-called "font expert" said the fonts on W's discharge papers could not have existed in the year the document was printed. That statement went viral on the Internet, ultimately getting Rather fired.

As it turns out, the so-called "font expert" was a lawyer/Republican operative that knew less about fonts than your Blueberry doggy. The "questioned" document was no longer in question. It was real...but the damage was done and Rather was let go on bogus grounds.

Look it up.

What doesn't happen? My first thought wsa to open it up, and then disconennect and reconnect each of the visible connectors. I have one, and that seemed to help a problem I had (I got it used, for 2.00 at a Rotary Club sale), but I can't remember the actual symptoms. I think it was more "weak" reception than none, or maybe the display was flakey.

Do you hear any noise out of the speaker? That won't say everything, but the lack of noise may make it a relatively simple thing, while noise can mean there is still a problem towards the front end of the radio.

It has an rf gain control, which has a switch that turns off the AGC. I know I've thought it dead only to realize I didn't have the RF gain control turned up enough.

The fact that it works on FM is helpful, so it's nothing central to both, though of course the FM stage is pretty much separate. I had to resolder the AC adapter jack on mine, that was flakey.

I found the schematic for it, or maybe it was the Grundig Satellite 500, somewhere on the internet. Maybe mods.dk

This series of Satellit radios, like the 500, has been known to lock up the processor. If the radio has been plugged in, or loaded up with batteries, for a long time, unplug the power, take out the batteries, and let it sit for at least an hour. It could take as long as three hours to properly reset.

Plug it back in, or PUT!.....DE BATTERIES!.....BECK!. And it should be fine.

I have to do this about twice a year with both my 500 and 700.

Have you had experience with a 700 that is very prone to, well.. I can't NAME the problem.. but it tends to lose it when I push on the front of the case and sometimes just tilting the radio will do it. It doesn't seem to be a battery contact issue, I've put coins in to shim the batteries for tighter connection with the same result.

I think that's one reason I once pulled out the connectors and put them back in, though I can't remember if it was the 500 or the 700. The radio worked but the readout was flakey, partially there rather than gone completely. Or maybe there was another issue too, because I did dismiss the possibility that it was something like that zebra stripe thing to the LCD readout. Maybe even the backlight stopped working. But yes, pressure somewhere (and I couldn't figure the exact spot) removed the problem.

Two such incidents, actually. One was definitely a battery issue. The problem wasn't longitudinal stability, which shims would address, but rather lateral stability....the batteries would move side to side....enough to break contact between cells, or the positive contact in the battery box. Padded the battery box with felt, end of problem.

The second issue was a problem I also had on a Sangean 803....long tails on through-hole components touching next layer components. Trimmed all the tails. Problem ended.

Brenda.

As simple, and silly, as it may sound. Check your AGC switch, lower right. Make sure it's off. Also, some times, the little tail, on the right, in your battery compartment, needs a little bending. And, lastly, the antenna connection, is not the best. It's another tail-type connection. If this doesn't help, join and read back posting to the grundig satellite group on yahoo. There is 2 of them, just join both. Good luck. (BTW, the 500 and 700 have the same failings).

I'm sorry, but I downloaded the PDFs from CBS and I'm as far from Republican party operative as you can get. The stuff they had couldn't have been printed before computer based word processing with proportional printing, on a laser printer. Which didn't exist until the early-mid 1980's. Long after Vietnam. (Giving the benefit of the doubt, they perhaps could have been created with a daisy-wheel driven by a computer based word processor, but even then, that would have been late 1970's).
CBS shouldn't have taken them seriously.

Military orders and memos from the Vietnam War era would have, most likely, been cut on a IBM (Selectric or Executive) or Remington typewriter (whoever won the government contract), and would have been formatted in a much more primitive style.

One theory is that the content was accurate, but by using anachronistic re-creations, these were poison bait, designed to discredit the groups raising the controversy about GWB's military service and drug use.

In that case, you may want to pay attention to the House and Senate

Maybe YOU ought to pay attention...

The market -always- goes up and down, yes, down 300 today.

However, if you will recall -- and look at the bigger picture, the market was around 6500 when Obama took office four years ago and is around 13,000 today. UP approximately 7000 points since he took office. An almost 7 THOUSAND point gain during Obama's term.
Horrible, just horrible. :-(

I missed it. What did the charlatan have to say for himself? I remember Bush publicly dissing Rove aka "the architect" after he engineered the midterm drubbings of Republicans in 2006.

From Wikipedia:
"The 2006 United States midterm elections were held on Tuesday, November 7, 2006. All United States House of Representatives seats and one third of the United States Senate seats were contested in this election, as well as 36 state governorships, many state legislatures, four territorial legislatures and many state and local races. The election resulted in a sweeping victory for the Democratic Party which captured the House of Representatives, the Senate, and a majority of governorships and state legislatures from the Republican Party."

That the incompetent creep is still put forth as an "expert" is hilarious. But then we are talking about FAUX news aren't we.

Incidentally, Dick Morris in his lame rationalization for his abject failure called Obama's win "a squeaker". He predicted a Romney
"landslide" of 325-213, but Obama's victory of 332-206 is a "squeaker". Cripes you couldn't write satire any better than his tripe.

The pathetic thing is that the reputations of all these phoneys will remain untarnished. The American public has been so dumbed down they no longer are able to differentiate between chicken salad and chicken shit. Very sad.

Will they cut off their noses to spite their faces? I think not. Fat Cat industrialists and banksters are mot your ma and pa small businesses.
They are the ones who are scared. Real small businesses make it happen

Unfortunately, CBS is hardly unbiased.

If you want to go biased in the other direction (or maybe not), read Rather's book. He seems quite believable and an up front guy, but ????

In any event, it was clearly proven that the so-called "font expert" that started the whole mess was anything but an expert.

IIRC, it was shown later that it was NOT proportional.

Again, check some other sources other than CBS and see what you think.

4731. Military Absentee Ballots Delivered One Day Late, Would Have Swung Election For Romney

WAS IT STOLEN?

[Note by Dr Jack Wheeler: We are being asked to believe that Romney got close to three million fewer votes in 2012 than John McCain got in 2008. That's not possible. This election is a fraud. I don't know exactly how - rigging voting machines, hacking tabulation software, not counting military absentee ballots, whatever.

http://www.duffelblog.com/2012/11/military-absentee-ballots-delivered-one-day-late-would-have-swung-election-for-romney/

What I do know is that it is totally beyond believability and into the realm of ridiculously absurd that Romney actually got any fewer votes than McCain in 2008, much less millions fewer. Thus the answer to Dave's question must be Yes.]

I hate going down a birther road, but yes I believe the election was stolen, and the implications of that are very bad.

First of all, Obama received 10 million less votes than he did in 2008. The part that is unbelievable is that Romney received 3 million less votes than McCain. At the end of the day, Obama won in the 4 critical swing states by 500,000 votes.

But it is worse than that. We can look at who voted. By examining the number of Independents and their preference shift among actual voters, we know that 5 million Independents changed their votes from Obama to Romney. So Romney started the day 2.5 million votes ahead of where McCain was in 2008.

This means that 5.5 million Republican voters are not accounted for.

They didn't show up at the polls, or their votes were not counted. We know now that no subgroup of the coalition decided to sit out. So the current attempts to blame the Social Conservatives are stupid. All of our groups showed up to vote at the rates they did in 2008. For this to be true, over 10% of Republicans needed to decide not to vote this year, who did vote in 2008.

Does that make any sense?

In fact, it is even worse, we know for a fact that heavy GOP counties were swamped all day. We watched all day as, e.g., Pasco County Florida was showing huge increases in GOP voters over the 2008 numbers.

In Virginia, with 69% of the precincts in, Romney held a 6% lead. Yet once a small number of counties reported, that lead disappeared.

If the vote drop off occurred, it occurred in a very small number of counties. It was not visible nationwide.

I contend that you can not get a 10% drop off in GOP turnout without it being noticeable during the GOTV effort, measures of enthusiasm in polling, or visibly lower turnout in GOP leaning precincts.

For anyone who doesn't want to think that the Obama campaign would engage in such blatant election fraud, contemplate this. These are the same people who ran Fast and Furious without regard for the cost in human lives, turned off their credit card verification system to allow fraudulent donations, and allowed four Americans in Libya to die because it was politically inconvenient. Do you really think that massive election fraud is something they wouldn't do?

If this is true, then we have some hard things to consider.

First of all, we are now needlessly fracturing our coalition pointing fingers at people for not voting. Second, we are making an assumption about the make up of the American public that is not true. We are going to modify our party and message to appeal to a group of individuals who do not represent the majority of the population.

Most difficult to believe is that we are living in Venezuela where our elections are merely for show, and the people in charge of the Governments decide who will win elections. We become wards of the State, which is the aim of those who stole this election.

So how can this be proved?

I am going to start by looking at a few key counties in Florida. What I want to see is the voter registration numbers by party, and then compare them to the actual votes received. Theoretically, if this were to be done for all counties in Florida, we could see where the fraud occurred.

Comparing the votes Romney received to the strike lists would show that in specific counties Romney received something like 50% of the Republican vote (picking a number out of the air) while we know that nationwide he received 95% of the Republican vote.

To really get to the answer, we would need to get the registration books, which might be possible through Freedom of Information act. Those show who actually voted, by name, and their party.

The media will not pursue this. This will take citizen journalists working in every state.

Been gas rationing much more recently than WWII. I remember blocks-long lines and odd-even rationing during the Arab oil embargo. Prices jumped from around 30 cents a gallon to over a dollar a gallon practically over night.
Government finally nailed the gougers and it came back down to around 64 cents. Lots of folks running out of gas waiting in line.

As a matter of fact, the disabling of SW on radios in the US WAS required during WWII, at least for certain ethnic groups. Those of German, Japanese, and IIRC to a lesser extent, Italian were required by law to have the SW disabled so that their radios could not be used for espionage. The methods varied: some shops soldered the bandswitch in the AM position, some removed the SW coils. In rare occasions the bandswitch was either completely removed or the shaft sawed off. The good shops merely wired around the SW coils so that they could later recover the radio to its original functionality. As a restorer of early and mid century radios, I run into a few of these from time to time.

The magic keyword is ATSC. There are three formats for transmission, the data streams are all variations on MPEG-TS data.

Europe and most of the world uses DVB-T and the improved DVB-T2, the US chose ATSC based on the main criteria it was NOT DVB-T compatible, and there is another incompatible format used in Japan.

Due to patent licensing issues, the really cheap ones will never be ATSC compatible until someone in China produces them "under the table" (probably a few years off).

As a comparison, DX.com has them for around $30, while DVB-T ones start nder $15. eBay has similar prices.

Hello,

New at this.
Have never tried this before, and would appreciate your opinion on.

Have a coax cable with an mcx connector on one end, and an old small indoor antenna on the other.

Would like to cut off and discard the antenna, but keep the mcx and cable to it.

mcx on pigtails seem really hard to find at a reasonable cost.

Then, I would like to solder some sort of bnc to the now bare end;
possibly a solderable bulkhead bnc or...

SW receiving application only; No transmitting.

If the bnc bulkhead connector is left, more or less loose, rather than being mounted in some metallic enclosure, would I ever notice the difference for receiving <30 MHz ?

Suggestions for other bnc types that are solderable, rather than the bulkhead style, that would be neater ?

Thanks,
Bob

I am not sure from your description, but it sounds like the solderable connector you're describing has a small section -- less than an inch -- of the center conductor exposed.

Although this violates best practices and makes that section of the cable unshielded, I doubt that it will make any audible difference below 30 MHz.

With all good wishes,

Kevin, WB4AIO.

Liberty Net: November 3, 2012

http://3950.net/2012/11/liberty-net-november-3-2012/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

THIS WEEK there were two Liberty Net sessions instead of one: A special election-night watch was on the air Tuesday.

Weï¿½re still waiting to hear from stalwart net participant Al, N2SAG, as communication (and presumably power) at his Long Island QTH still has not been restored. Our thoughts and prayers are with you, Al.

And, right after power was finally restored at N2IRJ after Hurricane Sandy struck, a huge Norï¿½easter slammed into the area and took down the power grid again, taking Marty and the phone patch off the air once more. Martyï¿½s Beverage antenna was also severely damaged by the storms, and his transmitting antenna feedline was brought down by heavy snow.

Hereï¿½s a small selection of what was discussed on the net this week:

ï¿½ The regime in Washington has absolutely insane policies regarding Middle Easterners: One the one hand, itï¿½s virtually forbidden to criticize the Muslim invasion of the United States (they even have a scare word for it; ï¿½Islamophobiaï¿½). But on the other hand weï¿½re murdering ï¿½ literally burning alive ï¿½ many thousands of innocent Muslims who stayed in their home countries and minded their own business. And at the same time, yet another Middle Eastern group ï¿½ the Jews ï¿½ controls a major part of what used to be our financial, media, and political establishments. (18 minutes)

ï¿½ Want more proof that both political parties are controlled by the same bosses? Just look at the fact that the vast majority of those who vote for either party want an end to mass immigration, yet itï¿½s open borders we get ï¿½ open wider every year ï¿½ no matter whether Democrats or Republicans are nominally in power. (30 minutes)

ï¿½ As more and more Greeks now see that they are slated to be lifetime slaves to the bankers ï¿½ and ultimately replaced by non-White invaders who will provide even more ï¿½cheap laborï¿½ to the financial elite ï¿½ they are starting to support the Golden Dawn party by the millions. Golden Dawn has been providing defense against immigrant crime, food, and medicine to Greeks in need, and thatï¿½s garnered the group a large amount of support among workers and even the police. This latter development scares our would-be rulers almost to death. (34 minutes)

ï¿½ The phony Left pretends to have deep concern for ï¿½womenï¿½s rights,ï¿½ but their support of the spread of Islam ï¿½ which often treats women worse than animals ï¿½ belies their claim. It seems that they will support anything that bids fair to hurt, kill, replace, or exterminate White people. (50 minutes)

ï¿½ The number one unreported story of Superstorm Sandy was the looting and violent street crime that spiked while the victims were almost helpless. (1 hour 3 minutes)

ï¿½ Why were out-of-state emergency utility workers turned back at the New Jersey state border? Even though it meant that some people would freeze in their homes for weeks longer, the union bosses didnï¿½t want the volunteers ï¿½horning inï¿½ on ï¿½theirï¿½ overtime. (1 hour 34 minutes)

ï¿½ Statisticians tell us that it is quite rare to find poll questions which consistently get answers within a few per cent. of fifty-fifty. Why, then, have presidential polls near election time ï¿½ for decades! ï¿½ been so close, again and again, to half and half? (1 hour 37 minutes)

ï¿½ Why does the regime in Washington cloak its violation of our rights and its oppression of political dissidents under the Orwellian name ï¿½Homeland Securityï¿½? There are two reasons: 1) The lemmings foolishly believe that the danger to our security comes from somewhere other than Washington, and are eager to give the regime unlimited power to ï¿½protectï¿½ them from the largely imaginary ï¿½terror threatï¿½; and 2) the word ï¿½homelandï¿½ is used since the phrase ï¿½national securityï¿½ has gotten a bad name because of the regimeï¿½s many murderous actions committed in its name. (1 hour 45 minutes)

Donï¿½t be shy ï¿½ check in to amateur radioï¿½s historic Liberty Net every Saturday night ï¿½ on some clear frequency near (usually above) 3950 kHz SSB starting at 10PM Eastern Time. The net has to be frequency-agile to avoid receiving, or causing, interference. And check out our Internet feeds which can help you copy, and communicate with, weak stations.

Kudos and thanks go to Vic, W1WCR, for his decades of hard work for free speech and amateur radio!

I was picking your station up intermittently on 6090khz at 5:50-6:10 UTC on November 11, 2012 from my home North of Victoria, British Columbia, Canada. There was music playing at first which I was receiving quite well, but by ~6:00 when a woman started speaking it was fading in and out pretty badly and I could only hear it once every few seconds.

Where is the transmitter for this station? I would appreciate a QSL card if you do such things. My e-mail is cdndxking@live.com and I can provide my address.

Thank you.

I can almost picture some sort of hood in the old ARRL Handbook for situations like this. A piece of metal that mounts on the back of the female BNC connector to shield that area. Maybe I'm imagining it, or it was for some other connector.

Get a small box and put the connector on it, though the hole where you bring the coax in will not be completely shielded.

Put a male connector on the end, those are meant to fit the end of coax.
Then if you really needed a female there, get a female to female BNC adapter to go between the two parts.

For receiving the really worst part will really be a place to pick up noise if it's not shielded well. That may be an issue depending on where the end is. Near a window, there'll be less pickup than if the not quite shielded end is near noisy equipment.

Hi,

Trying to find a place to purchase a mcx Male connector (right angle or straight)-to a coax pigtail of a few inches-to a bnc.

Really a tough item, apparently.

Amazon sells some, thru a third party, that are by Garmin for their gps receivers. With the postage from these other sellers, getting really pricey.

A few years ago, I found a company site that had all sorts of these pigtails, etc. that they apparently picked up from war surplus and military overstocks.

I'm sure that I bookmarked it, somewhere, but can't find it anymore. Will blame it on old age. Anyone happen to know of anyone like this ?

Any suggestions as to where to get a pigtail like this these days would be appreciated ?

Thanks,
Bob

Weekly Highlights and Forecasts
#
Highlights of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
05 - 11 November 2012

Solar activity ranged from very low to moderate levels. On 05 November, low levels were observed due to a C2 X-ray flare from a unnumbered region around the southeast limb at 05/1839 UTC. Solar activity remained at very low levels until 08 November when a long duration M1 flare was observed at 08/0223 UTC from Region 1611 (N13, L=240, class/area Eso/270 on 09 November). Associated with this event was a Type II radio sweep (784 km/s) and a non-geoeffective coronal mass ejection (CME) off the East limb. Also on 08 November, a full halo backsided CME was observed in SOHO/LASCO imagery from old Region 1598 (S12, L=111). By 09 November, solar activity returned to low levels with a single C1 flare from Region 1604 (N08, L=322, class/area Bx0/010 on 03 November) at 09/0151 UTC. Also on 09 November, a 12 degree long filament, centered near S16E03, erupted at approximately 09/1230 UTC which resulted in an Earth-directed CME first observed in SOHO/LASCO C2 imagery at 09/1524 UTC. By 10 November, multiple low level C-flares were observed including a long duration C2 flare from Region 1608 (S20, L=286, class/area Hrx/020 on 06 November) at 10/0504 UTC. An Earth-directed CME was observed in association with this C2 flare in STEREO A COR2 imagery at 10/0539 UTC and SOHO/LASCO C3 imagery at 10/1054 UTC. By 11 November, solar activity increased to moderate levels due to an M1 flare from Region 1614 (N15, L=193, class/area Dso/110 on 11 November) at 11/0233 UTC with an associated Type II radio sweep (659 km/s).

An enhancement of the greater than 10 MeV proton flux at geosynchronous orbit was observed beginning at approximately 08/1400 UTC likely associated with flare activity and the associated CME from old Region 1598. A peak enhancement of 2.4 pfu was observed at 09/0420 UTC and remained slightly enhanced through the end of the reporting period. No event thresholds were exceeded.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit was at normal background levels throughout the reporting period.

Geomagnetic field activity was at quiet levels until 07 November when a coronal hole high speed stream (CH HSS) moved into geoeffective position. At 06/2119 UTC, the phi component of the interplanetary magnetic field changed from positive to negative with corresponding increases in density, temperature, and speed in ACE spacecraft data indicating a solar sector boundary crossing followed by a co-rotating interaction region and CH HSS. Solar wind speed increased from approximately 300 km/s to a peak of near 525 km/s by 07/1538 UTC. Total field (Bt) reached a maximum of 14 nT at 07/0031 UTC with a maximum deflection of the Bz component southward to -12 nT at 07/0039 UTC. The geomagnetic field responded with quiet to active periods on 07 November. By 08 November, conditions returned to quiet levels and remained that way through the end of the reporting period.

Forecast of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
12 November - 08 December 2012

Solar activity is expected to be low with a chance for M-class flares through 24 November when Region 1614 is due to rotate off the west limb. Very low to low conditions are expected from 12 November until 27 November. On 28 November, and through the end of the forecast period, very low to low conditions with a chance for M-class activity is expected with the return of old Region 1598.

There is a slight chance for a greater than 10 MeV proton event from 28 November through the end of the reporting period due possible flare activity from old Region 1598.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit is expected to be at normal levels on 12 November. Moderate to high levels are expected from 13-24 November due to CME activity and recurrence. Normal levels are expected from 25 November through 03 December. Moderate to high levels are expected from 04-06 December due to CH HSS activity. By 07 December through the end of the forecast period, normal levels are expected.

Geomagnetic field activity is expected to be unsettled to active with a chance for minor storm periods starting around mid-day on 12 November and continuing through 13 November as the 09 and 10 November CMEs are expected to become geoeffective. Unsettled levels are expected on 14 November as CME activity wanes. Mostly quiet conditions are expected from 15-18 November. Quiet to unsettled conditions are possible on 19 November due to a possible solar sector boundary crossing. From 20 November through 02 December, mostly quiet conditions are expected. On 03-04 December, a recurrent CH HSS is expected to become geoeffective causing quiet to unsettled with isolated active conditions. A return to mostly quiet conditions is expected from 05 December through the end of the forecast period.

Hi,

Some folks have mentioned dx.com as a source for electrical "gadgets".

Frankly, never heard of them.

I looked at their website, and they sure do have a zillion items.
Looks like most, if not all, are shipped from overseas, though.

Their Forum has lots of Posts re never have received after many months, etc. But, of course, the ones who had good luck with them probably never Post.

Anyone care to comment re these folks ?

e.g., reputable, good service, reasonable delivery, etc. ?

Caveats ?

Thanks,
Bob

DealExtreme is based in China, and almost everything they sell is either from China, Korea, or Japan.

Unfortunately, shipping anything from China is a hassle unless you lease a giant shipping vessel. Expect delivery time of about a week.

Putting the item(s) into a box seems to take DealExtreme a very long time.
(I've heard of wait times averaging a month.) If they give you a UPS tracking number, it's shipped. Otherwise, assume they haven't even taken the item off of the shelf until you get a tracking number.

You could look on eBay for a seller who has already taken the time to buy the item in bulk and already have it in the U.S.

A doctor in Ireland wants to get off work and go hunting so he approaches his assistant.

SeamusI am going hunting tomorrow and don't want to close the Clinic he says. 'I want you to take care of the clinic and all me patients.'

'Yes sir!' answers Seamus.

The doctor goes hunting returns the following day and asks' So Seamus how was your day?'

Seamus tells him that he took care of three patients. 'The first one had a headache so I gave him Tylenol.'

'Bravo Seamus and the Second one?' asks the doctor.

'The second one had stomach burning and I gave him Maaloxsir' says Seamus.

'Bravo bravo! You're good at this. And what about the third One?' asks the doctor.

'Sit, I was sitting here and suddenly the door opens and a woman bursts Into the room. Quick as a wink she undresses herself tearing off every stitch of clothing including her bra and her panties and lies down on the table. She spreads her legs and shouts' Help me I beg you! It's Been five years since I've seen a man!'

'Thunderin' Lord Jesus Seamus what did you do?' asks the doctor. '

I put drops in her eyes.'

It is very unlikely that a station operator will see ypur post here.
You have to identify the station somehow. To do that you have to figure out the language at least. Did it sound like an African dialect? It could be Radio Nigeria. There are also Spanish or Portugese speaking staions in Brazil on at this time. Check:

http://www.hfskeds.com/skeds/

One of these frequency lists might narrow it down a bit. Then once you ID the station you could send them a reception report. Unless you know some of the language they are speaking, this could be difficult.

4804. Latest Liberty Net via WB4AIO

Liberty Net: November 10, 2012

http://3950.net/2012/11/liberty-net-november-10-2012/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

THIS WEEK, Liberty Net participants and friends were delighted with the return of Long Islandï¿½s N2SAG after almost two weeks of a Third-World-like scenario without fuel, heat, power, or communications. N2IRJ in New Jersey has power, but his station has still not recovered from the one-two punch of the successive storms. The ionosphere went very long this week, too, yet participation was as high as ever and the discussions continued at a very high level on the Net well into the wee hours of the morning.

Here are some topics debated in this weekï¿½s session:

ï¿½ Pat Buchanan was correct when he called the 2012 election the ï¿½end of White Americaï¿½ ï¿½ from this point forward, illegal Somalians and other aliens will vote, and so will the multiple dozens of millions of non-Whites imported ï¿½legallyï¿½ since the fraudulent abrogation of our immigration laws in 1965. Whites will no longer have even the faintest possibility of regaining their country through the ballot box. Only revolution and secession make sense now. (55 minutes)

ï¿½ In the case of the ï¿½affairï¿½ of General Petraeus, do we see the hand of Israeli intelligence at work? (1 hour 27 minutes)

ï¿½ It shouldnï¿½t be hard to figure out why official Washington policy is to encourage the immigration of the lowest quality populations from around the world, and discourage the immigration of the most civilized and highest quality populations. Somebodyï¿½s being genocided, and you have one guess who. (1 hour 49 minutes)

ï¿½ Oh, what a tangled web we weave when we try to use unconstitutional laws written by criminals to force heartless international corporations to ï¿½provide healthcareï¿½ to their hapless workers. Already, co-owned restaurant chains are making some employees split their long hours between two different franchises (say, 30 hours at Red Lobster, and then another 30 hours at the Olive Garden across town) so they can appear to be ï¿½part timeï¿½ and thus avoid the law. (2 hours 10 minutes)

ï¿½ Why does the Washington regime even bother to have a ï¿½debt ceilingï¿½ anyway? They simply violate it brazenly while in the process of endlessly raising it. Meanwhile more and more wealth and property falls into the hands of the interest-collecting (and alien) bankers. (2 hours 15 minutes)

ï¿½ Runaway inflation, massive unemployment, crushing debt, fraudulent elections, and a cultural level lower than even that of the worst sections of Mexico appear to be Americaï¿½s future. It didnï¿½t have to be that way. But our mastersï¿½ decision, made back in the 1940s, to change America into a non-White nation, sealed our fate. (2 hours 27 minutes)

ï¿½ The heads of government in Greece, Italy, and several other European countries are not legitimate leaders, chosen by the people, but are simply bankruptcy trustees working for the bankers. Their job is to enslave the people and transfer their wealth to the banks. Unless we break free of the financial elite, Americaï¿½s future is the same. (2 hours 58 minutes)

ï¿½ If the occupation government can ï¿½legallyï¿½ force you to purchase health insurance, what prevents them from forcibly converting your IRA and retirement plans into worthless government bonds ï¿½ thereby stealing even more of your assets? (2 hours 59 minutes)

Thanks to Marty, N2IRJ, youï¿½re able to listen to the Liberty Net on your computer ï¿½ or download the file and listen on your portable mp3 player. And he and Al, N2SAG operate live feeds and chats during Net times (see the links in the left column of this page) that let you make an end run around jammers and a fickle ionosphere.

Please check in with your call sign, and add your voice to the most exciting net on the amateur bands ï¿½ every Saturday night, starting at 10PM Eastern Time. The frequency varies to avoid causing interference, but is almost always somewhere above 3950 kHz LSB, quite often on 3967.

Our deepest thanks go to W1WCR for his hard work and courage in running the Liberty Net, which is now in its 38th year.

For Sale: I have 3 Superadios for sale. 2 Originals and a SR III, all in good working condition. I have also a GE 3-5268A Superadio Series Boombox. This is no cheap boombox. Quite the contrary. This is a full-featured box with Dolby NR, 5 band EQ, left/right record level with lighted VU meters, 3-way speaker system, lots of inputs/outputs, etc. Fully tested and in great cosmetic condition but could use a detail. I cleaned the tape heads already.

Picture is below of all 3 units. If someone wanted to make a package offer on all of them be my guest, but I was hoping to get at least $100 for the boombox because of the quality and rarity of the unit. I am in the Portland, OR area if someone wanted to pickup locally:

Highlights of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
12 - 18 November 2012

Solar activity ranged from low to high. On 12 November, moderate levels were observed due to a M2 X-ray flare from Region 1613 (S22, L=210, class/area Dso/170 on 12 November) and associated Type II radio sweep (645 km/s) at 12/2328 UTC. Solar activity increased to high levels on 13 November due to a M6 X-ray flare, also from Region 1613, and associated Type II radio sweep (1193 km/s) at 13/0204 UTC.
This region also produced two M2 X-ray flares and an associated 10 cm burst of 220 sfu at 13/2052 UTC, but showed signs it was decreasing in areal coverage. Region 1613 continued its M-class flare activity into 14 November, producing a M1 X-ray flare, but continued to slowly decrease in area. A return to low levels was observed from 15 to 18 November. A C8 flare from Region 1618 (N08, L=136, class/area Eai/90 on 18 November) occurred at 16/1539 UTC with an associated Type II radio sweep (511 km/s) and a non-earth directed coronal mass ejections (CME). A long duration C1 flare from Region 1613 also occurred on 16 November with an associated 24 degree filament eruption centered near S39E22. Another filament eruption was observed from the East limb, as seen in SDO/AIA 304 imagery, but analysis of SOHO/LASCO C2 suggested these eruptions would not be geoeffective. While there were many new CMEs observed over the 7 day period, none were determined to be earth-directed and have had little to no observable impacts.

No greater than 10 MeV proton events were observed at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit was at normal background levels on 12 and 13 November, but reached moderate levels on 14, 15, and 16 November. The week ended with high levels for 17 and 18 November with the maximum value reaching 3160 pfu.

Geomagnetic field activity ranged from quiet to major storm levels.
The week started off at quiet to unsettled levels, but by late 12
```

November to early 13 November, the effects from the two CMEs from 09 and 10 November were being felt. ACE data indicated a shock arrival at 12/2216 UTC and a sudden impulse was observed on earth at 12/2316 UTC (16 nT, as measured by the Boulder USGS magnetometer). The maximum southward component of Bz reached -19.5 nT at 12/2338 UTC, the total IMF reached 22.8 nT at 13/0053 UTC. The solar wind speed, as measured by the ACE spacecraft, reached a peak speed of 504 km/s at 13/0111 UTC. The geomagnetic field responded with unsettled to active levels throughout the day on 13 November, but increased to major storm levels early on 14 November. The increase in activity was caused by prolonged period of negative Bz attributed to a combination of lingering CME effects and a solar sector boundary crossing that occurred at approximately 14/0245 UTC, followed by a negative polarity coronal hole high speed stream (CH HSS). Activity returned to quiet to unsettled levels for the remainder of the week (15 - 18 November).

Forecast of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
19 November - 15 December 2012

Solar activity is expected to be low with a chance for M-class flares through 27 November when Region 1618 is due to rotate off the west limb. Very low to low conditions are expected from 28 November through 05 December. From 06 December to the end of the period, low conditions are expected with a chance for M-class activity with the return of Region 1613.

No greater than 10 MeV proton events are expected at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit is expected to remain at moderate to high levels through 24 November. Normal levels are expected to return from 25 November through 03 December. Moderate to high levels are expected from 04-06 December due to coronal hole high speed stream (CH HSS) activity. Normal levels are again expected to return from 07 December through 13 December. From 14 December to the end of the period, expect moderate to high levels to return with CH HSS activity once again.

Geomagnetic field activity is expected to be mostly quiet through 02 December. Unsettled levels are likely on 03 and 04 December due to a possible solar sector boundary crossing (SSBC) followed by a CH HSS. Mostly quiet levels return from 05 December through the end of the period, except for a chance for unsettled activity on 11 December due to a possible SSBC/CH HSS.

Considering the brutal reality it is intended to depict, the mural is very, very mild.

One of the greatest tragedies ever to befall our civilization was the incursion of the three insane Middle Eastern religions -- and the genes, memes, and mentality they brought with them -- into the sacred territory of Europa.

Peter "blew him off" because Ernie asked a relatively dumb question.
Sure, he's curious, but his question shows a lack of understanding, and makes him look like a n00b.

Northwoods Radio is a pirate; asking about the location of any pirate is not going to get you an answer. At least not an honest or complete answer.

The station announces that they broadcast from the Great Lakes region, and the return address on the QSL was probably a PO Box somewhere. What can you deduce from that?

Barack H. Obama is the 44th President of the United States.

His story is the American story ☐ values from the heartland, a middle-class upbringing in a strong family, hard work and education as the means of getting ahead, and the conviction that a life so blessed should be lived in service to others.

With a father from Kenya and a mother from Kansas,
President Obama was born in Hawaii on August 4, 1961. He was raised with help from his grandfather, who served in Patton's army, and his grandmother, who worked her way up from the secretarial pool to middle management at a bank.

After working his way through college with the help of scholarships and student loans, President Obama moved to Chicago, where he worked with a group of churches to help rebuild communities devastated by the closure of local steel plants.

He went on to attend law school, where he became the first African-American president of the Harvard Law Review. Upon graduation, he returned to Chicago to help lead a voter registration drive, teach constitutional law at the University of Chicago, and remain active in his community.

President Obama's years of public service are based around his unwavering belief in the ability to unite people around a politics of purpose. In the Illinois State Senate, he passed the first major ethics reform in 25 years, cut taxes for working families, and expanded health care for children and their parents. As a United States Senator, he reached across the aisle to pass groundbreaking lobbying reform, lock up the world's most dangerous weapons, and bring transparency to government by putting federal spending online.

He was elected the 44th President of the United States on November 4, 2008, and sworn in on January 20, 2009. He and his wife, Michelle, are the proud parents of two daughters, Malia, 14, and Sasha, 11.

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

IONOSPHERIC CONDITIONS WERE EXCELLENT for an equally excellent Liberty Net session this week. Weï¿½re seeing record downloads of our recordings, and record numbers of listeners to our live feed too. The sharing of real experiences and real knowledge ï¿½ knowledge that some people donï¿½t want you to know ï¿½ is exciting, fulfilling, and fun.

Here are some of the concepts and events discussed during this weekï¿½s session of the Liberty Net:

ï¿½ Was the recent impasse between ï¿½greedy unionsï¿½ and ï¿½greedy Hostessï¿½ engineered specifically to facilitate moving operations to Mexico? If so, get prepared for Wonder Bread and Twinkies that taste like tamales and raw sewage. (14 minutes)

ï¿½ What is needed is a European civilization of sovereign nations, vowed to racial solidarity and self-determination ï¿½ not a phony ï¿½European Unionï¿½ that includes non-Whites and is run by bankers. (21 minutes)

ï¿½ Itï¿½s not just the drunken spending policies of the government that are bankrupting us. Itï¿½s also the severe decline in the genetic quality of the population. People of low genetic quality donï¿½t produce excellence ï¿½ itï¿½s that simple. Look at Vermont: Despite its crazy wild-spending quasi-socialist policies, productivity and quality of life remain high. The reason? Vermontï¿½s population is nearly 100 per cent. of European descent. (50 minutes)

ï¿½ Donï¿½t believe the lie that the Muslims ï¿½hate us for our freedom.ï¿½ Itï¿½s the Washington regime and the Zionists and the oligarchs who hate our freedom ï¿½ and are doing everything in their power to take it away from us. (1 hour 10 minutes)

ï¿½ One of the most preposterous claims made by the phony patriots and warmongers is the claim that Iraq was ruled by a particularly ï¿½wicked dictatorï¿½ and that we are ï¿½free.ï¿½ In Husseinï¿½s Iraq, private individuals were free to bear powerful firearms ï¿½ right on the street! Clearly the government did not fear its own people. Compare this attitude to that of the Washington regime today. (1 hour 49 minutes)

ï¿½ Here are the latest statistics on interracial rape in the United States: 99.9% are Black males raping White women. (2 hours 5 minutes)

ï¿½ The (apparently, to the untrained eye) White elitists donï¿½t care at all about the new ï¿½sportï¿½ among Black gangs, the ï¿½knockout game,ï¿½ in which street punks sucker-punch White pedestrians, with the goal being to knock them out in one blow. Videos of the ï¿½gameï¿½ are then posted on YouTube. (2 hours 15 minutes)

ï¿½ Why do the bankers continuously take a bigger and bigger percentage of our wealth and property as time goes on? Itï¿½s simply the basic structure of fractional reserve banking: When you put a thousand dollars in your checking account, the bankers can ï¿½lendï¿½ out around $900 of it without deducting it from your account. Thus they are allowed to collect interest on money which they create out of nothing. Now you do the math. (2 hours 55 minutes)

Remember, you can actually participate in these Liberty Net discussions by checking in Saturday nights at 10 pm Eastern Time, somewhere above 3950 kHz (lately 3967 has been used most often) on the 75 meter ï¿½phone band, or by logging on to one of the live streams right here at http://3950.net/ or at N2SAGï¿½s Stickam page, linked in the left column of our site. See you on the air!

Informed sources have provided us with a copy of the agenda for tonight's episode of The Great Liberty Nit-Wit-Net. We thought you might like a preview of the exciting topics to be discussed. Here goes.

The Great Liberty Nit-Wit-Net will open with ...
Blah blah blah
Clinton's a crook
Bush is a crook
Gore is a crook
Biden's a crook
They're all crooks
Blah blah blah.

The Great Liberty Nit-Wit-Net will close with ...
Blah blah blah
Clinton's a crook
Bush is a crook
Gore is a crook
Biden's a crook
They're all crooks
Blah blah blah.

Conventional wisdom predicts that no mention will be made of why Chicken Fornicator left The Great Liberty Nit-Wit-Net. That mystery continues to leave us all stunned with puzzlement.

And there you have it, my fellow SWL's. It's just a few hours away now. You have time to make a run for popcorn and your favorite beverage. Perhaps hot chocolate would be good tonight, as the weather might be a little chilly in many places.

The excitement will begin at 10pm eastern. Somewhere between 3950 and 3975 kc, LSB. Get there early before the good seats are taken.

I stopped the front wheels of my van on that line, turned off the ignition, let off the brake pedal and my van appeared to roll a couple of feet up the hill. It is only an optical illusion is what it T'IS.

Dey wuz sleepin' real good.
ï¿½
We hunged up our stockings
And hoped like de heck
That ol' Sanna Claus
Be bringin' our chek!
ï¿½
All o' de fambly
Wuz layin' in de beds
While Ripple and Thunderbird Dance tru dey heads.
ï¿½
I passed out in de flo
Right next to my maw
When I heard sech a fuss, I thunk
"It must be de law!"
ï¿½
I looked out thru de bars
What covered my doe
Spectin' de sheriff
Wif a warrant fo sho!
ï¿½
And what did I see?
I said, "Lawd, look at dat!"
Ther' wuz a huge watta-melon Pulled by giant warf rats!
ï¿½
Now ober all de years
Sanna Claus, he be white
But, looks like us bros Gets a black Sanna dis night.
ï¿½
Faster dan a po'lees car;
My home boy, he came.
He whupped on dem warf rats
And called dem by name!
ï¿½
On Leroy, on 'lonzo,
And on Willie Lee,
On Saphire, on Chenequa; Dey wuz a site to see!

ï¿½
As he landed dat watta-melon
Out der in de skreet
I knowed fo sho
Da damndest site I ebber did see!
ï¿½
He didn't go down no chimbley;
He picked da lock on my doe.
And I sez to myself,
"Shit, he done dis befoe!"
ï¿½
He had dis big bag
Full of prezents I 'spect
Wid Air Jordans and fake gold
To wear 'roun my neck.
ï¿½
But he left no good prezents;
just started stealin' my shit.
Got my drugs, got my guns,
Even got my burglar's kit!
ï¿½
Wit my stuff in de bag
Out da window he flewed
I woulda tried to catch him
But he stole my knife too!
ï¿½
He jumped on dat watta-melon
An' whipped out a switch
He wuz gone in a secon',

Highlights of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
19 - 25 November 2012

Solar activity ranged from very low to moderate levels. The summary period started out at low levels but changed on day two as Region 1618 (N08, L=135, class/area Ekc/450 millionths on 23 November) and Region 1612 (N09, L=228, class/area Hsx/100 millionths on 12 November) both produced M-class x-ray events. Region 1612 produced an M1 solar flare at 20/1241 UTC with multiple discrete radio frequency bursts. Around the same time, h-alpha imagery indicated multiple filament channel eruptions. LASCO C2/C3 imagery supported a partially Earth directed CME. Region 1618 followed this event with an M1/Sn solar flare at 20/1928 UTC. Associated with this flare were several discrete radio frequency bursts. LASCO C2/C3 imagery indicated a CME, however further analysis indicated that this would not be Earth directed. On 21 November, Region 1618 continued to produce M-class solar flares, with an M1/1n solar flare at 21/0656 UTC and an M3 x-ray event at 21/1530 UTC. Both of these events had Type II and Type IV radio sweeps associated with them. Imagery once again supported another Earth directed CME. Later on 21 November, a large filament erupted off the north-east limb. Location and imagery suggested this CME would not be Earth directed. Activity declined to very low levels on 22 November. Region 1618 remained a magnetically complex region during this time, however simplification in the leader spots was observed. Low levels prevailed throughout the summary period with Region 1618 producing the occasional C-class events. On 23 November, a large filament eruption was observed in the southwest quadrant of the solar disk. The associated CME was determined to have an Earth directed component. Towards the end of the summary period, Region 1620 (S13, L=92, class/area Hax/090 millionths on 23 November) started to evolve and produce C-class activity. At the end of the period, Region 1620 was magnetically classified as a beta-gamma.

No proton events were observed at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit was high levels on 19, 22 and 23 November. The remaining days were at normal to moderate levels.

Geomagnetic field activity was at quiet to active levels. The summary period began at quiet levels with solar wind speed, as measured by the ACE spacecraft, hovering around 400 km/s. On 20 November, an increase in solar wind speed to around 460 km/s was observed, with sustained periods of the negative Bz component of the (Interplanetary Magnetic Field) IMF. This observed change in the solar wind parameters help drive unsettled to active levels late on 20 November and early into 21 November. Predominantly quiet levels prevailed until late on 23 November when solar wind observations indicated the arrival of a CME. At the ACE spacecraft, solar wind speeds increased from 320km/s - 420 km/s with Bt of the IMF increasing to around 17 nT. As the CME arrived at Earth, an increase to active levels was observed. As CME effects continued on to 24 November, active to quiet levels were observed with isolated minor to major storm periods observed at high latitudes. As CME effects waned, quiet level prevailed from late on 24 November throughout the rest of the summary period. Initial analysis and data suggested this was the CME from 20 November, however as the CME progressed, data suggested the incoming CMEs might have merged into this one event.

Forecast of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
26 November - 22 December 2012

Solar activity is expected to be at low levels with a chance for M-class flares from 26 November - 01 December as Regions 1620 and 1618 evolve and rotate off the visible disk. A decrease to low levels is forecast from 02 - 04 December. An increase to low levels with a slight chance for M-class flares is expected for the remainder of the period as Regions 1612, 1618, and 1620 return.

No proton events are expected at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit is expected to be at normal to moderate levels from 26 November - 05 December, 08- 11 December, and 19-22 December. High levels are expected at all other times due to coronal hole high speed stream activity.

Geomagnetic field activity is expected to be at quiet to active levels. The forecast period is expected to begin at predominantly quiet levels. On 27 - 29 November, an increase to quiet to active levels is expected as the CME from 23 November is expected to become geoeffective. From 30 November through 05 December, quiet to unsettled levels are expected in response to multiple coronal hole high speed streams. A return to quiet levels is expected from 06-10 December. Another increase to quiet to unsettled levels is expected on 11-15 December due to recurrent coronal hole high speed streams. A return to quiet levels is expected for the remainder of the period.

I am receiving the LYQ beacon on 529 khZ in Central Florida tonight fairly strong on a true crystal radio- no amps or anything except the diode. I have heard it on several occasions recently.

A man went to a barber for a trim and a shave. While the barber was lathering the man up for his shave, the man told the barber that he always has a hard time getting a close shave on his cheeks.

The barber pulled a small wooden ball out of this cabinet drawer. Place this small ball between your cheek and gum on the right side and I can give you a close shave."

The man did this, and the barber shaved the right side of his face. "Wow!" exclaimed the man, "that is great!"

He put the ball in the left side of his mouth, in anticipation of the Barber's' next move and with muffled voice asked, "But what happens if I accidently swallow the ball?"

The barber said, "Just bring it back the next day,. .. that's what the last guy did."

4905. anyone familiar with Kenwood RZ-1 and a failure mode?

The Kenwood RZ-1 was a great little car radio sized unit which fit into a standard DIN frame and received 500 khz through 905 mhz. Oh, and while no longer useful, even had a video output...

I recently found mine which had been in a box for, umm, well let's just say I'd have to take off my shoes to count that high (and you don't want to be anywhere near me if I do that...) years.

It still functions well, except for one very big problem.
The display, on a scale of one to ten, is about 0.5. In other words, just about completely unlit.

Now what I'm hoping is that this can be fixed by, for example, replacing the "lifetime" battery that's buried somewhere in the unit. Or possibly some other plausable bit of elbow grease.

Anyone have any suggestions or ideas?

Thanks muchly.

What you will need to do with that radio (as I had to do with mine when I purchased it a few years ago), is to pull the display apart and replace the little grain-of-rice lamps that sit in behind it to light the display. It's not as difficult as it may sound, actually pretty simple.

Send it back to a authorized Kenwood repair center and have it repaired..

The memory battery would have nothing to do with the display brightness.

Most radios uses some type of driver / driver chip, and the display could be LCD / LED etc etc etc......

Handy Shortwave Chart
Bill McFadden
billmc@agora.rdrop.com

Band allocations and time zone conversions for the USA. Includes broadcast bands used outside the USA. For multi-use bands, primary usage is shown.
Some stations operate outside official bands. Information is from Oct 2008
FCC rules and Sep 2009 NTIA manual, see Chapter 4 of:
http://www.ntia.doc.gov/osmhome/redbook/redbook.html

Frequencies are in kHz. Usual spacing in shortwave broadcast bands is 5 kHz. Frequencies above 10000 kHz tend to propagate better during the day;
frequencies below 10000 kHz tend to propagate better at night.

Please e-mail suggestions and corrections to billmc@agora.rdrop.com.

Phone line as SW antenna

WARNINGS AND DISCLAIMERS

Connecting unapproved devices to phone lines may be illegal in your area.
Telephone lines present a potential shock hazard. Do not use this antenna for transmitting. Use at your own risk.

INTRODUCTION

This article describes how to use a phone line as a shortwave receiving antenna. Performance will vary depending on the kind of phone line you have. Overhead lines usually make okay antennas, while underground lines | usually don't. Phone lines carrying DSL service may be unsuitable because | DSL operates over a wide spectrum. A phone line antenna will generally pick up more power line noise than a dedicated antenna, so don't expect to | use it for DX work. Nevertheless, I found that it outperformed the
| telescopic whip antennas built into many portables.

A reader sent in this suggestion: If you're concerned about connecting the phone line directly to the receiver, try wrapping the phone cord several times around the receiver's telescopic whip antenna instead.
Performance may not be as good as a direct connection, but it will probably be better than the whip antenna by itself.

Someone else wrote asking about lightning protection. I haven't thought much about it because thunderstorms are rare in my area. Most phone lines have lightning arrestors on them where they enter the house, but the lightning arrestors may pass enough energy during a lightning strike damage a receiver. My suggestion is to disconnect the antenna when not in use if you experience frequent thunderstorms.

HOW TO DO IT

The simplest connection is a single capacitor between the phone line and receiver. The capacitor eliminates all phone line voltages, including | ringing, so that they will not harm the receiver. The capacitor should
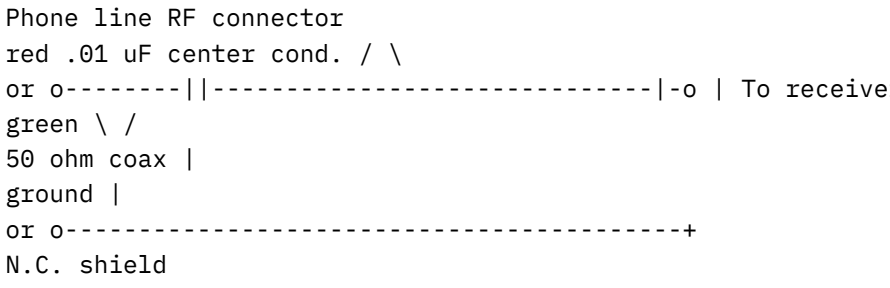
| be rated 250 volts or higher.



N.C. = no connect. I originally connected the phone line ground (yellow wire) to this terminal, but reception was better without it (if you do this, play it safe and put a .01 uF capacitor in series). If another ground is available, you can connect it to this terminal.

If you are picking up local AM or FM radio stations on the shortwave bands, it is likely that your receiver is overloaded. Inexpensive and portable receivers usually lack the filtering needed to eliminate this interference, but you can make your own filters. Filters can also be | purchased from shortwave dealers (see below for recommendations).

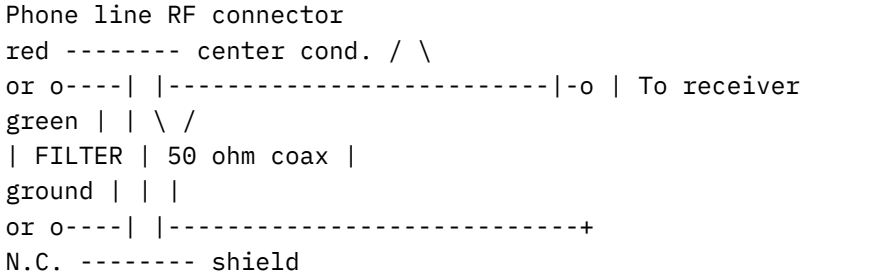
A high-pass filter can be used to remove signals below the shortwave bands. It rejects interference from local AM stations and presents a high impedance to the phone line at audio frequencies so that the phone line remains balanced.

A low-pass filter can be used to remove signals above the shortwave bands. It rejects interference from FM and TV stations, as well as VHF 2-way radio transmitters. If you use both filters, connect the output of the first filter to the input of the second (don't forget to connect their ground terminals together). It doesn't matter which filter is connected first.

These filters also work well with random wire antennas. Just connect the antenna in place of the phone line.

The filter(s) should be connected to the phone line in this manner:



| RECOMMENDED FILTERS
| If you don't want to make your own filters, the following have good | performance, are well-built and affordable:
|
| Model 400 BCB interference filter (3.5 MHz highpass)
| http://www.iceradioproducts.com/filtersrf.html#bcb
|

| Model 420 HF lowpass filter (30 MHz lowpass)
| http://www.iceradioproducts.com/filtersrf.html#3
| (scroll down a bit to see the model 420)
|
| If you have a random-wire antenna, the following unit will provide | impedance matching and lightning protection (connect antenna to 450-ohm | terminal):
|
| Model 182A beverage matching unit
| http://www.iceradioproducts.com/reconly.html#Beverage Matching

FILTER PLANS

The original credit for the high-pass and low-pass filters goes to Paul Blumstein and John Shalamskas, respectively. Edited versions of their articles are included here:

Date: 09 Jan 91 00:54:08 GMT
From: paulb@harley.TTI.COM (Paul Blumstein)
Subject: BC Band Hi-Pass Filter

The following ascii-schematic diagram is a high pass filter that will filter out Broadcast Band (MW) stations. I found it a great boon to my shortwave listening since local MW stations overload my ATS-803A front end & appear in SW, especially with a long antenna.

If you remember my antenna saga, I went from 50 feet to 150 feet & had overload problems causing me to cut back to 50 feet. (Even at 50 feet, I still have some MW interference). I took the advice of Gary Coffman and looked up filters in the ARRL Handbook. With the filter in place, I intend to try to increase my antenna length again.

Anywho, here is the filter, for interested parties.

```
--------||---+----||-----+----||-----------
} }
{ {
} }
-------------+-----------+-----------------
```

The outer capacitors are 1500 pf ceramic disks.
The inner capacitor is 820 pf ceramic disk.
The squiggly things are coils (two total). Each one is 2.7 uh.
(a close value will do).

Subject: Re: BC Band Hi-Pass Filter

I built the filter that Paul Blumstein posted recently and measured it on a gain-phase analyzer. Here are its characteristics:

100 kHz -120dB
500 kHz -68dB

1000 kHz -38dB
1600 kHz -15dB
2100 kHz -3dB

The source and load impedances were 50 ohms. Because the filter has five elements, the attenuation is 30dB per octave. The measurements confirmed this.

This filter seems to be a good compromise between interference attenuation and passband response. There is very little attenuation in the 120m band and above. It could use a little more attenuation at the upper end of MW, which could be done with more stages or a higher cutoff frequency. Alternatively, you could build two of these filters and put them in series. (Since two 1500pF capacitors in series are really 750pF, you could eliminate one cap.)

Just for fun, I put 470 ohms in series with the input to see how the filter performed with an antenna mismatch. The response was:

100 kHz -105dB
500 kHz -60dB
1000 kHz -35dB
1600 kHz -15dB
2300 kHz -3dB

These figures are normalized to the passband response of -15dB, which is due to the impedance mismatch between the source and load and would have been there without the filter. Hence, the filter works almost as well in spite of the mismatch, which is good news to those who use long-wire antennas.

Subject: Construction of filters for SW reception

Several people have asked for construction details of the filters I built for my DX-440.

The high-pass filter helped some, but in my location the VHF/UHF broadcasters are also causing problems. So, I dug out the ARRL handbook and chose a 7-element Chebyshev low-pass design that is -3 dB at 35 MHz, -20 dB at 43 MHz, and -50 dB at 64 MHz (all calculated; it works well in practice!)

chassis ground

I had to do a little more improvising at this point. I used .33 uH instead of .36, and .66 uH instead of .42, but it works fine.

The 5-lug terminal strips were perfect for these circuits, since there are 4 lugs plus a grounded lug. All "ground" connections go to the lug that is mounted to the chassis, and the other 4 lugs are used for each of the connections on the signal line. One terminal strip is used per filter. Since both filters were necessary to clean up the hash, I am going to put them both into one box when I get the time.

The proper way to connect them is in series, i.e.

There is no difference between ends. They are "bilateral" which means you can't possibly hook them up backwards. (In the above schematics, left and right ends are interchangeable.)

COIL WINDING

You can make the coils yourself using this formula:

L = 0.2 * B^2 * N^2 / (3B + 9A + 10C)

L is the inductance, in uH
A is the length of the coil, in inches
B is the mean diameter of the coil, in inches
C is the diameter of the wire, in inches
N is the number of turns

For small wire, you can assume C = 0.

Parts for the filters can be obtained from the following source:

Hi,

As apparently WWV doesn't transmit up that high in freq., what are some good "freq. standard" signals to use for calibration in the vhf/uhf ranges ?

Thanks,

One thing remains constant - every week The Great Liberty Nit-Wit-Net brings some new and never before discussed topics to 75 meters. Where else can you go and be totally blind-sided week after week with stuff never before heard on the radio waves. Let us proceed with a recap of the latest episode.

This past week the Great Liberty Nit-Wit-Net opened with ...
Blah blah blah
Clinton's a crook
Bush is a crook
Gore is a crook
Biden's a crook
They're all crooks
Blah blah blah.

The Great Liberty Nit-Wit-Net closed with ...
Blah blah blah
Clinton's a crook
Bush is a crook
Gore is a crook
Biden's a crook
They're all crooks
Blah blah blah.

Sadly it's not the same any more, due to the demise of Sir Sidney. It was good times when he would regale The Great Liberty Nit-Wit-Net with his classic ..

"Moan faggots moan - They're all a bunch of Nazi Faggots."

And there you have it.

One thing remains constant, however.
Kevin continues to leave us in the dark as to why Chicken Fornicator left The Great Liberty Nit-Wit-Net.

Tune in later tonight - who knows what topics will arise in the upcoming episode of The Great Liberty Nit-Wit-Net. So be there or be square - 3950 - 3975 kc, LSB. Bring a LARGE bowl of popcorn and a HUGE cup of Co-Cola because we all know The Great Liberty Nit-WIt-Net can go into the wee hours.

THE 75 METER BAND has been going very long, which enhances reception of the more distant Liberty Net participants, but also sometimes makes the stations from nearby states weaker. Last week, a DRM broadcast from Europe caused some interference, too. (Now that HF usage is down, why canï¿½t amateurs have the whole 75 meter band worldwide? Why canï¿½t the 75 meter broadcasters in Europe move to 90 meters, as many US broadcasters have done?) But frequency agility saved the day, and the net at one point even used its old traditional frequency of 3950 kHz. Listen: Liberty Net 11/24

ï¿½ Will America be able to stay out of the emerging inter-Arab and Arab-Jewish wars that are developing in the Middle East? Since the Jewish lobby virtually controls both major ï¿½Americanï¿½ parties, donï¿½t count on it. (14 minutes)

ï¿½ Evidence is accumulating that illegal aliens in many jurisdictions were able to vote in the recent election merely by producing a recent utility bill. This is undermining belief in the Washington regimeï¿½s legitimacy ï¿½ and thatï¿½s a good thing. (30 minutes)

ï¿½ Timothy Geithner has now openly revealed what the bankersï¿½ agenda has been all along: He stated that there should be no ï¿½ceilingï¿½ for government debt ï¿½ even infinite debt should be allowed. (35 minutes)

ï¿½ Have you ever noticed that Israel repeatedly gets into minor shooting wars with mouse-sized adversaries, after which Uncle Sap ï¿½brokers a peace dealï¿½ ï¿½ under which Israel and Israel-friendly Arabs get billions of US taxpayer dollars, and some smiling liar US politicians get nominated for Nobel Prizes? (47 minutes)

ï¿½ If we had race-based citizenship ï¿½ as we used to have only a few decades ago ï¿½ there would be no need for endless privacy-invading ï¿½real IDï¿½ and security laws, and weï¿½d be a lot safer, too. (1 hour 13 minutes)

ï¿½ Someone in the peanut gallery is puzzled because the Liberty Net was against the unspeakable George Bush, ï¿½but now that a Democrat got in, youï¿½re against him too.ï¿½ The commenter is trapped by his ignorant acceptance of the two-party paradigm, as if Democrats and Republicans were the only choices. In reality, they are not choices at all. Both parties are controlled by the same oligarchs from behind the scenes. (1 hour 15 minutes)

ï¿½ Why are the regimes in all the formerly White countries ï¿½ with the exception of Russia ï¿½ working full time to replace and effectively exterminate White people? (2 hours 6 minutes)

ï¿½ The oligarchs and the underclass have a lot in common. Theyï¿½re both parasites. So naturally theyï¿½re allies. What is needed is a rebellion of the parasitesï¿½ host. (2 hours 18 minutes)

ï¿½ Every decent person wants the rotten System in Washington to collapse. But that would cause some hardships. You and your family can survive the interregnum better by either growing your own food or buying shares in a local agricultural co-op. (5 hours 40 minutes)

Remember that you can receive the Liberty Net in the area of 3950 kHz and above every Saturday night at 10PM Eastern Time ï¿½ or listen live on the Internet. And you can listen at your leisure via the mp3 files posted here at http://3950.net every week. Each Saturday nightï¿½s mp3 file is usually posted on the next morning ï¿½ Sunday ï¿½ and will be visible that day in the upper right column of this site.

Once again, thanks to W1WCR for running this important and historic discussion net ï¿½ now in its 38th year ï¿½ and thanks also to N2IRJ for making these recordings available.

(47 minutes)

ï¿½ If we had race-based citizenship ï¿½ as we used to have only a few decades ago ï¿½ there would be no need for endless privacy-invading ï¿½real IDï¿½ and security laws, and weï¿½d be a lot safer, too. (1 hour 13 minutes)

ï¿½ Someone in the peanut gallery is puzzled because the Liberty Net was against the unspeakable George Bush, ï¿½but now that a Democrat got in, youï¿½re against him too.ï¿½ The commenter is trapped by his ignorant acceptance of the two-party paradigm, as if Democrats and Republicans were the only choices. In reality, they are not choices at all. Both parties are controlled by the same oligarchs from behind the scenes. (1 hour 15 minutes)

ï¿½ Why are the regimes in all the formerly White countries ï¿½ with the exception of Russia ï¿½ working full time to replace and effectively exterminate White people? (2 hours 6 minutes)

ï¿½ The oligarchs and the underclass have a lot in common. Theyï¿½re both parasites. So naturally theyï¿½re allies. What is needed is a rebellion of the parasitesï¿½ host. (2 hours 18 minutes)

ï¿½ Every decent person wants the rotten System in Washington to collapse. But that would cause some hardships. You and your family can survive the interregnum better by either growing your own food or buying shares in a local agricultural co-op. (5 hours 40 minutes)

Remember that you can receive the Liberty Net in the area of 3950 kHz and above every Saturday night at 10PM Eastern Time ï¿½ or listen live on the Internet. And you can listen at your leisure via the mp3 files posted here at http://3950.net every week. Each Saturday nightï¿½s mp3 file is usually posted on the next morning ï¿½ Sunday ï¿½ and will be visible that day in the upper right column of this site.

Once again, thanks to W1WCR for running this important and historic discussion net ï¿½ now in its 38th year ï¿½ and thanks also to N2IRJ for making these recordings available.

Don't think there are ANY time/frequency standards transmitted above 30 MHz. Need more info on this subject...

Hello all,

I have just acquired a extremely good condition S-38D that someone removed the original dial pointers and replaced them with ones made from an aluminum Coke can! The dial cords are original so I have no earthly idea what they were thinking! I you have a junker set and would like to part with pointers please email me. This radio is for my personal collection and not for sale.

What could be used as frequency standard "plucked from VHF" is the TV line frequency.
I'm not sure if like in Europe, all TV stations in the US would be equally useful but if you enter this search string in Google

"Calibration of high precision oscillators using the TV line frequency as a frequency standard"
-----
you get several links that suggest it might be the case.

During the analog TV days maybe it was possible, but not now. I doubt if it could be done now at all...at least in the US. Best frequency standards are at low frequencies,such as 60KHz or even lower.

Highlights of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
26 November - 02 December 2012

Solar activity reached moderate levels this week with a total of three M-class events, two of which came from Region 1620 (S12, L=97, class/area=Ekc/420 on 28 November). This region appeared on 20 November and remained relatively small and stable for the first six days. On 26 November, it more than quadrupled in size (to 240 mil) and almost doubled in spot count (to 23). The following day it produced the first of two M-class events, an M1/Sf on 27/2126 UTC.
By this time it had evolved to a beta-gamma-delta magnetic configuration which it would maintain for the following two days.
The rapid growth continued and Region 1620 reached 420 mils on 28 November when it produced an M2/1f event at 2136 UTC. Following this second M-class event, the region began to decay and produced only occasional C-class events until it crossed the west limb on 01 December.

The remaining M-class flare was attributed to Region 1618 (N08, L=135, class/area=Ekc/450 on 23 November). This region produced three M-class flares in the week prior. This week it only managed to produce one, an M1/Sf on 27 November at 1557 UTC. By this time it had shrunk to 170 millionths but retained its beta-gamma-delta magnetic configuration. It rotated around the west limb the next day.

The largest region on the disk this week was Region 1623 (N09, L=340, class/area=Eko/450 on 28 November). It produced a C5/Sf flare on 29/1205 UTC and four other C-flares as its magnetic complexity increased to a beta-gamma configuration. It retained this complexity for the next three days but failed to produce any more C-flares.
Nearby, Region 1625 (N15, L=338, class/area=Dso/230 on 29 November) managed to produce six unremarkable C-flares on its first day. The remaining regions during the week were relatively quiescent.
```

No proton events were observed at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit was at normal to moderate levels all week.

Geomagnetic field activity was quiet all week with the exception of two unsettled periods. The first was during the 00-03 synoptic period on 26 November most likely associated with a CME that erupted on 23 November. A weak interplanetary shock was observed at the ACE spacecraft at 26/0437 UTC followed by an 8nT sudden impulse at the Boulder magnetometer at 26/0514 UTC. Conditions quickly returned to quiet levels. The second unsettled period was early on 02 December associated with co-rotating interaction region.

Forecast of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
03 December - 29 December 2012

Solar activity is expected to be at low levels with a chance of isolated M-class flares through the entire forecast period (03-29 December).

No proton events are expected at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit is expected to be at normal levels except during 14-21 December following the onset of a coronal hole high speed stream on 11 December and sustained by another stream which is expected to become geoeffective on 14 December.

Geomagnetic field activity is expected to be at quiet levels for the majority of the forecast period. Unsettled to potentially active levels are expected on 11-12, 14, and 29 December associated with recurrent high speed solar wind streams.

As far as I can remember, the time limit to end all analogue TV transmissions in the US is somewhere in 2015 but if none are left already it's a pity.
However WWVB at 60 KHz now is modulated in phase just like happened with many stations in Europe so you can forget to lock a 10MHz VCXO to the WWVB carrier, to measure the drift of any XTO, even oven controlled ones. I looked up available time & frequency stations and unless living close enough to Europe, no luck: http://ac6v.com/standard.htm

4955. Why are so many Women converting to Islam?

Newsgroup: rec.radio.shortwave

Source record: 247730

Why are so many Women converting to Islam?

According to "The Plain Truth", February 1984, in its 50 Year Anniversary Issue, quoting from the "World Almanac and Book of Facts 1935" and "Reader's Digest Almanac and Yearbook 1983", between 1934 and 1984.

Christianity increased 47%
World Population increased 136%
Islam increased 235%

100,000 people per year in America alone, are converting to Islam. For every 1 male convert to Islam, 4 females convert to Islam.
They're discovering the FACTS and not basing their decisions on biased media. They realise they deserve to know the complete unadulterated truth.

1. The Bible Convicts Women as the original Sinners (ie. Eve picking from the forbidden tree){Genesis 2:4-3:24}.

The Koran Clarifies it was Adam Not Eve {Koran 7:19-25}

2. The Bible says "The Birth of a Daughter is a loss" {Ecclesiasticus 22:3}.

The Koran says both are an Equal Blessing {Koran 42:49}

3. The Bible forbids women from speaking in church {I Corinthians 14:34-35}.

The Koran says women can argue with the Prophet {58:1}

4. In the Bible, divorced Women are Labeled as an Adulteress, not men {Matthew 5:31-32}

The Koran does Not have Biblical double standards{Koran 30:21}

5. In The Bible, widows and sisters do not inherit Any property or wealth, only men do {Numbers 27:1-11}

The Koran abolished this male greed {Koran 4:22} and God protects all.

6. The Bible Allows Multiple Wives {I Kings 11:3}

In The Koran, God limits the number to 4 only under certain situations (with the wife's permission)and prefers you marry only one wife {Koran 4:3} The Koran gives the woman the right to choose who to marry.

7. "If a man happens to meet a virgin who is not pledged to be married and rapes her and they are discovered, he shall pay the girl's father fifty shekels of silver. He must marry the girl, for he has violated her. He can never divorce her as long as he lives" {Deuteronomy 22:28-30}

One must ask a simple question here, who is really punished, the man who raped the woman or the woman who was raped? According to the Bible, you have to spend the rest of your life with the man who raped you.

The Prophet Muhammad Says {Volume 9, Book 86, Number 101} Narrated by Aisha:"It is essential to have the consent of a virgin (for the marriage)".

Would the Non-Muslim men reading this prefer the Women they know to be Christian or Muslim?

8. The Bible also asks women to wear veils as in Islam {I Corinthians 11:3-10}

9. Women were given rights to Vote less than a 100 years ago in the (US), while the Koran gave women voting rights almost 1,500 years ago.

We don't have any analog tv broadcasting since 2009 over here,in NYC. If WWV and its sisters like WWVB or WWVH cannot be used due to the phase modulation- I think the Canadian CHU still uses simple AM modulation or something very close to it.

The receiver already has a pointer, made from a Coke can. If he wanted non-original, he'd keep that. But he wants original, which means whatever was used there in the first place, not some makeshift like the bit of Coke can.

The problem with CHU is that it's not on an exact MHz frequency, so you won't be able to adjust your 100KHz calibrator to that

I suppose it matters less now since you can easily divide 10MHz or 100KHz down to 10KHz that will have a harmonic on CHU's frequencies, but it used to be a big issue, and people who rely on 100KHz calibrators are likely those unwilling to mod the receiver to get 10KHz.

But of course, if you're using a 100KHz calibrator, some phase modulation isn't likely to be a problem.

Wait a minute. I WWV and WWVH have phase modulation (excrpt whatever comes from propagation), it's WWVB that was mentioned. For a lot of purposes, WWV is good enough, and on exact multiples of 1 MHz. The issue is that due to propagation, it comes and goes, and can pick up distortion along the way. But for those who were beating their 100KHz or such calibrators against the carrier, it was good enough. The ability to beat absolutely was hindered by the frequecy response of the receiver (which made it harder to hear the really low beats) and once the beat is really slow, it takes time to figure out whether you are too fast or too slow.

Which is why WWVB was seen as the frequency standard ifyou needed something better. If you could receiver the signal, you'd have a reliable frequency standard, since it was groundwave (not bouncing off the ionosphere where other issues come in). For a long time, WWVB was only a frequency standard, initially that's all it was, then of course the decoders to get the time took up so much circuitry that you wouldn't see clocks that sync'ed up except in the lab. It's only the last ten or so years where you could cheaply get "atomic clocks" and the time became important. (And despite the low frequencies, WWVB was used because the signal was always there, unlike WWV where the signal would fade. The "World's Most Accurate Clock" from Heathkit used WWV, but apparently adjusted the internal clock so it even kept good accuracy when WWV was not receivable.)

Technically with the right receiver, you could get a 60KHz frequency out of a WWVB receiver that was really accurate, while trying that with WWV would fail due to fading and such. No transfer oscillator need, that 100KHz calibrator, though 60KHz isn't too useful a frequency reference in itself.

The phase modulation on WWVB is recent, like sometime this fall. It reflects the demand for all those "atomic clocks" since it's a secondary method of sending the time on the carrier. Just like FM is noise-free because you can put limiters in, the same with phase modulation, and in plces that are at the farther edges of WWVB's pattern, phase modulation would be more distinct since it won't be confused by interference from other things like switching supplies that are generating "am noise".

I guess they've decided that "atomic clocks" in every household are more important than a frequency standard, and at least nowadays there are other methods to get accurate frequency, though less so for the hobbyist.

Let's not forget all those ads in the magazines for Hammarlund recievers where crystal manufacturers and broadcast station engineers would plug the receivers for profeesional use. Up until a certain time, WWV and WWVB was used by a lot more people as a frequency standard (and WWVB for those who needed something more), and they'd use off the shelf shortwave receivers for that.

Then it become possible to get an expensive but still within reach Cesium standard. Who can forget that wave of articles in the seventies about getting a frequency standard from the color subcarrier frequency in color tv? It wa accurate because it was set by the cesium standard at the network. ANd then it soon faded because local stations started getting their own cesium standards, and they weren't necessarily calibrated to the extent of the ones at the network. They stopped using the network standard. I may have garbled this, but there wa a point when it became possible to get some standard that was better than a crystal oscillator but wasn't as absolute as the atomic clock at the time stations.

The point is that the time stations became less important with time. Yes, they are still fun and useful for the hobbyist, and WWVB is certainly getting much more use via all those home "atomic clocks" than when it was "merely' a frequency standard, but professional needs are being met other ways (an indeed, professional needs often need something better now).

Wikipedia says that there will be no phase modulation of WWVB for a period each day, at 7 and 1900 UTC, it says for 30 minutes but it's not clear if that's each time or 15 minutes each time. So you have some time with an accurate frequency source, but not something that can be locked too constantly.

Just like FM is noise-free because you can put limiters in, the same with phase modulation, and in plces that are at the farther edges of WWVB's pattern, phase modulation would be more distinct since it won't be confused by interference from other things like switching supplies that are generating "am noise".

Very much so. WWV +CHU+ several others are still broadcasting around the clock. What about GPS signals? They must be extremely accurate,considering how many uses this service provides worlwide.

I think that's where a lot of it in non-hobby circles (and for peole who wnat accuracy for its own sake, like those participating in the ARRL Frequency Measuring Tests, if they still have those) has gone.

After I posted, I got curious, and the phase modulation on WWVB, while in testing for a while, only became standard at the end of the October. But in doing a search, I found one company that made frequency standards that locked to WWVB, and it posted a warning, yet admits that since they haven't made any of those in some time, GPS-based frequency standards being the new route, the issue is less relevant.

Someone else, who had a home made WWVB receiver and crystal oscillator locked to it, he mentions adding a modification where he doubles the frequency of the amplified WWVB signal and then compares that with the old reference now doubled, and it works fine. I can see that, it's reminiscenet of a wave of DSB adapters in the ham magazines in the seventies, where they fed the incoming signal into a 2X multiplier and then divided that down by 2, which took out any problems, and the signal divided by 2 was the "bfo".

The phase modulation used by WWVB is a bit messy. The value of 180 deg for all data would be OK because multiplying the signal with itself would remove the modulation. Unfortunately, the station ID uses 45 deg, see http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/WWVB
CHU might be the better alternative then, that the frequencies in use aren't a multiple of 100 KHz or 1 MHz isn't a problem. With some creative calculation I managed to lock both 153 KHz and 77.5 KHz to a 10 MHz VCXO so this case is unlikely to be much different. 14670 and 7335 KHz would have my preference as the first is twice the second so one receiver could easily use both signals.

Except you seemed to be paying attention to the village idiot rather than the original post. He chimes in, as he has to do, and adds nothing to the solution, yet distracts the thread so you think it's about finding any old substitute.

Arrah, it was a Silvertone radio. Airline name belonged to Montgomery Ward stores/company. Are we confused yet? It was a common looking ordinary radio/dark brown bakelite plastic cabinet table model radio. My mom was a sales clerk at the local Jackson Sears & Roebuck store. Ten percent off the regular store prices.

My first serious shortwave was an Airline with a 12 inch 350Vdc speaker that threw me across my room once. It had a pointer and a Magic Eye. You could get every AM station in the world on it.

Thanks, I didn't know that, having used European stations for decades.
Time to buy a rubidium based frequency standard (made in China of course) then as that's both more precise and cheaper than a GPS based solution.

I doubt it's more precise than GPS, which uses several "atomic" clocks, but cheaper it is.

Excellent article and good news that the dreaded +/- 45 deg phase shift will disappear. As the signal here in Panama can be received as well, it means I can use it in a design for a frequency standard adapted to a very low signal, based on the same (rather successful) principle I used in Europe.

We have been informed by the readers of rec.radio.shortwave that a |
recent (2008) attempt to update these documents and post them (or links |
to them) at regular intervals, has since been abandoned, so the project |
is once again open to a sincere and motivated volunteer. |

We are interested in offering any technical support necessary to get these articles updated and automatically posted again at regular intervals. This would include establishing contact with the original maintainers for any necessary permissions. We would prefer to seek new, dedicated maintainers at this time, rather than start auto-posting the

Liberty Net: December 1, 2012

http://3950.net/2012/12/liberty-net-december-1-2012/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

NOVEMBER 2012 was the biggest month ever for downloads and streaming of the Liberty Net from this site. Listeners from every continent except Antarctica logged over 50,000 hours of listening time! As our usage ramps up, so do costs. Please consider donating by clicking the ï¿½Donateï¿½ button in the right column of this page.

Here are just a few of the topics covered during this weekï¿½s net:

ï¿½ Thereï¿½s no rational reason why amateur radio operators should have to tolerate broadcast interference between 3.9 and 4 MHz and between 7.2 and 7.3 MHz. Huge swathes of HF spectrum ï¿½ even some already allocated to broadcasters ï¿½ is virtually empty and unused, and the broadcasters should go there. (7 minutes)

ï¿½ When you have an illegal, evil government ï¿½ one which does practically nothing except harmful, immoral things ï¿½ gridlock is a good thing. (11 minutes)

ï¿½ Why should American taxpayers, huge numbers of whom have no pension at all, have to bail out the Bï¿½nai Bï¿½rith pension plan? (12 minutes)

ï¿½ The particular ethnic group that has made endless billions through fraud and fractional reserve banking is now moving away from the urban areas their multiracial policies have helped to destroy, and is buying properties in still-American enclaves like rural Wisconsin and New England. As they do so, their money buys the local governments and brings corruption, degeneration, and ruin. (49 minutes)

ï¿½ The dull often claim that votes for third parties and independent candidates are ï¿½wasted votes.ï¿½ But the only truly wasted votes are those for either of the two major parties. (1 hour 35 minutes)

ï¿½ The illegitimate regime in Washington is building huge data storage facilities around the country. The purpose? According to a whistleblower at the NSA, to illegally store the illegally obtained electronic communications of every American citizen, all of which are now being intercepted. (1 hour 56 minutes)

ï¿½ Since the dumbing down of the electorate, and the importation of alien peon labor, make the ballot box a dead end for us, the only way to regain our freedom lies in massive civil disobedience. (2 hours 3 minutes)

ï¿½ The big hug and kiss that Romney gave Obama after the election symbolize perfectly the illegitimate and illegal System that must be removed from power. (2 hours 5 minutes)

Remember that you can receive the Liberty Net on an open frequency around ï¿½ usually well above ï¿½ 3950 kHz every Saturday night at 10PM Eastern Time. You can also listen live on the Internet or listen at your leisure via the mp3 files posted right here at http://3950.net every week.

The complete net recording is posted at the very top of the right column (under ï¿½Liberty Net Audioï¿½) here on http://3950.net ï¿½ usually on the Sunday immediately following the net, so look for it there if youï¿½d like to listen or download after the net has signed off. The new articles and summaries (like this one, found in the center column) show up around a week later.

Once again, thanks to W1WCR and all participants for making this extraordinary net possible ï¿½ and please check in!

Yeah, that evil government with their evil FDA and FAA.

How dare they try and protect us from counterfeit airplane parts and quack and counterfeit medicines. The nerve!

Oh, and don't forget the PBGC that makes good on our pensions when the vulture capitalists buy out companies and gut the pension funds, leaving the workers high and dry. Get rid of that evil PBGC and let my pension be zero cents on the dollar rather than the 50 cents on the dollar the evil PBGC gives.

You'd be surprised, but you'll get little argument from me on those particular points. The main problem is that this government is owned and controlled by the banks -- by the vulture capitalists and the "family" that comprises them -- and I'd like to change that. Don't be deceived by the pathetic bones that the left wing of the Bankers' Party throws to you.

With all good wishes,

Highlights of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
03 - 09 December 2012

Solar activity reached low levels this week with a total of four C-class events, the largest of which was a C3 event at 2121 UTC that came from region 1621 (N16,L=19, clas/area Axx/10 on 07 December.
This region appeared on 24 November as an Alpha class region and slowly grew in size (to 130 mil), becoming a Beta class region which it maintained for 8 days. The region began to decay and produced the C-class event after it crossed the western limb on 07 December.

No proton events were observed at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit was at normal levels all week.

Geomagnetic field activity was quiet all week. Solar wind speed measured 260 km/s - 350 km/s on average with a peak of 459 km/s on 04 December due to the arrival of a coronal hole high speed stream.
The maximum southward component of Bz reached -10.9 nT at 04/0440
UTC, the total IMF reached 13.0 nT at 03/1958 UTC. There were no
CMEs with a significant earthward component during this week.

Forecast of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
10 December - 05 January 2013

Solar activity is expected to be at low levels with a chance of isolated M-class flares through the entire forecast period (10 December 2012 - 05 January 2013).

No proton events are expected at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit is expected to be at normal levels except during 14-21 December following the onset of a coronal hole high speed stream on 14 December and sustained by another stream which is expected to become geoeffective on 15 December.

Geomagnetic field activity is expected to be at quiet levels for the majority of the forecast period. An isolated period of unsettled levels is expected on 17 December with elevated ambient background solar wind speeds and again on 29 December associated with a recurrent solar sector boundary crossing.

This preview should whet everyone's apetite for tomorrow night's epoisode. With this much advance notice, everyone will have plenty of time to stock up on popcorn and their favorite beverage in time to tune in and enjoy the entire evening's event.

This week the Great Liberty Nit-Wit-Net will open with ...

Liberty Net: December 8, 2012

http://3950.net/2012/12/liberty-net-december-8-2012/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

IT REQUIRED two frequencies ï¿½ 3978 kHz to start (because Radio Franceï¿½s DRM is now wiping out 10 kHz of spectrum centered on 3965) and 3983 later in the night to avoid Vatican Radioï¿½s Latin transmission on 3975 ï¿½ but the latest Liberty Net session was a forum as engaging and mind-opening as the best college class youï¿½ve ever attended.

Here are just a few of the concepts put forth and debated this week:

ï¿½ Making every business a funding source for the huge turkey that our health care system has become will kill innumerable small businesses ï¿½ they simply wonï¿½t be able to hire people as they have in the past. Highly profitable mega-corporations will benefit from eliminating the competition, though. (10 minutes)

ï¿½ Why should we all lose our Second Amendment rights just because certain people and groups with low IQs and poor impulse control canï¿½t be trusted with guns? Better to keep the rights ï¿½ and cut ourselves loose from the irresponsible individuals and groups. (17 minutes)

ï¿½ The only thing ï¿½backingï¿½ the dollar now is confidence ï¿½ confidence in the integrity and probity of the regime and the bankers who own it. Confidence in these shysters and fraudsters is unwarranted, of course ï¿½ but the word ï¿½confidenceï¿½, as in ï¿½con manï¿½ and ï¿½confidence gameï¿½ ï¿½ is perfectly apt. (41 minutes)

ï¿½ Now that we have indebted ourselves, not only to the bankers, but to the Chinese, expect more and more of our businesses and gigantic tracts of irreplaceable productive land to fall into the hands of our implacable enemies. The Chinese must laugh heartily when they think of the plastic junk ï¿½ most of it already in landfills ï¿½ for which we traded our precious birthright. (46 minutes)

ï¿½ In the last four years alone, the illegal Washington regime has placed us in $5,600 billion worth of debt bondage. Time to get rid of the debt ï¿½ and the regime. (54 minutes)

ï¿½ The US cities with the most draconian ï¿½gun controlï¿½ laws are the cities with the highest murder and violent crime rates. (1 hour 9 minutes)

ï¿½ Any law or agency which is in contradiction to the constitution is illegal, void, and of no effect. Therefore virtually all of the so-called ï¿½federal governmentï¿½ as it exists today is nothing more than gangs of violent outlaws operating under color of law ï¿½ gangs which should be brought to heel. (1 hour 14 minutes)

ï¿½ Now we are told that the Syrian government has ï¿½weapons of mass destruction,ï¿½ and of course we must start killing Syrians to ï¿½stop them.ï¿½ When, oh when, are the stupid American sheep going to stop falling for the Zionist warmongersï¿½ lies? (1 hour 25 minutes)

Remember that you can find ï¿½ and check in to ï¿½ the Liberty Net on a clear frequency around 3950-4000 kHz LSB every Saturday night at 10PM Eastern Time, or you can listen live on the Internet at the ï¿½Liberty Net liveï¿½ links in the left column of this site ï¿½ or listen at your leisure via the mp3 files posted here at http://3950.net every week.

IT REQUIRED two frequencies ï¿½ 3978 kHz to start (because Radio Franceï¿½s DRM is now wiping out 10 kHz of spectrum centered on 3965) and 3983 later in the night to avoid Vatican Radioï¿½s Latin transmission on 3975 ï¿½ but the latest Liberty Net session was a forum as engaging and mind-opening as the best college class youï¿½ve ever attended.

Highlights of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
10 - 16 December 2012

Solar activity was low. The largest flare of the period came from Region 1629 (N11, L=240, class/area=Dai/170 on 14 December), a C5/Sf 12/0727Z. Region 1630 (N19, L=253, class/area=Cai/90 on 11 December), also produced a C5 flare on 10/0558Z. The remainder of the period was dominated by infrequent, low-level C-class activity.
No earth-directed coronal mass ejections were observed during the week.

A 10 MeV proton enhancement at geosynchronous orbit was observed on 14-15 December. 10 MeV particle flux was slightly elevated beginning around 14/0900Z. An eruption from the beyond the west limb, in the southern hemisphere, was visible in STEREO-A EUVI imagery beginning around 14/1200Z. 10 MeV flux began climbing more steeply around 14/2245Z, reaching a peak of 9.36 pfu at 15/0155Z, just below the S1 threshold of 10 pfu. Flux returned to normal levels over the course of the next two days.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit was at normal levels throughout the week.

Geomagnetic field activity quiet all week. Solar wind speed at the ACE spacecraft ranged from around 270 km/s to the near 470 km/s while Bz was never less than -8 nT. A very weak shock was observed at the ACE spacecraft at 14/1852Z, and at GOES by 14/1946Z. Isolated unsettled to minor storm levels were subsequently observed at high latitudes mid-day on 15 and 16 December.

Forecast of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
17 December - 12 January 2013

Solar activity is expected to be low with a slight chance for moderate activity through the forecast period.

No proton events are expected at geosynchronous orbit.
```

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit is expected to be at background levels except during 19-21 December when a high speed stream is expected to bring the flux to high levels.

Geomagnetic field activity is expected to begin the forecast period at unsettled levels with a slight chance for an active period on 17-18 December as a recurrent coronal hole high speed stream becomes geoeffective. The remainder of the forecast period is expected to be generally quiet barring any geoeffective coronal mass ejections.

WWCR, so-called "Worldwide Christian radio", is owned by jewish homosexuals. Don't be deceived by these slime bags. The company that owns WWCR calls itself (for some reason) "F.W. Robberts Broadcasting Co. Inc.". They are located at 2730 Loumor Ave., Metairie, LA, 70001. Their phone number is (504) 831-6941, and Fax (504) 832-4039. The company is owned by Fred P. Westenberger (jew), Chris P. Westenberger (jew), Fritz N. Westenberger (jewish homosexual), and a couple other Westenbergers.

Now just why on earth would a bunch of jewish homosexuals run a supposedly CHRISTIAN radio station? Do you many Christians that run jewish or homosexual radio stations?

Here's a NY Times article about the very nice house that Fritz N. Westenberger and his "partner" Patrick live in. They often entertain many of their jewish homosexual "friends" at this house:

http://www.nytimes.com/2011/07/29/realestate/house-tour-olive-ny.html?_r=0

This very nice home was built with the money that you sent to WWCR to buy the shyster jew products they sell on that station, for example products sold by the Jew named Alex Jones. The jewish homosexuals who run WWCR really promote Alex Jones a lot. I wonder why?

The entire purpose of WWCR is to push Israeli disinformation to cover up the criminal activity of the jewish crime network. That is Alex Jones' sole purpose for existing and being promoted by other jewish homosexual media outlets, such as Disney/ABC, etc.)

DO NOT SPEND ONE PENNY OF MONEY ON THE SHYSTER FREEMASON JEW CRAP PRODUCTS THESE HUCKSTER CRIMINALS ARE PEDDLING.
Understand that the sole reason these jews run a supposedly Christian station is TO DECEIVE YOU, about the crimes being committed by jews, such as the 9-11 attacks, that were the work of Israel, and to GATHER INFORMATION, ADDRESSES AND PHONE NUMBERS OF PEOPLE WHO ARE AWARE OF AND OBJECT TO THE JEWISH CRIME NETWORK.

Spread the word: WWCR is owned by jewish homosexuals. Boycott them, and bankrupt every single shyster that broadcasts on that station, and let's get jewish homosexual criminal trash OUT OF NORTH AMERICA AND EUROPE, BY ANY MEANS NECESSARY.

You are a Nazi.

As a Nazi, you are, above all else, a craven coward.

You are afraid to compete with others as equals because you know you can not measure up.

You are afraid of your own inadequacy, so you want to murder your betters.

You are afraid of the truth, so you want to murder those who would tell it.

You are afraid of history, so you want to murder the past, to wipe out the knowledge of the degeneracy, cowardice and failure of National Socialism.

Finally, you are afraid of the power of educated, informed adults.
Freedom of choice terrifies you... which is why you choose minor children as sexual partners. You can not interact with competent adults in a consensually sexual way. You need to be able to impose yourself on a helpless victim, be it a prepubescent boy, or a patient in a mental hospital.

That is what you are, a Nazi, and there is nothing polite or honest about it.

The Constitution of the United States: A Transcription

Note: The following text is a transcription of the Constitution in its original form.
Items that are hyperlinked have since been amended or superseded.

We the People of the United States, in Order to form a more perfect Union, establish Justice, insure domestic Tranquility, provide for the common defence, promote the general Welfare, and secure the Blessings of Liberty to ourselves and our Posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America.

Article. I.

Section. 1.

All legislative Powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress of the United States, which shall consist of a Senate and House of Representatives.

Section. 2.

The House of Representatives shall be composed of Members chosen every second Year by the People of the several States, and the Electors in each State shall have the Qualifications requisite for Electors of the most numerous Branch of the State Legislature.

No Person shall be a Representative who shall not have attained to the Age of twenty five Years, and been seven Years a Citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an Inhabitant of that State in which he shall be chosen.

Representatives and direct Taxes shall be apportioned among the several States which may be included within this Union, according to their respective Numbers, which shall be determined by adding to the whole Number of free Persons, including those bound to Service for a Term of Years, and excluding Indians not taxed, three fifths of all other Persons. The actual Enumeration shall be made within three Years after the first Meeting of the Congress of the United States, and within every subsequent Term of ten Years, in such Manner as they shall by Law direct. The Number of Representatives shall not exceed one for every thirty Thousand, but each State shall have at Least one Representative; and until such enumeration shall be made, the State of New Hampshire shall be entitled to chuse three, Massachusetts eight, Rhode-Island and Providence Plantations one, Connecticut five, New-York six, New Jersey four, Pennsylvania eight, Delaware one, Maryland six, Virginia ten, North Carolina five, South Carolina five, and Georgia three.

When vacancies happen in the Representation from any State, the Executive Authority thereof shall issue Writs of Election to fill such Vacancies.

The House of Representatives shall chuse their Speaker and other Officers; and shall have the sole Power of Impeachment.

Section. 3.

The Senate of the United States shall be composed of two Senators from each State, chosen by the Legislature thereof for six Years; and each Senator shall have one Vote.

Immediately after they shall be assembled in Consequence of the first Election, they shall be divided as equally as may be into three Classes. The Seats of the Senators of the first Class shall be vacated at the Expiration of the second Year, of the second Class at the Expiration of the fourth Year, and of the third Class at the Expiration of the sixth Year, so that one third may be chosen every second Year; and if Vacancies happen by Resignation, or otherwise, during the Recess of the Legislature of any State, the Executive thereof may make temporary Appointments until the next Meeting of the Legislature, which shall then fill such Vacancies.

No Person shall be a Senator who shall not have attained to the Age of thirty Years, and been nine Years a Citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an Inhabitant of that State for which he shall be chosen.

The Vice President of the United States shall be President of the Senate, but shall have no Vote, unless they be equally divided.

The Senate shall chuse their other Officers, and also a President pro tempore, in the Absence of the Vice President, or when he shall exercise the Office of President of the United States.

The Senate shall have the sole Power to try all Impeachments. When sitting for that Purpose, they shall be on Oath or Affirmation. When the President of the United States is tried, the Chief Justice shall preside: And no Person shall be convicted without the Concurrence of two thirds of the Members present.

Judgment in Cases of Impeachment shall not extend further than to removal from Office, and disqualification to hold and enjoy any Office of honor, Trust or Profit under the United States: but the Party convicted shall nevertheless be liable and subject to Indictment, Trial, Judgment and Punishment, according to Law.

Section. 4.

The Times, Places and Manner of holding Elections for Senators and Representatives, shall be prescribed in each State by the Legislature thereof; but the Congress may at any time by Law make or alter such Regulations, except as to the Places of chusing Senators.

The Congress shall assemble at least once in every Year, and such Meeting shall be on the first Monday in December, unless they shall by Law appoint a different Day.

Section. 5.

Each House shall be the Judge of the Elections, Returns and Qualifications of its own Members, and a Majority of each shall constitute a Quorum to do Business; but a smaller Number may adjourn from day to day, and may be authorized to compel the Attendance of absent Members, in such Manner, and under such Penalties as each House may provide.

Each House may determine the Rules of its Proceedings, punish its Members for disorderly Behaviour, and, with the Concurrence of two thirds, expel a Member.

Each House shall keep a Journal of its Proceedings, and from time to time publish the same, excepting such Parts as may in their Judgment require Secrecy; and the Yeas and Nays of the Members of either House on any question shall, at the Desire of one fifth of those Present, be entered on the Journal.

Neither House, during the Session of Congress, shall, without the Consent of the other, adjourn for more than three days, nor to any other Place than that in which the two Houses shall be sitting.

Section. 6.

The Senators and Representatives shall receive a Compensation for their Services, to be ascertained by Law, and paid out of the Treasury of the United States. They shall in all Cases, except Treason, Felony and Breach of the Peace, be privileged from Arrest during their Attendance at the Session of their respective Houses, and in going to and returning from the same; and for any Speech or Debate in either House, they shall not be questioned in any other Place.

No Senator or Representative shall, during the Time for which he was elected, be appointed to any civil Office under the Authority of the United States, which shall have been created, or the Emoluments whereof shall have been encreased during such time; and no Person holding any Office under the United States, shall be a Member of either House during his Continuance in Office.

Section. 7.

All Bills for raising Revenue shall originate in the House of Representatives; but the Senate may propose or concur with Amendments as on other Bills.

Every Bill which shall have passed the House of Representatives and the Senate, shall, before it become a Law, be presented to the President of the United States: If he approve he shall sign it, but if not he shall return it, with his Objections to that House in which it shall have originated, who shall enter the Objections at large on their Journal, and proceed to reconsider it. If after such Reconsideration two thirds of that House shall agree to pass the Bill, it shall be sent, together with the Objections, to the other House, by which it shall likewise be reconsidered, and if approved by two thirds of that House, it shall become a Law. But in all such Cases the Votes of both Houses shall be determined by yeas and Nays, and the Names of the Persons voting for and against the Bill shall be entered on the Journal of each House respectively. If any Bill shall not be returned by the President within ten Days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the Same shall be a Law, in like Manner as if he had signed it, unless the Congress by their Adjournment prevent its Return, in which Case it shall not be a Law.

Every Order, Resolution, or Vote to which the Concurrence of the Senate and House of Representatives may be necessary (except on a question of Adjournment) shall be presented to the President of the United States; and before the Same shall take Effect, shall be approved by him, or being disapproved by him, shall be repassed by two thirds of the Senate and House of Representatives, according to the Rules and Limitations prescribed in the Case of a Bill.

Section. 8.

The Congress shall have Power To lay and collect Taxes, Duties, Imposts and Excises, to pay the Debts and provide for the common Defence and general Welfare of the United States; but all Duties, Imposts and Excises shall be uniform throughout the United States;

To borrow Money on the credit of the United States;

To regulate Commerce with foreign Nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian Tribes;

To establish an uniform Rule of Naturalization, and uniform Laws on the subject of Bankruptcies throughout the United States;

To coin Money, regulate the Value thereof, and of foreign Coin, and fix the Standard of Weights and Measures;

To provide for the Punishment of counterfeiting the Securities and current Coin of the United States;

To establish Post Offices and post Roads;

To promote the Progress of Science and useful Arts, by securing for limited Times to Authors and Inventors the exclusive Right to their respective Writings and Discoveries;

To constitute Tribunals inferior to the supreme Court;

To define and punish Piracies and Felonies committed on the high Seas, and Offences against the Law of Nations;

To declare War, grant Letters of Marque and Reprisal, and make Rules concerning Captures on Land and Water;

To raise and support Armies, but no Appropriation of Money to that Use shall be for a longer Term than two Years;

To provide and maintain a Navy;

To make Rules for the Government and Regulation of the land and naval Forces;

To provide for calling forth the Militia to execute the Laws of the Union, suppress Insurrections and repel Invasions;

To provide for organizing, arming, and disciplining, the Militia, and for governing such Part of them as may be employed in the Service of the United States, reserving to the States respectively, the Appointment of the Officers, and the Authority of training the Militia according to the discipline prescribed by Congress;

To exercise exclusive Legislation in all Cases whatsoever, over such District (not exceeding ten Miles square) as may, by Cession of particular States, and the Acceptance of Congress, become the Seat of the Government of the United States, and to exercise like Authority over all Places purchased by the Consent of the Legislature of the State in which the Same shall be, for the Erection of Forts, Magazines, Arsenals, dock-Yards, and other needful Buildings;--And

To make all Laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into Execution the foregoing Powers, and all other Powers vested by this Constitution in the Government of the United States, or in any Department or Officer thereof.

Section. 9.

The Migration or Importation of such Persons as any of the States now existing shall think proper to admit, shall not be prohibited by the Congress prior to the Year one thousand eight hundred and eight, but a Tax or duty may be imposed on such Importation, not exceeding ten dollars for each Person.

No Bill of Attainder or ex post facto Law shall be passed.

No Capitation, or other direct, Tax shall be laid, unless in Proportion to the Census or enumeration herein before directed to be taken.

No Tax or Duty shall be laid on Articles exported from any State.

No Preference shall be given by any Regulation of Commerce or Revenue to the Ports of one State over those of another; nor shall Vessels bound to, or from, one State, be obliged to enter, clear, or pay Duties in another.

No Money shall be drawn from the Treasury, but in Consequence of Appropriations made by Law; and a regular Statement and Account of the Receipts and Expenditures of all public Money shall be published from time to time.

No Title of Nobility shall be granted by the United States: And no Person holding any Office of Profit or Trust under them, shall, without the Consent of the Congress, accept of any present, Emolument, Office, or Title, of any kind whatever, from any King, Prince, or foreign State.

Section. 10.

No State shall enter into any Treaty, Alliance, or Confederation; grant Letters of Marque and Reprisal; coin Money; emit Bills of Credit; make any Thing but gold and silver Coin a Tender in Payment of Debts; pass any Bill of Attainder, ex post facto Law, or Law impairing the Obligation of Contracts, or grant any Title of Nobility.

No State shall, without the Consent of the Congress, lay any Imposts or Duties on Imports or Exports, except what may be absolutely necessary for executing it's inspection Laws: and the net Produce of all Duties and Imposts, laid by any State on Imports or Exports, shall be for the Use of the Treasury of the United States; and all such Laws shall be subject to the Revision and Controul of the Congress.

No State shall, without the Consent of Congress, lay any Duty of Tonnage, keep Troops, or Ships of War in time of Peace, enter into any Agreement or Compact with another State, or with a foreign Power, or engage in War, unless actually invaded, or in such imminent Danger as will not admit of delay.

Article. II.

Section. 1.

The executive Power shall be vested in a President of the United States of America. He shall hold his Office during the Term of four Years, and, together with the Vice President, chosen for the same Term, be elected, as follows:

Each State shall appoint, in such Manner as the Legislature thereof may direct, a Number of Electors, equal to the whole Number of Senators and Representatives to which the State may be entitled in the Congress: but no Senator or Representative, or Person holding an Office of Trust or Profit under the United States, shall be appointed an Elector.

The Electors shall meet in their respective States, and vote by Ballot for two Persons, of whom one at least shall not be an Inhabitant of the same State with themselves. And they shall make a List of all the Persons voted for, and of the Number of Votes for each; which List they shall sign and certify, and transmit sealed to the Seat of the Government of the United States, directed to the President of the Senate. The President of the Senate shall, in the Presence of the Senate and House of Representatives, open all the Certificates, and the Votes shall then be counted. The Person having the greatest Number of Votes shall be the President, if such Number be a Majority of the whole Number of Electors appointed; and if there be more than one who have such Majority, and have an equal Number of Votes, then the House of Representatives shall immediately chuse by Ballot one of them for President; and if no Person have a Majority, then from the five highest on the List the said House shall in like Manner chuse the President. But in chusing the President, the Votes shall be taken by States, the Representation from each State having one Vote; A quorum for this purpose shall consist of a Member or Members from two thirds of the States, and a Majority of all the States shall be necessary to a Choice. In every Case, after the Choice of the President, the Person having the greatest Number of Votes of the Electors shall be the Vice President. But if there should remain two or more who have equal Votes, the Senate shall chuse from them by Ballot the Vice President.

The Congress may determine the Time of chusing the Electors, and the Day on which they shall give their Votes; which Day shall be the same throughout the United States.

No Person except a natural born Citizen, or a Citizen of the United States, at the time of the Adoption of this Constitution, shall be eligible to the Office of President; neither shall any Person be eligible to that Office who shall not have attained to the Age of thirty five Years, and been fourteen Years a Resident within the United States.

In Case of the Removal of the President from Office, or of his Death, Resignation, or Inability to discharge the Powers and Duties of the said Office, the Same shall devolve on the Vice President, and the Congress may by Law provide for the Case of Removal, Death, Resignation or Inability, both of the President and Vice President, declaring what Officer shall then act as President, and such Officer shall act accordingly, until the Disability be removed, or a President shall be elected.

The President shall, at stated Times, receive for his Services, a Compensation, which shall neither be increased nor diminished during the Period for which he shall have been elected, and he shall not receive within that Period any other Emolument from the United States, or any of them.

Before he enter on the Execution of his Office, he shall take the following Oath or Affirmation:--"I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will faithfully execute the Office of President of the United States, and will to the best of my Ability, preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States."

Section. 2.

The President shall be Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy of the United States, and of the Militia of the several States, when called into the actual Service of the United States; he may require the Opinion, in writing, of the principal Officer in each of the executive Departments, upon any Subject relating to the Duties of their respective Offices, and he shall have Power to grant Reprieves and Pardons for Offences against the United States, except in Cases of Impeachment.

He shall have Power, by and with the Advice and Consent of the Senate, to make Treaties, provided two thirds of the Senators present concur; and he shall nominate, and by and with the Advice and Consent of the Senate, shall appoint Ambassadors, other public Ministers and Consuls, Judges of the supreme Court, and all other Officers of the United States, whose Appointments are not herein otherwise provided for, and which shall be established by Law: but the Congress may by Law vest the Appointment of such inferior Officers, as they think proper, in the President alone, in the Courts of Law, or in the Heads of Departments.

The President shall have Power to fill up all Vacancies that may happen during the Recess of the Senate, by granting Commissions which shall expire at the End of their next Session.

Section. 3.

He shall from time to time give to the Congress Information of the State of the Union, and recommend to their Consideration such Measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient; he may, on extraordinary Occasions, convene both Houses, or either of them, and in Case of Disagreement between them, with Respect to the Time of Adjournment, he may adjourn them to such Time as he shall think proper; he shall receive Ambassadors and other public Ministers; he shall take Care that the Laws be faithfully executed, and shall Commission all the Officers of the United States.

Section. 4.

The President, Vice President and all civil Officers of the United States, shall be removed from Office on Impeachment for, and Conviction of, Treason, Bribery, or other high Crimes and Misdemeanors.

Article III.

Section. 1.

The judicial Power of the United States shall be vested in one supreme Court, and in such inferior Courts as the Congress may from time to time ordain and establish. The Judges, both of the supreme and inferior Courts, shall hold their Offices during good Behaviour, and shall, at stated Times, receive for their Services a Compensation, which shall not be diminished during their Continuance in Office.

Section. 2.

The judicial Power shall extend to all Cases, in Law and Equity, arising under this Constitution, the Laws of the United States, and Treaties made, or which shall be made, under their Authority;--to all Cases affecting Ambassadors, other public Ministers and Consuls;--to all Cases of admiralty and maritime Jurisdiction;--to Controversies to which the United States shall be a Party;--to Controversies between two or more States;-- between a State and Citizens of another State,--between Citizens of different States,--between Citizens of the same State claiming Lands under Grants of different States, and between a State, or the Citizens thereof, and foreign States, Citizens or Subjects.

In all Cases affecting Ambassadors, other public Ministers and Consuls, and those in which a State shall be Party, the supreme Court shall have original Jurisdiction. In all the other Cases before mentioned, the supreme Court shall have appellate Jurisdiction, both as to Law and Fact, with such Exceptions, and under such Regulations as the Congress shall make.

The Trial of all Crimes, except in Cases of Impeachment, shall be by Jury; and such Trial shall be held in the State where the said Crimes shall have been committed; but when not committed within any State, the Trial shall be at such Place or Places as the Congress may by Law have directed.

Section. 3.

Treason against the United States, shall consist only in levying War against them, or in adhering to their Enemies, giving them Aid and Comfort. No Person shall be convicted of Treason unless on the Testimony of two Witnesses to the same overt Act, or on Confession in open Court.

The Congress shall have Power to declare the Punishment of Treason, but no Attainder of Treason shall work Corruption of Blood, or Forfeiture except during the Life of the Person attainted.

Article. IV.

Section. 1.

Full Faith and Credit shall be given in each State to the public Acts, Records, and judicial Proceedings of every other State. And the Congress may by general Laws prescribe the Manner in which such Acts, Records and Proceedings shall be proved, and the Effect thereof.

Section. 2.

The Citizens of each State shall be entitled to all Privileges and Immunities of Citizens in the several States.

A Person charged in any State with Treason, Felony, or other Crime, who shall flee from Justice, and be found in another State, shall on Demand of the executive Authority of the State from which he fled, be delivered up, to be removed to the State having Jurisdiction of the Crime.

No Person held to Service or Labour in one State, under the Laws thereof, escaping into another, shall, in Consequence of any Law or Regulation therein, be discharged from such Service or Labour, but shall be delivered up on Claim of the Party to whom such Service or Labour may be due.

Section. 3.

New States may be admitted by the Congress into this Union; but no new State shall be formed or erected within the Jurisdiction of any other State; nor any State be formed by the Junction of two or more States, or Parts of States, without the Consent of the Legislatures of the States concerned as well as of the Congress.

The Congress shall have Power to dispose of and make all needful Rules and Regulations respecting the Territory or other Property belonging to the United States; and nothing in this Constitution shall be so construed as to Prejudice any Claims of the United States, or of any particular State.

Section. 4.

The United States shall guarantee to every State in this Union a Republican Form of Government, and shall protect each of them against Invasion; and on Application of the Legislature, or of the Executive (when the Legislature cannot be convened), against domestic Violence.

Article. V.

The Congress, whenever two thirds of both Houses shall deem it necessary, shall propose Amendments to this Constitution, or, on the Application of the Legislatures of two thirds of the several States, shall call a Convention for proposing Amendments, which, in either Case, shall be valid to all Intents and Purposes, as Part of this Constitution, when ratified by the Legislatures of three fourths of the several States, or by Conventions in three fourths thereof, as the one or the other Mode of Ratification may be proposed by the Congress; Provided that no Amendment which may be made prior to the Year One thousand eight hundred and eight shall in any Manner affect the first and fourth Clauses in the Ninth Section of the first Article; and that no State, without its Consent, shall be deprived of its equal Suffrage in the Senate.

Article. VI.

Would You Pay 300 Bucks For A Radio?

Generally speaking, radios that support shortwave as well will have better FM reception (than AM/FM only radios) and radios that support longwave as well will have better AM reception. Look to Sangean, Tecsun and Degen for very decent analogue radios.

Mike [Nefesh here :-)] There is nothing wrong with one race or culture of people thinking they are superior to all others. That is only natural. Where the Nazi's made their biggest mistake was persecuting the Jews to the point of exterminating us and seeking to destroy us completely from the face of the earth. That the Nazi's would have embraced the Jews and sought to ally with the Jewish people and not made war on their neighbors then they could have addressed the homosexuals by giving them a choice of leaving Germany or be put to death and the Nazis might have done better but they were wicked and Hitler played on that wickedness to exploit the beaten spirit of the Germans after WWI. In the end HaShem destroyed them through the allies.

I think we both agree that much of the strife in the modern world is due to F. Delano Roosevelt's demands for unconditional surrender of Axis powers during WWII. His desire for satisfaction prolonged the war unnecessarily and fueled German propaganda, in direct opposition to his stated goals. How can your archives serve to rectify this shortcoming that each of us faces in the new world?

My opponents call me an antisemite.

I do not hate you anymore than I hate the heathen. In fact, I look to you with greater respect than that because you are halfway to life. You only need to accept the gospel and then you will be fulfilled.

I prefer to think of myself as a semite-teaser. One who taunts you because you do not keep up, like the taunting of Private Gomer Pyle in Full Metal Jacket. I keep communication civil and do not use hateful slurs.

Of course some of you will hate me more for this. For I cannot be classified easily as one of your enemies and this makes you grunt and grumble because you have your recipe for retaliation of the day, which changes from day to day like pop music.

Look to me as a friend who has your best interests at heart. I will not kick you or beat you, yet I will debate with you until you accept Jesus Christ as your Lord and Savior.

You are a nithing- homo sapiens by birth, subhuman BY CHOICE. The key word is CHOICE. You were born with the same human nature as the rest of us. Your CHOICES made you a nithing.

Bill explains what nithings are.

http://www.israpundit.com/2008/?p=9446

Define and Dehumanize the Enemy: Jihadists as Nithings or Nidings

by Bill Levinson
It is an ancient principle of magic (which modern people recognize as stories that reflect a society's culture and psychology) that knowledge of a person's real or True Name delivers power over that person. What it really means is that, if you know the person's psychology, you can gain an advantage over him. It is also well known that the side that controls the language of an argument controls the argument. As an example, Hamas terrorists and their enablers refer to Israel's military as an "occupation force" and terrorisitic violence against civilians as "resistance."

We have long sought a single word that strips the enemy of all humanity, and reduces him to something less than an animal that is worthy of nothing less than extermination. As far as we know, the English language contains no such word, although "dreck" (garbage or refuse) comes close. "Homo sapiens by BIRTH, subhuman by CHOICE" describes Islamic supremacists perfectly, but it is a phrase and not a word. We now propose to refer to Islamic supremacists as nithings or nidings: a Scandinavian word that strips its object of all humanity. Webster's dictionary (1913) defines it as "A coward; a dastard; — a term of utmost opprobrium."

We remind readers who object to the dehumanization of Islamic supremacists that those enemies are already attempting to dehumanize Jews, and to a lesser degree Christians, with images that could have come directly from Adolf Hitler. As they have chosen to sow the dragon's teeth, our position is that they must now reap their rightful harvest: the complete hatred and loathing of all civilized human beings.
nithings

Nithing or niding was more than a common insult, because Scandinavian culture required its subject to fight a duel with the accuser or become an outlaw: totally devoid of rights, honor, and even recognition as a human being. Per the Wikipedia entry,

The actual meaning of the adjective argr or ragr [= Anglo-Saxon earg] was the nature or appearance of effeminacy, especially by obscene acts. Argr was the worst, most derogatory swearword of all known to the Norse language. According to Icelandic law, the accused was expected to kill the accuser at once. …If the accused did not retort by violent attack yielding either the accuser to take his words back or the accuser's death, he was hence proven to be a weak and cowardly nithing by not retorting accordingly.

A nithing was devoid of all human rights, and he was considered the enemy of civilized humanity: a perfect depiction of Islamic supremacists. The word therefore strips the enemy of all humanity, and degrades him to the status of a wolf or strangler (per Scandinavian tradition) or a virulent disease like the Black Plague. Black Plague is a deadly and contagious disease whose vector consists of plague-carrying rats, while the Green Plague of militant "Islam" is a deadly and contagious ideology that is spread by bipedal rats: nidings or nithings, non-humans that raise violent hands to all of civilized Humanity.

The immediate consequence of being proven a nithing was outlawing. The outlawed did not have any rights, he was exlex (Latin for "outside of the legal system"), in Anglo-Saxon utlah, Middle Low German uutlagh, Old Norse utlagr. Just as feud yielded enmity among kinships, outlawry yielded enmity of all humanity.[63] …"Yet that is but one aspect of outlawry. The outlaw is not only expelled from the kinship, he is also regarded henceforth as an enemy to mankind."

The actual definition of a nithing is somewhat more involved and complex, and it gets into sexual perversions and zoomorphical transformations (Loki's transformation of himself into a mare to have sexual intercourse with a stallion, and thus beget Odin's horse Sleipner is probably an example), but the following line is pertinent: "The nithing used its malicious seid magic to destroy anything owned and made by man, ultimately the human race and Midgard itself[6], due to its basically unlimited envy, hate, and malice that were nith."

"Destruction of everything owned and made by Man" (the Palestinians' destruction of the greenhouses in Gaza comes to mind immediately) and "unlimited envy, hate, and malice" describe militant "Islam" perfectly, and further underscore the application of nithing or niding to describe it. The propensity for mindless destruction also appears in Orson Scott Card's Alvin Maker series, in which a supernatural enemy is known as the Unmaker: a personification of evil that is the total antithesis of God the Creator.

The Unmaker is the main antagonist in Orson Scott Card's alternate history/fantasy series The Tales of Alvin Maker. Never directly confronted, it is a supernatural force that breaks apart matter and aims to destroy and consume everything and everyone. …To make something is to oppose the Unmaker, but a point often made is that this is futile. By natural law the Unmaker can tear down faster than any man can build.

This also is an outstanding definition of militant "Islam" or Islamic supremacy: an ideology that seeks to destroy everything into which it comes in contact, and with which no reason, negotiation, or compromise is possible.

In summary, a nithing or niding is the enemy of Civilization, a subhuman (through its behavioral choices, and emphatically NOT due to its racial or ethnic origin) monster with total hatred and malice toward all human industry and arts, and worthy of nothing but extermination like any virulent disease. This is the word we will now apply to Islamic supremacists and their enablers, and we encourage others to do likewise.

You are asking me, what would Hitler have accepted besides the worst possible outcome? Is it really just because of a misunderstanding of English that the world suffers today?

Have you ever heard the Grateful Dead lyric, "A friend of the devil is a friend of mine?" It has to do with accepting the enemy of an enemy as a friend, or perhaps at least an accomplice.

Michael JONES often congratulates Anders Breivik for massacring people in Norway. His reason for supporting Breivik is that he said that all of the people eliminated were Islamic Sleepers. What these are are people who are secretly followers of Islam, being trained to subvertly infiltrate Christian and Jewish society in order to destroy them.

You condemn Jihadists (Islamic Supremacists) as "nithings," supposedly the worst thing there is.

Then you call Michael JONES a nithing. Michael JONES calls you a satanic nazi.

So, you hate Michael JONES, Michael JONES hates you, and both of you hate Islamic Supremacists.

Since you have something in common, can't you find a way to get along?

I sense doubt that the resolution of WWII caused the world to suffer.
What happened there was like a mother saying to her child, "Stop crying or I will spank you some more." This was the new world policy. I am not a parent, so I cannot say for certain whether this tactic works or not, but it seems counter-intuitive to me.

Here's Tom with the numbers on whether any countries have died out since
'45. We will blame them all on this policy.

Doomsday didn't 'get us'. Someday in the future, perhaps a big enough Meteorite will end all of our worries. The Confederacy (War of Northern Aggression) never surrendered. Mankinds history ever since Humans have been on Earth has, and always will be about War, Wars, never ending Wars.

And you don't say anything at all.

I said:

"Germany would have accepted anything other than unconditional surrender, because unconditional surrender is the worst thing known to man. It means putting oneself at the mercy of thine enemies. Enemies who tormented and tortured Germany after WWI. No goodwill expected."

You said:

"..."

Is this a new debate strategy that I have not encountered before? The "silence as an opposition?" It seems kind of weak, but lets see how it bears out. For one, I am in total lack of surprise when there is no response to this message. Didn't you ever learn that surprise is the key ingredient to meaningful discourse?

It's because you are a stupid idiot and are not familiar with my debate style. For me, getting to the facts is more important than being right. You humans get on top of a side or position and ride it all the way to oblivion, never wavering and never changing, even when the facts completely obliterate your argument. I, on the other hand, do not mind playing Devil's Advocate. It is apparent in this discussion that by suppressing viewpoints, such as any support at all for any Axis power, you have laid yourself bare to anyone supporting them. You have no antibodies to fight such an assault because you allow no one to speak of it, and suppress it even though it is free speech, because it makes you grumpy and unhappy that there might be an enemy position.

So, wave your hands, and condemn the Axis as everything that is totally gruesomely evil and inhuman, and slowly but surely, in your inability to consider grey areas, they creep up and suffocate you in your comfortable little bed where you are happy like a clam and innocent in every way.

It is one thing to take the position of the Devil's Advocate, and entirely something else to hold a postion based primarily on evil. I believe you are occupying the latter territory. You speak of antibodies as if they are translatable from human biology to thought but they are not. This alone marks you as a force of irrationality and non-thought.

Yeah, whatever. Your use of colorful language does not suffice to disguise your lack of thought.

I have German ancestry. I would like to think that this does not make me an unholy beast fit only for hard labor and slaughter in my uncleanliness. You call me evil, but are you not the one who is quite often in hysteria, caught up in paranoid delusion? I have been condemned for playing Devil's Advocate in the past and it has cost me at least one friend. However, I prefer to speak the salient points of the opposition so that they can be struck down, rather than to keep them unspoken and bothering; known but never resolved. Who are you to say that antibodies can not translate to human thought? I am more of a biologist than you are if history serves an example. As far as I can tell you are a gruff-whiskered survivalist, with a house full of hard cram rations and rum tankards filled with water instead of alcohol. You are ready for the apocalypse, because that is what you do, being ready for the apocalypse. How much does such a profession earn you?

Colorful language usually refers to the use of expletives. Are you running a smear campaign against me? You are evil and reprehensible. I bet you crawled up into your house along a tunnel straight out of hell. How many fellow demons are you in collaboration with? Does your pact of sinister evil have imps and hags in it? You are in cahoots with the worst this world has to offer and you are all after me.

Wuppertal, Germany. The birthplace of the World's first overhead Trolley. The birthplace of Bayer aspirin. The birthplace of communism. My little couch buddy Australian Cattle Dog Blue Heealer doggy, http://www.cattledog.com http://www.acda.org on the fifteenth day of each month I squirt a little bitty tube of Bayer Advantage II (it says on the box, Made in Germany) on the top of her back. That stuff is expensive too, so are the Heartguard tablets I give her on the first day of each month.

Liberty Net: December 15, 2012

http://3950.net/2012/12/liberty-net-december-15-2012/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

MARTY, N2IRJ, remains off the air in the aftermath of Hurricane Sandy, and an injury and other setbacks have impaired his ability to restore his damaged station. Recovery is progressing, albeit slowly, and his transmitter and computer are now functioning, though pain prevents Marty from regularly checking his email. Antenna repairs are still to be made. Marty sends his thanks to those who have written him. Your kindness will always be remembered.

Here are just a few of the ideas presented this week for discussion on the Liberty Net:

ï¿½ When shootings ï¿½ just as fatal as the one in Connecticut ï¿½ take place in Chicago, as they do hundreds of times every year, it hardly makes the news. And there is plenty of draconian ï¿½gun controlï¿½ in Chicago. (7 minutes)

ï¿½ What is the matter with the mental functioning of the American people who, when confronted with an emotion-laden tragedy like the recent school killings, think that the solution is yet another law? Hint: Murder is already illegal. (8 minutes)

ï¿½ Is the legalization of marijuana a means of further lowering the IQ of the American people? Will marijuana use actually increase if the laws against it are repealed? Is legalization a welcome first step to ending the ï¿½drug warï¿½ power structure of the Washington regime? (31 minutes)

ï¿½ If the ordinary personnel in our schools were permitted and encouraged to wear sidearms, the tragedy in Connecticut would most likely never have occurred. (37 minutes)

ï¿½ In the totally evil 90-percent-White, pre-media-saturation, pre-psychiatric-drug America of 50 years ago, thousands of children brought guns openly to school to participate in sporting or target-shooting clubs, left them in their lockers, and nothing untoward happened. (40 minutes)

ï¿½ It is estimated that the Communist Chinese have bought over seven billion dollars worth of US real estate in recent years. And thatï¿½s just the beginning. (1 hour 1 minute)

ï¿½ The ï¿½fiscal cliffï¿½ is just a meme used by both the Republican and Democrat branches of the Washington regime to scare us into giving them more power. The truth is that we went over the fiscal cliff many, many decades ago when we gave the bankers ï¿½ and the ethnic power structure to which most of them belong ï¿½ absolute power over us. (1 hour 11 minutes)

ï¿½ Where do susceptible people get the idea of making human beings a target for killing? The ï¿½gun cultureï¿½ of gun stores, sport, home protection, and target ranges? Or from violent movies, television programs, and ï¿½first person shooterï¿½ games? (1 hour 27 minutes)

Remember that you can find ï¿½ and check in to ï¿½ the Liberty Net on a clear frequency around 3950-4000 kHz LSB every Saturday night at 10PM Eastern Time, or you can listen live on the Internet at the ï¿½Liberty Net liveï¿½ links in the left column of this site ï¿½ or listen at your leisure via the mp3 files posted here at http://3950.net every week.

Thanks to W1WCR for running the Liberty Net, and thanks to all of you for checking in and making the net what it is today!

No, that is your perception of the actuality. It is a fact that there has been a great deal of hatemongering and such directed at my person.
It is denied (as you might expect) because the behavior is indefensible and the moral standing driving it is repugnant.
Nevertheless there is a mindset that covets the "secret sin" and values the breach of civics and law in itself as a privilage.
Accompanying this is a meme imputing freedom to mean freedom from law or restraint, which these morons have assumed gives them a sense of power.

"Are you running a smear campaign against me?"

You really are a moron with no meaningful reason for being.

I can personally attest to this. As a 13 year old I sometimes took my 20 gauge shotgun to school when pheasant hunting was planned for after school. Didn't ask permission from anyone, just did it and no one even looked askance at me. The gun wasn't even placed in a locker out of sight. It leaned against the wall in the community cloak room with a full box of shells next to it undisturbed the entire day.

The Chinese are buying huge swaths of land in Africa as well. This is very sad to behold because the Africans, who are relatively naive, don't stand a chance against the cunning and guile of the unethical Asian supremacists.

I suspected soc.culture.jewish would contain mostly opposition to my point. Since my points are so salient, I am looking for an argument rather than swift approval like I might find in rec.rational.debate. As for the time, I had just watched the fourth episode of Star Wars: Clone Commandos. The bad guy is apprehended attempting to flee the city and he asks them "what are the terms of my surrender?" They say, dripping with smugness, "unconditional." The bad guy goes, "Uh, okay."

I thought it would have made a better ending if instead he said, "Never!" and detonated a nuclear weapon inside his briefcase and the apprehenders who survived (up in space around the planet) had to fill out the worst paperwork ever.

No you cannot. I am the most annoying creature on Earth. The average human gets no response to 1 out of 10 questions and statements. I get no response to 6 out of every 10 questions and statements which is a solid indication of this fact.

Weekly Highlights and Forecasts
#
Highlights of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
17 - 23 December 2012

Solar activity was low. Only C1/Sf level flares were observed.
Region 1633 (S07, L=111, class/area=Eki/340 on 17 December) was the most productive, with eight C1 flares to its credit. Six of these occurred in the last two days of the week. While it was the largest region on the disk at the beginning of the week, it ended tied with Region 1635 (N09, L=64, class/area=Ehi/250 on 21 December) with an area of 200 microhemispheres. Both Regins 1633 and 1635 ended the period with beta-gamma magnetic configurations. No earth-directed CMEs were observed.

No proton events were observed at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit was at background levels all week.

Geomagnetic field activity was at predominantly quiet levels all week. There were two exceptions. A positive polarity, southern hemisphere recurrent coronal hole high speed stream brought unsettled conditions and the only active period of the week on 17 December. At high latitudes, a single major storm period was observed. Later in the week, another positive polarity coronal hole high speed stream, this time in the northern hemisphere, brought a single unsettled period on 20 December. Activity reached minor storm levels at high latitudes. During both high speed streams, solar wind speed reached the low 500 km/s range while the southward component of the interplanetary magnetic field dipped to approximately -6 nT.

Forecast of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
24 December - 19 January 2013

Solar activity is expected to be at predominantly low levels during the forecast period, with a slight chance for an M-class event.

No proton events are expected at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit is expected to be at background levels throughout the period.

Geomagnetic field activity is expected to be at predominantly quiet levels with the exception of 29-30 December and 13 January when recurrent coronal hole high speed streams are expected to bring unsettled conditions.

Local TV weather people say possible tornados, two to three inches of rain, damaging winds, large hail. I bookmarked the National Weather Radar Mosaic thingy. I have to be at my sister and brother in law's home at 12:00 today for the Christmas thingy. I don't like to get out in bad weather, but a tornado could hit my house or theirs. I might as well go over there.

I think Christmas came in August, when I found that TMC GPR-90 at a garage sale, for only $20.00.

It was a slow garage sale day, not many out, but I go down this one street and two doors away I see the receiver, it's facing my way. I know it has to be a shortwave receiver of that vintage, but only closer can I see the model. No price on it, I figured it would be expensive, but since I've not seen anything like that before at garage sales, I ask the price.

Suddenly in recent years I've seen shortwave receivers at garage and rummage sales, but they've all been solid state, most recent vintage. I can't say I've seen many tube radios, and certainly not anything like the GPR-90.

I even told them it was probably worth three or four hundred dollars, but they didnt' raise the price. When I got home (I was lucky the bus stop was just a few doors up), in looking for information, I find an add for the same model in the same area of town so it has to be the same receiver, they wanted a hundred dollars in July. Clearly no takers, so they were lucky I came along that day (I even went out late that day for garage sales, planning to do a quick survey and then go somewhere else).

الحمد لله رب العالمين والصلاة والسلام على الأتمان الأكملان علع سيد المرسلين، وبعد:
فإن أصدق الحديث كتاب الله والله ه تابرك وتعالى يقول: {الَّذِينَ آمَنُوا وَلَمْ يَلْبِسُوا إِيمَانَهُمْ بِظُلْمٍ أُولَئِكَ لَهُمُ
الأمن وهم مهتدون} وقد روى الإمام أحمد رضي الله عنه عن طريق عبد الله بن مسعود رضي الله عنه قال: "لما نزلت: الذين آمنوا ولم يلبسوا إيمانهم بظلم شق ذلك على أصحاب رسول الله صلى الله عليه وسلم فقالوا:
يا رسول الله: فأينا لا يظلم نفسه؟ فقال صلى الله عليه وسلم: "إنه ليس الذي تعنون ألم تسمعوا ما قال
العبد الصالح: يا بني لا تشرك بالله إن الشرك لظلم عظيم. إنما هو الشرك"، وفي رواية للبخاري من طريق
عبد الله بن مسعود رضي الله عنه قال: لما نزلت: ولم يلبسوا إيمانهم بظلم، قال الصحابة: وأينا لم يظلم نفسه فنزلت: إن الشرك لظلم عظيم.
أيها القارئ الكريم: إخلاص العبادة لله، وإفراده تبارك وتعالى بالتوحيد مزايا لا تحصى وثمرات لا تستقصي
منها ما يصلح الدنيا ومنها ما يصلح له الآخرة، ولقد أشار الله منها ما يصلح ظاهره ومنها ما يصلح باطن العبد ومنها ما
تبارك وتعالى إلى أن شجرة التوحيد أصلها ثابت وفرعها في السماء تؤتي أكلها كل حين بإذن ربها، فمهما خطر
على بال العبد من عظيم مزاياها وجليل ثمراتها فهي في الحقيقة فوق ذلك، وفي ذلك يقول الله تبارك وتعالى:
{أَلَمْ تَرَ كَيْفَ ضَرَبَ اللَّهُ مَثَلًا كَلِمَةً طَيِّبَةً كَشَجَرَةٍ طَيِّبَةٍ أَصْلُهَا ثَابِتٌ وَفَرْعُهَا فِي السَّمَاءِ تُؤْتِي أُكُلَهَا كُلَّ حِينٍ
بِإِذْنِ رَبِّهَا وَيَضْرِبُ اللَّهُ الْأَمْثَالَ لِلنَّاسِ لَعَلَّهُمْ يَتَذَكَّرُونَ}، فمن ثمرات التوحيد الأمن والاهتداء وقد بشر الله
المؤمنين بذلك إذ يقول: {الَّذِينَ آمَنُوا وَلَمْ يَلْبِسُوا إِيمَانَهُمْ بِظُلْمٍ أُولَئِكَ لَهُمُ الْأَمْنُ وَهُمْ مُهْتَدُونَ} والأمن المشار
إليه من الآية الكريمة يشمل في الحقيقة أمن الدنيا وأمن الآخرة إذ أن من أخلص دينه لله يضفي الله تبارك
وتعالى عليه نعمة الرضى بقضائه ويطمئن قلبه عند نزول الحوادث ويثبت فؤاده عند حلول الكوارث فلا
تزلزله زلازل المرجفين على حد قوله تبارك وتعالى في وصف أصحاب رسول الله صلى الله عليه وسلم:
{الَّذِينَ قَالَ لَهُمُ النَّاسُ إِنَّ النَّاسَ قَدْ جَمَعُوا لَكُمْ فَاخْشَوْهُمْ فَزَادَهُمْ إِيمَانًا وَقَالُوا حَسْبُنَا اللَّهُ وَنِعْمَ الْوَكِيلُ،
فَانْقَلَبُوا بِنِعْمَةٍ مِنَ اللَّهِ وَفَضْلٍ لَمْ يَمْسَسْهُمْ سُوءٌ وَاتَّبَعُوا رِضْوَانَ اللَّهِ وَاللَّهُ ذُو فَضْلٍ عَظِيمٍ، إِنَّمَا ذَلِكُمُ الشَّيْطَانُ يُخَوِّفُ أَوْلِيَاءَهُ فَلَا تَخَافُوهُمْ وَخَافُونِ إِنْ كُنْتُمْ مُؤْمِنِينَ}.
ومن أنواع الأمن الذي يتمتع به الله ه أن التوحيد أن يطمئن قلوبهم عند الموت على أولادهم وأحبابهم فلا يجزعهم
فراق الأحبة بل تتنزل عليهم الملائكة عند الموت يبشرونهم بلقاء الله وبنعيم الجنان ويطمئنونهم على ما
خلفوا وراءهم وفي ذلك يقول الله تبارك وتعالى: {إِنَّ الَّذِينَ قَالُوا رَبُّنَا اللَّهُ ثُمَّ اسْتَقَامُوا تَتَنَزَّلُ عَلَيْهِمُ
الْمَلَائِكَةُ أَلَّا تَخَافُوا وَلَا تَحْزَنُوا وَأَبْشِرُوا بِالْجَنَّةِ الَّتِي كُنْتُمْ تُوعَدُونَ، نَحْنُ أَوْلِيَاؤُكُمْ فِي الْحَيَاةِ الدُّنْيَا وَفِي الْآخِرَةِ وَلَكُمْ فِيهَا مَا تَشْتَهِي أَنْفُسُكُمْ وَلَكُمْ فِيهَا مَا تَدَّعُونَ، نُزُلًا مِنْ غَفُورٍ رَحِيمٍ}.
ومن أنواع الأمن الذي يمنحه الله تبارك وتعالى أهل التوحيد أن يطمئن قلوبهم عند الفزع الأكبر يوم القيامة
وفي ذلك يقول الله تبارك وتعالى متحدثاً المشركين:{إِنَّكُمْ وَمَا تَعْبُدُونَ مِنْ دُونِ اللَّهِ حَصَبُ جَهَنَّمَ أَنْتُمْ لَهَا وَارِدُونَ
لَوْ كَانَ هَؤُلَاءِ آلِهَةً مَا وَرَدُوهَا وَكُلٌّ فِيهَا خَالِدُونَ، لَهُمْ فِيهَا زَفِيرٌ وَهُمْ فِيهَا لَا يَسْمَعُونَ، إِنَّ الَّذِينَ سَبَقَتْ لَهُمْ مِنَّا
الْحُسْنَى أُولَئِكَ عَنْهَا مُبْعَدُونَ، لَا يَسْمَعُونَ حَسِيسَهَا وَهُمْ فِي مَا اشْتَهَتْ أَنْفُسُهُمْ خَالِدُونَ، لَا يَحْزُنُهُمُ الْفَزَعُ الْأَكْبَرُ وَتَتَلَقَّاهُمُ الْمَلَائِكَةُ هَذَا يَوْمُكُمُ الَّذِي كُنْتُمْ تُوعَدُونَ}.
أما الكفر لهأ تامالعلا زربأ نم وه لب نامايلإا لهأ اميس نم سيلف الآخرة في الله عقوبة من الدنيا في الأمن
الذين أمنوا مكر الله بأعدائه وعقوبته لمن خالفه فإن أمره إذ أن الكافر لا يخشون عذاب الله ولا يخافون من عقوبته
ولذلك يستعجلون الساعة استهزاء بها وفي ذلك يقول الله تبارك وتعالى وإلى أصحاب الحال مه : {وَقَالُوا رَبَّنَا عَجِّلْ لَنَا
قِطَّنَا قَبْلَ يَوْمِ الْحِسَابِ} وقال: {اللَّهُ الَّذِي أَنْزَلَ الْكِتَابَ بِالْحَقِّ وَالْمِيزَانَ وَمَا يُدْرِيكَ لَعَلَّ السَّاعَةَ قَرِيبٌ} ثم قال:
{يَسْتَعْجِلُ بِهَا الَّذِينَ لَا يُؤْمِنُونَ بِهَا وَالَّذِينَ آمَنُوا مُشْفِقُونَ مِنْهَا وَيَعْلَمُونَ أَنَّهَا الْحَقُّ أَلَا إِنَّ الَّذِينَ يُمَارُونَ فِي السَّاعَةِ لَفِي ضَلَالٍ بَعِيدٍ}.
أما أهل الإيمان فإنهم يخافون مقامهم بين يدي الجبار ولذلك تمنعهم عن معاصيه ويبتعدون عن أسباب
غضبه، وقد اقتضت حكمة الله تبارك وتعالى أن من أمن عقوبة الله وهو في دار الدنيا أخافه الله في الآخرة ومن
خاف عقوبة الله وهو في دار الدنيا آمنه الله في الآخرة وأورثه الجنة دار النعيم المقيم فلا يجتمع على العبد
خوفان ولا يجتمع له أمنان وإلى ذلك يشير الله تبارك وتعالى إذ يقول:{تَرَى الظَّالِمِينَ مُشْفِقِينَ مِمَّا كَسَبُوا

ُلْضَفْلا َوُه َكِلَذ ْمِهِّبَر َدْنِع َنوُعاَشَي اَمَ ْمُهَل ِتآَنَجْلا ِتاَضْوَر يِف ِتاَحِلاّصلا اوُلِمَعَو اوُنَمآ َنيِذّلاَو ْمِهِّبَر ٌعِقاَوَ وُهَو

الصديق رضي الله عنه أنه قال: آمن مكر ربي ولو كانت إحدى رجلي في الجنة.
ومن ثمرات التوحيد الهداية والتوفيق وسلوك صراط الله المستقيم فكم بشر الله بارك وتعالى أهل التوحيد بالأمن بشره مه ودون وهذا الاهتداء يشمل تسديد الله له وحمايته من كيد الشيطان الفتك بهم وإغوائهم بل يريهم الله بارك وتعالى الحق حقا ويرزقهم اتباعه، ويريهم الباطل باطلا ويرزقهم اجتنابه، وهذه نعمة عظيمة ومنة جسيمة فالسعيد من هداه الله للخير ووفقه إليه وحمله عليه والشقي من خذله الله فلم يعنه ولم يسدده فتراه يتخبط في سلوكه يرى الباطل حقا ويرى الحق باطلا.
يقضي على المرء في أيام محنته حتى يرى حسنا ما ليس بالحسن
ومن حرم التوفيق ضل عن سواء الطريق:
إذا كان عون الله للعبد مستعفا تأتي له من كل شيء مراده
وإن لم يكن عون من الله للفتى فأول ما يقضي عليه اجتهاده
ومن ثمرات التوحيد مغفرة الخطايا وتكفير السيئات فقد وعد الله بارك وتعالى أهل التوحيد الخالص بحط ذنوبهم والتجاوز عن سيئاتهم وأنهم لو جاؤوه يوم القيامة بملء الأرض من الخطايا وقد لقوه من مغفرة خطاياهم ومغفرة ذنوبهم والرحمة الشاملة فقد روى الترمذي بسند حسن من طريق أنس بن مالك خادم رسول الله صلى الله عليه وسلم يقول ورضي الله عنه قال: سمعت رسول الله صلى الله عليه وسلم يقول:"قال الله تعالى: يا ابن آدم: إنك لو لقيتني بقراب الأرض خطايا ثم لقيتني لا تشرك بي شيئا لأتيتك بقرابها مغفرة، وفي رواية مسلم من حديث أبي ذر الغفاري رضي الله عنه عن رسول الله صلى الله عليه في الحديث القدسي: "ومن لقيني بقراب الأرض خطيئة لا يشرك بي شيئا لقيته بقرابها مغفرة".

Y'know there just aren't enough sane, reasonable people to counter the repetitive waves of bullshit that spews from your random number generator. Please jam a red-hot icepick up your nose to correct your malfunction, and save us all the trouble.

Thank you for your consideration of this important matter.

Michael, you tried to tell us that Monsanto was run by Jews. I proved homosexuals. Obsession with homosexuals is almost always caused by repressed homosexuality in the obsesser. But you knew that, didn't you?

I am spending less and less time looking at this newsgroup because of the so-called "shortwave radio - Google News" keyword-driven nonsense from their

Too bad.

How is this post helping? Have you bought a shortwave radio lately? Have you resurrected one? Are there any programs on HFBC you regularly monitor? I like the airplanes over the Pacific.

Blame it on the rec.radio.info moderators who think the whole hierarchy is under their command.

rec.radio.info is a good idea, bulletins and recurring postings like faqs.

But when rec.radio.amateur.moderated came into being, as near as I can tell the same bunch doing rec.radio.info, they decided they were the bosses of the hierarchy. Which is why we get regular postings in the other newsgroups (and here) where they are looking for FAQ keepers, rather than just coming in here and trying to talk to us (actually they did once, tried to crown someone who had little to say but posted way too often).

It's the same group that posts in some of the other newsgroups telling us we can cross-post to the rec.radio.amateur.moderated newsgroup, without asking if we wanted cross-posting.

It's the same group that isn't content with rec.radio.info, so they post the same bulletins and repeated messages to rec.radio.amateur.misc and I think maybe .policy and rec.radio.amateur.moderated. The last is an interesting case because they so badly wanted a moderated newsgroup, yet nobody is really posting there. It's filled with broadcast messages that are going into rec.radio.info. Once in a while someone stumbles in there and posts, and sometimes they get a reply, a handful of the same people answering. And sometimes someone posts a reply to one of the bulletins, which sometimes inturn gets a reply.

The google messages come from those same moderators. They think they can improve things by posting news from elsewhere, yet they never came here to ask us if we wanted those messages.

Anyone can see that shortwave news by setting up the same search at google. And probably see a better selection by picking less broad search terms.

dave, how did you set up your ultra low power system? What would it take to assemble a receive only version of your station?

It's amazing how far a few watts will reach. Any thoughts on the 'software only' equipment?

For receive-only a big horizontal loop and a quiet receiver would be nice for starters. There are quite a few freeware decoding programs, or SDR that use direct conversion radios with quadrature outputs.

Liberty Net: December 22, 2012

http://3950.net/2012/12/liberty-net-december-22-2012/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

AS SNOW ENVELOPS much of North America, travel may be impeded ï¿½ but radio wave propagation is enhanced. This results in some excellent Liberty Net conversations, as this weekï¿½s recording makes clear. Why not check in yourself this week?

Here are just a few of the ideas offered for debate on the net this week:

ï¿½ If teachers were armed in every school ï¿½ which would be far cheaper than hiring more policemen, or buying the useless spy cameras which do little more than show us the carnage after the fact ï¿½ school shooting tragedies would become extremely rare. Of course, such a plan would only work in the civilized communities which are gradually disappearing as Americaï¿½s founding race becomes a minority. (25 minutes)

ï¿½ Why are elitists like Dianne Feinstein ï¿½ who are wealthy enough to hire their own private armed guards ï¿½ the very first to call for working people to be disarmed? (1 hour 2 minutes)

ï¿½ Pay close attention to the sponsor lists and network affiliations of supposedly ï¿½alternativeï¿½ media sources, and youï¿½ll find that many of them are owned and controlled by the same ethnically distinct billionaires that own almost all major media. Rush Limbaugh, for just one egregious example, is fed via ABC/Disney network lines. (1 hour 4 minutes)

ï¿½ America fell off the ï¿½fiscal cliffï¿½ almost exactly 100 years ago. The current brouhaha of the same name is just media hype to soften up the boobs for higher taxes, more slavery, and a total loss of financial freedom and privacy. (1 hour 12 minutes)

ï¿½ If you (or anyone else who isnï¿½t a bank) did what the commercial banks and the ï¿½Federal Reserveï¿½ do, you would be arrested and prosecuted for check kiting, fraud, and theft. (1 hour 17 minutes)

ï¿½ The financial elite (and the worthless underclass, to whom the elite throw a few crumbs to retain their votes) use inflation to steal trillions of dollars from senior citizens and productive working people. There is no reason why the theft could not be ended by making the dollar as stable as the inch or the mile ï¿½ except for the desire of the parasites to keep on stealing. (1 hour 24 minutes)

ï¿½ Why are the bankers allowed to operate their Federal Reserve ï¿½ and control the peopleï¿½s currency and credit ï¿½ in secrecy? Why are they afraid of a public audit? (1 hour 30 minutes)

ï¿½ As the System goes from bankruptcy to deeper bankruptcy, its minionsï¿½ mouths are watering to find some legal pretext to seize private pension funds. (1 hour 38 minutes)

You can find the Liberty Net on 75 meters, almost always somewhere between 3950 and 3999 kHz SSB, every Saturday night at 10PM Eastern Time. Please check in, and also listen and interact live on the Internet every week ï¿½ see the two ï¿½Liberty Net liveï¿½ links in the left column of this site. The full audio files are usually posted to our archive on the Sunday morning following the net ï¿½ youï¿½ll always see the latest file near the top of the right column ï¿½ just click to listen or download.

Thanks to W1WCR for running the Liberty Net for almost four decades!

Or you can do it the easy way and send an e-mail. The current QSL Representative in Trenton is Cpl Charles Raine, charles.raine@forces.gc.ca

I've long advocated the presence of firearms in the schools for precisely the reasons asserted. An armed, committed, trained staff would be able to quickly end the carnage of a school shooting. Possibly before a single innocent was lost.

I also believe in concealed carry and locked and loaded weapons in the home for protection.

That said, the mere presence of a firearm escalates the potential for violence when someone with heinous intent enters a scenario. Firearms are like lawyers: they tend to create a need for one another, with destructive potential that is gargantuan. And, the mere presence of a firearm, without the will to use it, a firearm that is not going to be drawn, or which may be hesitantly fired, actually invites violence before the assault has begun. So, before there is any positive purpose to putting a firearm in the hands of a teacher, there must be the commitment to use it, to use it with intent, and to use it without hesitation in the face of life threatening assault.

Teachers, as a body, are not prepared to make this commitment. Bear in mind, that teachers, and school administrators (both trained by the same entities), are the ones inanely prosecuting students for such trivia as the mere possession of a photograph, drawing, or hastily doodled outline of a firearm. Students have been suspended and expelled for merely pointing a finger in the school in mock handgun motions. Students have been sanctioned for casually talking among themselves about shooting in the contexts of sport, or hunting with their parents. The association with firearms is one of the multiple reasons ROTC organizations are being removed from the schools. And these policies are coming from the very teachers now being suggested we arm for students' protections.

So, the will to use the weapons recommended be put in the hands of teachers, as a body, simply isn't there. There are those, of course, who don't fit this paradigm, but they are few in educational circles. And to have it known a weapon is in the school when shooters enter the building, puts a heightened imperative on the shooters, making them not only prepared to commit mayhem on the innocent, but heightened in their intent to begin firing, fire broadly, and in greater volume, knowing that there is the possibility they may be shot, in return, at anytime.

The unwillingness to fire, to hesitate before dropping the hammer, on the part of the armed but uncommitted teacher, virtually guarantees an increase in casualties.

So, a better strategy is to have armed, trained, and committed security in the building. At multiple points in the building. Persons with the will, and the ability, to face the life changing moment of ending a human being, even in defense of the innocent, and doing it without fatal hesitation.

It is, to be sure, a conundrum. And, yes, the mere presence of armed security is an escalation before the assailants ever enter the building. But, these are armed, trained, and committed personnel. With tactical and stategic abilities to swiftly end a conflict. Possibly before a shot is fired.

Simply arming those whose politics prevent them from taking swift and executive action, guarantees a much more catastrophic result.

Highlights of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
24 - 30 December 2012

Solar activity was low. Region 1635 (N11, L=63, class/area=Dac/270 on 25 December) was the most active region this period, producing twelve C-class flares. The largest of these was a C4/Sf at 1304 UTC on 25 December. Although Region 1635 periodically exhibited beta-gamma magnetic characteristics during its lifetime, it exited the visible disk as a simple spotless plage region. Region 1633 (S07, L=113, class/area=Eai/100 on 24 December) produced a C1 at 2226 UTC on 24 December along with numerous low-level B-class flares throughout the period. Region 1638 (N12, L=310, class/area=Hsx/150 on 29 December) produced a single C1/Sf flare at 1933 UTC on 29 December. A 10 degree filament erupted near N08E20 around 1939 UTC on 27 December. While the bulk of the ejecta from this event was directed north of the ecliptic, a weak impact is expected at earth on 01 January.

No proton events were observed at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit was at normal levels all week.

Geomagnetic field activity was quiet. Solar wind speed at the ACE spacecraft ranged from around 250 km/s to around 350 km/s throughout most of the period. There was a slight increase to about 490 km/s towards the end of the week as the effects from a coronal hole high speed stream (CH HSS) were felt for about a 24 hour period. They have since settled back down to appproximately 400 km/s as the effects of the CH HSS begin to wane. The interplanetary magnetic field total field ranged from around 1 - 8 nT while the Bz component ranged from around +5 nT to -5 nT.

Forecast of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
31 December - 26 January 2013
```

Solar activity is expected to be at low levels with a chance of isolated M-class flares throughout the period (31 December - 26 January).

No proton events are expected at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit is expected to be at background levels throughout the period.

Geomagnetic field activity is expected to be predominately quiet with a chance for unsettled conditions on 01-02, and 10 January with positive polarity coronal hole high speed streams.
